"To his Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army:

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The Congress of the Massachusetts Colony, impressed with every sentiment of gratitude and respect, beg leave to congratulate you on your safe arrival, and to wish you all imaginable happiness and success in the execution of your elevated station.

"While we applaud that attention to the publick good manifested in your appointment, we equally admire that disinterested virtue and distinguished patriotism which alone could call you from those enjoyments of domestick life, which a sublime and manly taste, joined with a most affluent fortune, can afford, to hazard your life, and endure the fatigues of war in the defence of the rights of mankind and the good of your Country.

"The laudable zeal for the common cause of America, and compassion for the distresses of this Colony, exhibited by the great despatch made in your journey hither, fully justify the universal satisfaction we have with pleasure observed on this occasion, and are promising presages that the great expectations formed from your personal character and military abilities, are well founded.

"We wish you may have found such regularity and discipline already established in the Army, as may be agreeable to your expectations. The hurry with which it was necessarily collected, and the many disadvantages arising from a suspension of Government, under which we have raised and endeavoured to regulate the Forces of this Colony, have rendered it a work of time; and though in a great measure effected, the completion of so difficult, and at the same time so necessary a task, is reserved to your Excellency; and we doubt not will be properly considered and attended to.

"We would not presume to prescribe to your Excellency, but supposing you would choose to be informed of the general character of the soldiers who compose the Army, beg leave to represent, that the greatest part of them have not before seen service; and although naturally brave and of good understanding, yet, for want of experience in military life, have but little knowledge of divers things most essential to the preservation of health, and even life. The youth of the Army are not possessed of the absolute necessity of cleanliness in their dress and lodging, continual exercise, and strict temperance, to preserve them from diseases frequently prevailing in camps, especially among those who, from their childhood, have been used to a laborious life.

"We beg leave to assure you that this Congress will, at all times, be ready to attend to such requisitions as you may have occasion to make to us, and to contribute all the aid in our power to the cause of America, and your happiness and ease in the discharge of the duties of your exalted office.

"We most fervently implore Almighty God, that the blessings of Divine Providence may rest on you; that your head may be covered in the day of battle; that every necessary assistance may be afforded; and that you may be long continued in life and health, a blessing to mankind."

His Excellency's Answer.

"GENTLEMEN: Your kind congratulations on my appointment and arrival, demand my warmest acknowledgments, and will ever be retained in grateful remembrance.

"In exchanging the enjoyments of domestick life for the duties of my present honourable but arduous station, I only emulate the virtue and publick spirit of the whole Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, which, with a firmness and patriotism without example in modern history, have sacrificed all the comforts of social and political life, in support of the rights of mankind and the welfare of our common Country. My highest ambition is to be the happy instrument of vindicating those rights, and to see this devoted Province again restored to peace, liberty, and safety.

"The short space of time which has elapsed since my arrival, does not permit me to decide upon the state of the Army. The course of human affairs forbids an expectation that troops formed under such circumstances, should at once possess the order, regularity, and discipline of veterans. Whatever deficiencies there may be, will, I doubt not, soon be made up by the activity and zeal of the officers, and the docility and obedience of the men. These qualities, united with their native bravery and spirit, will afford a happy presage of success, and put a final period to those distresses which now overwhelm this once happy country.

"I most sincerely thank you, gentlemen, for your declaration of readiness at all times to assist me in the discharge of the duties of my station; they are so complicated and extended, that I shall need the assistance of every good man and lover of his Country. I therefore repose the utmost confidence in your aids.

"In return for your affectionate wishes to myself, permit me to say that I earnestly implore that Divine Being, in whose hands are all human events, to make you and your constituents as distinguished in publick and private happiness, as you have been by Ministerial oppression and private and publick distress. GEORGE WASHINGTON."

"To the Honourable CHARLES LEE, Esq., Major-General of the Continental Army:

"SIR: The Congress of the Massachusetts Colony, possessed of the fullest evidence of your attachment to the rights of mankind, and regard to the distresses which America in general, and this Colony in particular, are involved, by the impolitick, wicked, and tyrannick system adopted by Administration, and pursued with relentless and savage fury, do with pleasure embrace this opportunity to express the great satisfaction and gratitude they feel on your appointment as a Major-General in the American Army. We sincerely congratulate you on your safe arrival here, and wish you all possible happiness and success in the execution of so important a trust.

"We admire and respect the character of a man who, disregarding the allurements of profit and distinction his merit might procure, engages in the cause of mankind, in defence of the injured, and relief of the oppressed. From your character, from your great abilities and military experience, united with those of the Commander-in-Chief, under the smiles of Providence, we flatter ourselves with the prospect of discipline and order, success and victory.

"Be assured, Sir, that it will give us great pleasure to be able to contribute to your happiness. May the favours and blessings of Heaven attend you. May Divine Providence guard and protect you, conduct you in the paths of honour and virtue, grant you the reward of the brave and virtuous here, the applauses of mankind, and the approbation of your own conscience, and eternal happiness hereafter."

His Honour's Answer.

"To the Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress of the MASSACHUSETTS:

"GENTLEMEN: Nothing can be so flattering to me as the good opinion and approbation of the Delegates of a free and uncorrupt people. I was educated in the highest reverence for the rights of mankind, and have acquired, by a long acquaintance, a most particular regard for the people of America.

"You may depend, therefore, gentlemen, on my zeal and integrity. I can promise you nothing from my abilities. God Almighty grant us success equal to the righteousness of the cause.

"I thank you, gentlemen, for an address which does me so much honour, and shall labour to deserve it."

Ordered, That the Committee for procuring and furnishing a house for Generals Washington and Lee, be directed to purchase what things are necessary that they cannot hire.

Ordered, That Mr. Goodwin and Colonel Richmond be added to the Committee last mentioned.

Ordered, That the last-mentioned Committee be directed to procure some refreshments for the Generals Washington and Lee.

Mr. Langdon, agreeable to order, brought in the following Resolve; which was accepted, viz:

Resolved, That there be paid out of the publick Treasury of this Colony, to Mr. Paul Revere, or order, the sum of fifty Pounds, in full for procuring and engraving four Plates and printing 14,500 impressions of Colony Notes; and the Receiver-General is hereby directed to pay the same sum accordingly.

"To the Honourable Provincial Congress, now sitting at WATERTOWN:

"The Petition of JOSEPH BARRELL, late of BOSTON, humbly sheweth:

"That in the fire in Boston, which began in the soldiers' Barracks on the evening of the 17th of May last,* his store, together with his effects, to a very considerable amount, were consumed.

"Your petitioner humbly apprehends that this loss is entirely owing to the present unhappy times, occasioned by the cruel oppression of the British Administration; as, at the general desire of the friends of the Country, he removed with his family from Boston, that scene of distress, and by the chicanery of General Gage, was prevented from carrying his effects with him, as he, with his distressed townsmen, were shamefully deceived by the fairest promises of a speedy removal, with their effects, without molestation, until the end of the capitulation on the side of the General was fully answered; and then they were insulted by the most cruel perversion of that comprehensive plain English word, effects, confining it to a few trifles, which, when suffered to depart, were clogged with such restrictions as will forever disgrace him. But notwithstanding all this, still your petitioner had been safe, in all probability, had not the General, by an order as extraordinary as new, secured from the inhabitants the fire-engines, and given the use of them to his Troops, whereby, as your petitioner is informed, it was a very considerable time before they were in use at all, and then conducted with such consummate ignorance as to be of no service, in which time the flames raged to that degree that no human help could prevent them. And your petitioner is further informed, that some of his effects saved from the fire by his friends, were afterwards destroyed by the savage order of the Officers of the Army.

"Whereupon, your petitioner humbly hopes that his case, together with the case of his fellow-sufferers, may, by this honourable Congress, be represented to the Grand Continental Congress, that they, in their great wisdom, may take

* The following is an account of the late fire which begun in the Barrack, under the arch formerly improved by Benjamin and Edward Davis, about half past eight o'clock of the evening of the 17th of May. The soldiers were receiving some cartridges, by which means one took fire and communicated to many more, which immediately set fire to the room. List of Stores burned:

John Hancock, store and shed; Thomas Fayerweather, do.; Benjamin Andrews, 2 do., one of his was improved by B. and W. Foster; Edward Gray, 1 do., Town Dock, south side; Joseph Barrell, 1 do.; John Head, 1 do.; Jonathan Williams, 1 do., with 50 barrels of flour, (donation); Kylson and Barton, 1 do.; Andrew Black, 1 do.; Nathaniel Carey, 1 do. and shed; Alexander Hill, 1 do. and shed; James Russell, Impost Office; John Soley, 1 store; John Spatzer, 1 do., 3 do., at the end of Town Dock; 6 stores and a cooper's shop, owned by Eliakim Hutchinson, joining the Town Dock, improved as barracks; 1 store between, formerly improved by Mr. Elias Thomas, sail-maker; 2 stores leading down to the Barracks, improved by Grant and Webster and William Blair; Thomas Brattle's shed hawled down to stop the fire; 1 store opposite Swing Bridge, owned by Thomas Fayerweather, and are the next to Mr. Hancock's not burned; 1 store, improved by Ellis Gray, which makes the corner joining to Mr. Hancock's not burned. The stores on the Town Dock were chiefly owned by those gentlemen who kept them.

such measures as to them shall seem fit to alleviate their sufferings; and that what is thus destroyed in the general cause, may not fall so very heavy on any individual. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

"JOSEPH BARRELL."

The Letter of Mr. Alexander Shepard, Junior, to the Committee of Safety, was read, and is as follows, viz:

"July 2, 1775.

"To Mr. EDWARD DURANT, one of the Committee of Safety, CAMBRIDGE:

"SIR: I was engaged by His Majesty's Surveyor-General to make out an accurate draught of the late Province in Maine, and return the same to him in New-Jersey as soon as finished; which plan I completed in March last, and should have sent it to him, and beyond doubt have received his return before this day. But realizing the distress into which my country is involved, by the gigantic strides of a (worse than Nero) tyrant, feared that I might, perhaps inadvertently, render service by my draught to the enemies of mankind, delayed my transmitting the same as at first proposed. But if it should be thought that giving it up would not be attended with any ill consequences, I shall be extremely glad to be permitted, as thereby I may be put into possession of what perhaps I may never recover hereafter.

"Sir, as you are one of the Committee of Safety, in whose department it is to determine, I beg you, at some time when the leisure of the honourable Committee will admit, to move for a consideration of the premises, which, Sir, is a matter of weight with, Sir, your very humble and most obedient servant,

ALEX. SHEPARD, Jun."

"N. B. The purport is to know the Committee's mind, whether he shall send the old original draught of Holland, and his, said Shepard's draught, to said Holland, (who is a tory,) or whether he shall not. Said Holland is a Counsellor of Quebeck, but now resident in the Jerseys."

[The Committee of Safety desired me to report, that they think it not prudent to send forward the papers; but think the affair so important as to deserve to be laid before Congress.

E. DURANT.]

"GENTLEMEN: Some time since you desired me to make a return of proper persons for field-officers for the Regiment of Artillery. Accordingly, after mature consideration, I made a return, which I thought if complied with would be the most likely means to serve the country in the best manner. But I find, gentlemen, my judgment in these matters is of little weight with you; it seems not necessary to consult me in it. Though I must have the trouble of teaching every one under me the knowledge necessary for the service, you have been pleased to revise the plan I gave you; that, no doubt, you have a right to do. But be assured, gentlemen, if I must have no judgment, and am not to be consulted in these matters, but must have persons transposed and imposed upon me without consulting me, I am determined I will withdraw myself from the Army, and will have nothing farther to do with it.

"I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

Whereas, his Excellency General Washington has signified to this Congress his desire that the Bridge over Charles River, in Cambridge, should be made a Draw-Bridge, and that the Congress would see to the doing of it immediately; therefore,

Resolved, That Captain Thatcher, Mr. Whittemore, Mr. Temple, Mr. Cross, and Captain Parker, be a Committee to procure materials, and employ a suitable number of artificers for accomplishing the aforementioned business, agreeable to the direction of his Excellency General Washington, the same to be done at the immediate expense of this Colony, and that the Committee render to this Congress, or some future House of Representatives, their account of said expense.

Resolved, That three o'clock in the afternoon be assigned for the choice of some person to serve on the Committee of Supplies, in the room of Mr. Partridge, who, at his request, has been excused, and that in such choice the Members of the Congress may have liberty to vote for any person who may not belong to the Congress.

The Committee appointed to consider of the Donations for the Poor of Boston, reported. The Report was re-committed.

A Petition of Jonathan Brewer was read, and committed to Deacon Stickney, Doctor Taylor, and Col. Spaulding. The Petition is as follows, viz:

"Cambridge, July 4, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: Whereas, a number of men that enlisted in different Companies in my Regiment have, through the low artifice and cunning of several recruiting officers of different Regiments, re-enlisted into other Companies, being over-persuaded by such arguments as, that Colonel Brewer would not be commissioned, and that if they did not immediately join some other Regiment, they would be turned out of the service; others were tempted with a promise to have a dollar each to drink the recruiting officer's health; others by intoxication of strong liquor; by which means a considerable number have deserted my Regiment, as will be made to appear by the returns therefrom, as also the different Companies and Regiments they are re-enlisted into. In consequence of which my Regiment is, to the detriment of the service, considerably weakened; therefore your petitioner humbly prays that the honourable Congress will take this matter into consideration, and either order the re-enlisted men to the several officers they first enlisted under, or be pleased to direct to some method of filling up the Regiment, as the honourable Congress in their wisdom may see fit. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JONATHAN BREWER.

"To the Honourable Congress."

Ordered, That Dr. Taylor, Mr. Lothrop, and Mr. Jewett, be a Committee to distribute the Pamphlets which contain the Depositions relative to the battle of Lexington.

Ordered, That Colonel Glover be of the Committee for stationing the Soldiers in the County of Essex, in the room of Mr. Gerry, excused.

The Committee appointed to examine the Accounts of the Committee appointed to procure Fire-Arms, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas, Messrs. John Bliss, William Page, Abiel Sadler, and Lemuel Kollock, were appointed by this Congress to collect a number of Fire-Arms for the use of the Colony, and have delivered said Arms to the Committee of Safety at Cambridge, as appears by receipts from said Committee, and have exhibited their accounts for said service, which accounts appear to be reasonable; therefore,

Resolved, That there be paid by the Receiver-General, to the several persons aforesaid, the following sums, viz: to Captain John Bliss, the sum of five Pounds, eleven Shillings; to William Page, six Pounds, seventeen Shillings; to Abiel Sadler, five Pounds, ten Shillings; to Lemuel Kollock, three Pounds, ten Shillings, and eight Pence; being in full of the aforesaid Account.

Ordered, That the list of persons of whom the Arms were procured, be lodged with the Receiver-General.

Ordered, That Mr. Partridge, Colonel Bowers, and Mr. Jewett, be a Committee to consider a Letter from General Ward.

The Committee appointed to consider the Petition of the eighteen Stockbridge Indians, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas, it appears to this Congress, by a Petition from the Stockbridge Indians enlisted in the American Army, that they in their more serious hours, being sensible of their want of prudence in disposing of their money, are desirous that this Congress in their wisdom would devise some method to prevent their getting too much strong drink; and they also request that all their wages that are now due, or shall hereafter be due to them for their services, be paid to Timothy Edwards and Jahleel Woodbridge, Esquires, or to their order; therefore,

Resolved, That Timothy Edwards or Jahleel Woodbridge, Esquires, be, and hereby are empowered to draw the wages of the aforesaid Indians, and deal out the same as they shall find said Indians have need thereof, according to any order or orders of the Congress that have been, or shall hereafter be made for paying all or any part of the wages due to the soldiers, and render an account of their doings to this or some future Congress or House of Representatives, when required; and the Receiver-General is accordingly directed to pay the same to the said Timothy Edwards or Jahleel Woodbridge, Esquires, as aforesaid, and take their receipt therefor; and it is also recommended and enjoined by this Congress, that all persons who sell Spirituous Liquors, be particularly careful not to let said Indians have too much strong drink, as that wholly unfits them for any service.

The Committee appointed to consider a Letter of Mr. Alexander Shepard, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

The Committee appointed to take under consideration the Letter from Mr. Shepard, beg leave to report, by way of Resolve, as follows, viz:

Resolved, That it be, and it hereby is recommended to Mr. Alexander Shepard, Jun., that he retain in his hands all the Plans he hath of the Province of Maine, and that he do not suffer them to go out of his possession to any person, upon any consideration, until the further order of this or some future Congress or House of Representatives.

Ordered, That part of the Resolve, relative to the Light-Houses, which empowered the Selectmen and Committees of Correspondence to remove and secure the Lamps and Oil from the Light-House at the entrance of Boston Harbour, be reconsidered, and that Mr. Crane, Captain Holmes, and Deacon Washburn, be a Committee to consider at large on some measures for removing and securing the Lamps and Oil aforesaid.

Ordered, That Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Fox, and Mr. Lothrop, be a Committee to consider a Letter from Mr. James Lyon, dated Machias, June 17, 1775.

The Committee appointed to bring in a Resolve, for the purpose of calling the General Assembly together at any time sooner than the nineteenth instant, if occasion should require, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas, this Congress, pursuant to the recommendation of the General Congress of this Continent, have sent out their Letters to the several Towns in this Colony, desiring that Representatives might be elected, and returned by them, to serve in a great or General Court or Assembly, to be convened, held, and kept for the service of this Colony at Watertown, on the 19th day of July current: And whereas, such unforeseen events may take place between this time and the said 19th day of July, as may render the convening of such General Court or Assembly at Watertown aforesaid, at the time aforesaid, very improper and unsafe; therefore,

Resolved, That Henry Gardner, Esquire, Mr. Gill, Deacon Cheever, Mr. White of Brookline, and Captain Thatcher, be a Committee (in case they or the major part of them should judge it improper or unsafe that such General Assembly should be convened at the said Watertown at the time aforesaid) to agree upon and determine at what other place in this Colony the said General Assembly should be convened; and the said Committee, or the major part of them are hereby fully empowered to determine at what place it shall be most expedient that the said General Assembly should be convened, and to give notice thereof to the several persons who have been, or may be chosen to serve in such Assembly, in such way and manner as they shall judge most expeditious and effectual.

Ordered, That Dr. Church, Colonel Bowers, and Mr. Bayley, be a Committee to confer with General Washington on the subject of furnishing his table, and know what he expects relative thereto, and that they sit forthwith.

Ordered, That the Committee appointed to procure necessary Furniture for the house provided for General Washington, complete the business of their commission, by purchase, or by borrowing.

Ordered, That Mr. Wheeler, Colonel Grout, and Mr.

Durfee, be a Committee to consider a Letter from Mr. James Winthrop. The Letter is as follows, viz :

"Cambridge, July 5, 1775.

"SIR: When the Congress did me the honour to appoint me Postmaster for this Town, I was in hopes it would have enabled me to tarry here. But as the office will not furnish me the single article of victuals, as the establishment is at present, I shall be constrained to quit the place of business, and seek for a subsistence somewhere else. All the money I have received since the oath was administered to me on the 25th of May, amounts to only seven Pounds, seven Shillings, and ten Pence. Fifteen per cent. of it is my pay, for six weeks; that is, at six and a quarter Pence per day, nearly. Judge, then, Sir, whether this be sufficient to furnish one, who has no other support, with a subsistence, or, indeed, whether the office is worth keeping up on this plan; for it is vain that we expect it to grow better, during times of confusion and a suspension of trade. But I will not take up your attention any longer than to observe, that it is with reluctance I quit Cambridge, and that I shall be glad of any opportunity to promote the common cause, as far as shall come within my small sphere of action. Unless the Congress think fit to alter the establishment, I must beg the favour of them to consider this letter as a resignation, and grant an order for paying the money which I have received to the Treasurer, after a deduction of my fifteen per cent., and that the bond may be forthwith delivered up. The letters which remain I shall be ready to deliver to any new Postmaster whom the Congress shall appoint. And remain, with great respect, Sir, your most obedient servant,

JAMES WINTHROP.

"The Honourable James Warren, Esquire, President of the Massachusetts Congress, Watertown."

A Letter from Benj. Greenleaf, Esq., of Newburyport, was read, accompanying sundry Letters brought by Captain Folger from London, a Jacket enclosed to Major Sill, of the Sixty-Third Regiment, also three Maps enclosed to said Major Sill, viz: one of New-England, one of Virginia and Maryland, and one of New-York. Whereupon, Ordered, That the Jacket be committed to the care of the Secretary, till further orders of Congress, and that the Maps be put into the hands of the Committee of Supplies, and they are directed to get them framed, for the use of the Colony.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Letter to General Washington, enclosing a Resolution of Congress relative to the sick and wounded, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz :

In Provincial Congress, July 5, 1775.

This Congress ordered the enclosed Resolution to be prepared, and sent to Generals Ward and Thomas; but by the agreeable event of your Excellency's appointment to the chief command of the American Army, and arrival at camp, the propriety of that step ceases. We mean not to dictate to your Excellency, but presume that to secure the health of the Army, and to afford relief for the sick, will naturally engage your attention. Every thing in the power of this Congress, to enable you to discharge with ease, the duties of your exalted and important station, will be by us attended to with the greatest alacrity. If the enclosed Resolution has that tendency, we attain the end intended by transmitting to you the same; and are, with respect,

Your Excellency's most humble servants.

To General Washington.

Ordered, That Doctor Taylor, Mr. Pitts, and Mr. Lothrop, be a Committee to count and sort the votes for a Member of the Committee of Supplies, in the room of Mr. Partridge.

The Committee having attended that service, reported, that Mr. Lothrop was chosen.

Resolved, That the Resolve, directing the Committee of Supplies to get the three Maps framed, be reconsidered, and that the Secretary be directed to take care of them as they are, for the use of the Colony.

The Report of the Committee appointed to consider how the Soldiers should be provided with Coats, was again read, and accepted, and is as follows, viz :

Resolved, That thirteen thousand Coats be provided, as soon as may be, and one thereof given to each non-commissioned Officer and Soldier in the Massachusetts Forces, agreeable to the Resolve of the Congress, on the 23d day of April last: and in order to facilitate their being procured,

Resolved, That the said thirteen thousand Coats be proportioned immediately on all the Towns and Districts in this Colony, except the Towns of Boston and Charlestown, in proportion as they paid to the last Provincial tax; which Towns and Districts are desired to cause them to be made of good plain cloth, (preference to be given to the manufactures of this Country,) and to be delivered to the Committee of Supplies, without buttons, on or before the first day of October next, and sooner if possible. That for every yard of such cloth of seven-eighths of a yard wide, they shall be allowed and paid the sum of five Shillings and four Pence, and in that proportion for cloth of a greater or less width; and the sum of four Shillings for making each and every coat; and the Selectmen of each Town and District, respectively, are directed to lay their accounts before the Committee of Supplies, who are ordered to draw on the Receiver-General for the payment thereof.

Resolved, That each Coat be faced with the same kind of cloth of which it is made; that the Coats be made in the common plain way, without lappels, short, and with small folds, and that the Selectmen cause a certificate to be sewed to the inside of each Coat, purporting from what Town it came, and by whom the Coat was made, and if the cloth was manufactured in this Country, by whom it was manufactured.

Resolved, That the Committee of Supplies be, and they are hereby directed, immediately, to proportion the Coats on the several Towns and Districts as aforesaid, inform them of their proportion, and assure them that the Coats they supply shall be delivered to the men of their Town respectively, so far as circumstances will admit, and inclose to them a sample of the goodness of the cloth of which the Coats are to be made, with a copy of this and the foregoing Resolves, and to desire those Towns and Districts who cannot supply the whole of their proportion of the Coats as aforesaid, and also those who can supply more than their proportion, to give them information what number they can supply, on, or before the tenth day of August next.

Resolved, That the Committee of Supplies be, and they are hereby directed to provide all the Coats proportioned on such Towns and Districts as give information to them as aforesaid that they cannot supply them, and they are to cause all the Coats to be buttoned with pewter buttons, and that the Coats for each Regiment, respectively, have buttons of the same number stamped on the face of them.

The Committee reported the following Schedule of the apportionment of Coats, which was accepted:*

Resolved, That henceforward the said Resolve ought not to be construed to extend to any estates of such persons, excepting such estates as are left unimproved, and void of any occupant or possessor, and that no other estate of such persons ought to be treated in the manner prescribed in the said Resolve, until they shall be regularly indicted and tried for their supposed offences.

Reflecting with the greatest concern on the miseries of our friends and brethren in the Town and Harbour of Boston, who are now suffering under the cruel hand of tyranny, and can think of no other method to release them than to take into safe custody all the Crown Officers in the United Colonies ; therefore,

Resolved, That it be, and is hereby humbly suggested to the most serious consideration of the honourable Continental Congress now sitting at Philadelphia, whether it would not be proper to seize immediately, and take into custody every Crown Officer in said Colonies, and them safely keep, until our suffering brethren are liberated and fully compensated for their loss and sufferings. All which is humbly submitted.

The Report was recommitted, and the Secretary was added to the Committee, and the Committee directed to report, by way of Letter, and to insert a clause relative to the desire of this Congress that the Continental Congress would adjourn nearer the seat of action.

Ordered, That Mr. Gill, Mr. Pickering, and Mr. Woodbridge, be a Committee to consider a Letter from Mr. John Scollay, relative to the Poor of the Town of Boston. The Letter is as follows, viz :

" Boston, July 8, 1775.

" SIR : His Excellency the Governour having, by Mr. Secretary Flucker, sent a message to the Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor, and Committee of Donations, respecting the removal of the poor, and other inhabitants of the Town of Boston, they attended the same, and after deliberating on the matter, presented to Mr. Secretary their doings thereon, a copy of which is here enclosed, to which his Excellency has been pleased to accede.

" As there has of late been an interruption of the inhabitants, with their effects, passing out of the Town into the Country, perhaps the matter may have dropped with you, and proper accommodations may not have been provided for the reception of any more of the Poor of the Town than have already left it ; and as the state of the inhabitants is really distressing, we shall be glad an immediate attention be given to the above, and that we, as soon as may be, know your resolutions thereon. As many of these poor unhappy people are not in a condition to be removed by land carriage, therefore, we should think, that the place of their destination might be as near water carriage as may be convenient. If it would not be thought assuming, we would beg leave to suggest the Towns of Salem or Marblehead, as proper places for the above purpose.

" His Excellency does expect, that whatever vessels or other carriages may be employed in this business, ample security be given that they shall be safe from any detention, and that they, and the persons that occupy them, be permitted to return without hindrance or molestation.

" I am, in behalf of the Committee, your most humble servant,
JOHN SCOLLAY, Chairman.

" To James Warren, Esquire."

" The Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor, and Committee of Donations, having received a message from his Excellency the Governour, by Mr. Secretary Flucker, respecting the removal of the poor, and other inhabitants of the Town, and attended the same, with all proper deference and respect, beg leave to represent ; that the number of the poor in the Alms-house, amounts to about two hundred, of which they suppose that one hundred and sixty or one hundred and seventy may be removed, for which the Selectmen, Overseers, and Committee aforesaid, will make all proper provision, his Excellency providing boats and carriages for transportation by water or land, as may be thought best, and allowing such quantities of provisions, bedding, clothing, and medicine, as may be necessary and proper. The few unhappy persons that may be unable to be removed, must be left, and are earnestly recommended to his Excellency's well-known humanity.

" As to the poor, and other inhabitants of the Town, who if not already, will soon be reduced to the greatest distress, the Selectmen, Overseers, and Committee apprehend, that by far the greatest part, if not the whole, would immediately remove themselves, with the small assistance they might receive from the Committee of Donations, provided they could obtain his Excellency's permission.

"The Selectmen, Overseers, and Committee, previous to their removal, beg for leave to write to such persons in the country as may be empowered to take care of, and provide for the poor, that these destitute persons may find such assistance and relief as their particular circumstances may require."

Ordered, That the Secretary, Dr. Taylor, and Major Brooks, be a Committee to confer with Mr. John Lane on the difficulties which attend the supplying the Indians at Falmouth, Casco Bay.*

Enoch Freeman, Esquire, be, and hereby are empowered to supply the Indians of the Penobscot Tribe with any quantity of Goods, not exceeding the value of three hundred Pounds, and to draw on the Receiver-General for the same; who is hereby directed to pay such draughts in three months after the date of this Resolve, and to take Furs and Skins of the said Indians in exchange, on the account of this Colony, they to be accountable for their proceedings.

Ordered, That Deacon Cheever be a Committee to bring in a Resolve, empowering the Committee of Supplies to furnish General Washington with such articles of household Furniture as he has wrote to said Committee for.

Afternoon.

Resolved, That the consideration of the allowance proper to be made to Mr. Fowle, for the use of his house by several Committees of this Congress, be referred to the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Letter of Mr. John Scollay, of Boston, reported as follows:

The Committee to whom was referred the Letter from John Scollay, Esquire, in the name of the Selectmen, &c., of Boston, have attended the service assigned them, and are of opinion, that the letter, and paper accompanying the same, be referred to the Committee of Safety of this Colony; and that said Committee, if they see fit, on being satisfied that said poor, and other inhabitants, may leave Boston with such quantities of provisions, bedding, &c., as mentioned in the paper purporting to be an agreement with General Gage, provide such conveyances for transporting into the country such of said poor as are able to bear the same, to be ready at such time and place as may be agreed upon; and that notice be given to Salem, Marblehead, or any other seaports, to receive such of said poor as will not bear being removed otherwise than by water; and that all expenses for removing and supporting said poor be paid by the Colony.

The Report was ordered to lie for further consideration.

The Committee appointed to prepare a list of such Towns as it would be expedient to apply to for Shirts, Breeches, &c., again reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas, there is a very pressing demand for some articles of clothing, more especially of Shirts, Breeches, Stockings, and Shoes, in the Army raised by the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, and there is danger of very mischievous consequences from a delay of supplying the same:

The Committee directed to prepare a Letter to the Continental Congress, reported. The Report was accepted, and is as follows, viz:

In Provincial Congress, Watertown, July 9, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: With hearts deeply affected by the sufferings of our friends in the Town and Harbour of Boston, under the cruel hand of tyrannick power, we think it incumbent on us to take every measure which may tend to their release. To that end we now beg leave humbly to suggest to your Honours, whether it would not be expedient immediately to seize every Crown Officer within the United Colonies, and them in safe custody retain, until this purpose be effected, and full compensation have been made them for the unjust and perfidious treatment they have received from General Gage.

We have only once more to express our wishes, that if the general service will permit, you might adjourn to some convenient place nearer the seat of action, that we might more speedily obtain the aid and advice of the Grand Council of the Continent in these important matters, which, though of general concern, do more immediately affect us.

Letter from General LEE.

"Head-Quarters, July 10, 1775.

"General Lee presents his respects to the President and gentlemen of the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts, and submits to their perusal a letter which he yesterday received from General Burgoyne, in answer to one which was read and approved of by the Delegates of this Province, and other Members of the Continental Congress. He begs leave to receive their commands with respect to the proposed interview. If they approve of it, he shall be glad to accept of it; if they disapprove, he shall reject it. But if they approve of it, he must request that they will depute some one gentleman of their body to accompany General Lee, and be witness of the conversation. He desires their answer immediately, as he has engaged to inform General Burgoyne by four o'clock this afternoon, whether the interview is to take place. He shall likewise be much obliged to the gentlemen if they will return the letter; but if they choose to take a copy of it, he can have no objection.

SIR: The Congress have perused the Letter from General Burgoyne, which you was kind enough to submit to their inspection. They can have no objection to the proposed interview, from a want of the highest confidence in the wisdom, discretion, and integrity of General Lee; but beg leave to suggest, that as the confidence of the people in their General is so essentially necessary to the well-conducting the enterprize in which we are engaged; and as a people contending for their liberties are naturally disposed to jealousy, and not inclined to make the most favourable construction of the motives of conduct which they are not fully acquainted with, whether such an interview might not have a tendency to lessen the influence which the Congress would wish to extend to the utmost of their power to facilitate and succeed the operations of war.

The Congress, agreeable to your request, have, to prevent as far as we are able, any disagreeable consequences which may arise from the jealousy of the people on such an occasion, appointed Mr. Elbridge Gerry to attend you at the proposed interview, if you shall think proper to proceed in it; and as they do not think themselves authorized to counteract the General's inclination, they would submit it to his opinion, whether the advice of the Council of War might not be taken in a matter of such apparent delicacy.

To the Honourable General Lee.

given the information before mentioned: the Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay beg leave to observe to your Honour, whether prudence and good policy do not suggest to detain said ship and cargo, or such part of it as belongs to said Winslow, for the use of the Colonies, rather than to suffer them to fall into the hands of General Gage, where they will be improved to the support of our enemies, and to augment the distress of these Colonies.

SIR: Upon a conference with the other Generals, respecting the Militia, it has been concluded that one thousand men, to be stationed in and about Medford, will be sufficient for the present service.

His Excellency has also directed me to request of the Congress in his name, that they would urge the Committees in the several Towns to forward and promote the new levies as much as possible, and that they would exert themselves to send to the camp such soldiers as have staid beyond their furloughs, or have left the service; and may be returned to their former homes.

I am, Sir, with much respect, your most obedient humble servant,
JOSEPH REED, Secretary.

Ordered, That Jonathan Winship and Jacob Whipple, two of the prisoners, be discharged immediately; that Jacob Davis, another of the prisoners, be sent to the main guard at Cambridge, the Congress having great reason to suspect that he enlisted in, and deserted from the Army raised by this Colony, and that the officers of the guard be certified in writing of what crime the said Jacob now stands charged; that John Freeman, a negro man, said to be the servant of Mr. Joseph Howett, of Newburyport, be sent to the Jail at Cambridge, there to continue till further orders; that the other prisoners, with the said Jacob and John, be committed to Captain Crafts, to be kept under guard until further orders.

SIR: We received yours of the 3d instant, by Mr. William Barber, together with your account of expenses, and a muster-roll of your Company, whilst in the service of this Colony under the command of Colonel Benedict Arnold; but before your account can be passed with propriety, it must be examined and adjusted by indifferent persons. The Committee appointed to devise means for raising a temporary re-enforcement, again reported. The Report was amended, accepted, and is as follows, viz:

IN PROVINCIAL CONGRESS, WATERTOWN, July 12, 1775.

Whereas the great accession of strength to our enemies, by the re-enforcement lately arrived, the extent of the ground we are obliged to defend against them, and the expectation we have of another attack, makes it absolutely necessary for the safety of this Country, that our own Army should be immediately re-enforced in a more expeditious manner than by filling up the Regiments already in the field by recruits in the common way of enlistments; therefore,

Resolved, That there be immediately called from the Militia in the several Counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Hampshire, Plymouth, Worcester, Barnstable, and Bristol, one thousand Men, to serve as a temporary re-enforcement, so long only as the General Assembly of this Colony shall judge the publick safety shall require them, in the following proportion, viz: Suffolk 75; Essex 75; Middlesex 175; Hampshire

175; Plymouth 75; Worcester 225; Barnstable 75; Bristol 125.—One thousand.

Resolved, That there be a Committee appointed to go into each of the aforesaid Counties, and there call together and confer with the commanding officers of the several Regiments, and settle the proportion allotted to each County, that shall be raised from each Regiment, in said County; and determine in what manner they shall be formed into regular Companies, and officered by some of the officers of the standing Militia, having, in settling the proportion, proper regard to the situation of said Regiment; that very few if any men be taken from the sea-coast, or very near it, which is exposed to the ravages of the enemy; and that the Colonel, or commanding officer of each Regiment, immediately use his utmost endeavours to cause his proportion of men, so allotted to them, to be raised and marched into the camp without delay, there to be subject to the orders and directions of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and the rules and regulations thereof, until they shall be discharged by the General, or the Assembly of this Colony.

Resolved, That the Companies consist of fifty men, including one Captain, two Lieutenants, two Sergeants, two Corporals, one Drummer, one Fifer; and that they be paid according to the following establishment, for each month (consisting of thirty days) they shall remain in said service, and so in proportion for a less time than a month, viz: each Captain £6 10s.; each First Lieutenant £4 10s.; each Second Lieutenant £4; each Sergeant £3 5s.; each Corporal £2 19s.; each Drummer and Fifer £2 19s.; each Private £2 14s.

Resolved, That for the future there shall be no distinction between Minute-Men and the Militia in general, and that the Colonels of the several Regiments of Militia have the direction of the whole within the limits of their respective Regiments, as well those formerly inhabitants of some of the seaport Towns, and now residing in the Regiments aforesaid, as the other inhabitants.

Resolved, That the Field-Officers of each Regiment in this Colony return their names, and the Regiment they command, to the Secretary's office of this Colony, as soon as a Secretary shall be appointed.*

Resolved, That the following Letter be sent to the several Towns:

"To the Military Officers, Selectmen, and Committee of Correspondence in the Town of"

"GENTLEMEN: You are hereby most earnestly requested to procure the execution of the subsequent Resolve, with the greatest possible expedition.

"In Provincial Congress, Watertown, July 12, 1775.

"Resolved, That it be, and it is hereby most earnestly recommended to the commanding officer of every Company in the Town of, that they immediately raise and send to the camp at Cambridge able-bodied men,† each provided with a good firelock, ammunition, and blanket; who shall be detained not longer than one month, at furthest, from the beginning of their march, and be paid honourably for their service, all due regard in the pay being had to the difficulty of complying with this requisition in the present urgency of the business of husbandry.

*I have omitted the fragment which was copied on the Journal from an imperfect Report on file, and have inserted in place of it the above Resolutions, which are also on file.—F.

A Letter from General Washington's Secretary, dated nine o'clock, P. M., July 12, 1775, was read, and is as

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 12, 1775, 9 o'clock, P. M.

GENTLEMEN: By some late intelligence from Boston, received this day, of the state and situation of the enemy in and about Boston, his Excellency the General is of opinion that the re-enforcement of Militia proposed to the Congress may be dispensed with at present, without any injury to the publick service. The time of harvest, the expected Troops from the Southward, and the repeated calls which have been made of the like nature from this Province, are strong reasons to postpone this measure, if consistent with safety. And as these advices are so authentick as to deserve confidence, the General hopes his determination will be agreeable to the Congress. You will therefore, Sir, be pleased to communicate this to them, in order that the most early countermand may be given to orders, if already issued, or prevent them if they have not.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

By his Excellency's command:

JOSEPH REED, Secretary.

To the Honourable James Warren, Esq., President of the Honourable Provincial Congress, Watertown.

In case of Mr. Warren's absence, or the dissolution of the Congress, this letter to be opened by the Committee terday, for raising a temporary re-enforcement, be reconsidered.

of Correspondence, and Selectmen in the several Towns, to forward and promote the new levies as much as possible; and that they exert themselves to send to the Camp, immediately, such soldiers as have staid beyond their furlough, or have left the service without being discharged.

A Petition from the Selectmen and Committee of Harps-well was read, and committed to Mr. Johnson, Mr. Perry, and Deacon Baker.

The following Instructions, reported to be given Captain

Captain DAVIS:

SIR: You are hereby desired to repair to Stonington, in Connecticut, and take charge of the Brig Nancy and cargo, lying in said harbour, upon receiving the consent of his Honour Governor Trumbull; to take account of said cargo, and make sale of such part or parts thereof, as shall be sufficient to discharge the portage bill, and such other incidental charges as may necessarily arise. You are then directed to secure the remaining part of said cargo in good and sufficient stores, at the place above mentioned, and to make a return of your doings to this Congress, or

Resolved, That the Resolve passed yesterday, directing the Receiver-General to pay Captain James Noble, or order, the sum of one hundred Pounds, be reconsidered, and that a Resolve be drawn by Captain Stone, directing the said Receiver-General to pay Mr. William Barber the said sum of one hundred Pounds, for the use of Captain Noble.

Resolved, That John Davis, one of the persons taken from Long-Island and brought under guard to this Congress, be remanded to the Commander-in-Chief of the American Forces at Cambridge, being suspected to have deserted from Captain Foster's Company in the Artillery, and engaged in the service of our enemies; that he be delivered, together with a copy of this Resolve, to such officer as the General shall appoint.

Resolved, That John Freeman, (a negro man,) one of the persons taken from Long-Island and brought under

Also, that the said Committee be, and they hereby are invested with full power, until the 30th day of July instant, or until their commission shall be abrogated by the representative body of the inhabitants of this Colony, upon application made to them therefor by the General and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army in this Colony for the time being, or whenever the said Committee, without such application, shall judge the safety of the lives and property of the inhabitants of this Colony, or of any of them, shall absolutely require it, to warn and cause to be assembled such and so many of the Militia thereof as they shall judge necessary, at such place or places within the Colony as they shall judge proper, and such Militia to retain and discharge as to the said Committee shall seem meet. Also, that the said Committee are hereby empowered, during the time last mentioned, to procure and employ for that part of the said Continental Army raised by this Colony all such Armourers and other tradesmen and artificers as they shall suppose and judge to be needed to further and promote the operations of the said Army and them, as also all such tradesmen and artificers as are now retained and employed for that part of the said Army to regulate, arrange, remove, dismiss, and discharge for unskillfulness, unfaithfulness, or whenever the service may not require the further retaining them, or any of them. And the said Committee are hereby desired to be attentive to the behaviour and performances of such tradesmen and artificers as are now or shall be in the service and employ of this Colony in the said Army, that the Colony be not defrauded by unfaithful and incompetent persons. And the said Committee are hereby authorized to execute all the commissions, and perform all the services which have been given them, and to which they have been appointed in and by any special Resolves of this Congress, made and passed at this session, which they have not yet executed and performed. And, furthermore, the said Committee are hereby empowered to make such further provision for the reception, sustenance, and support of the Poor of Boston and Charlestown, as have or may come out of said Towns, as may appear to be necessary for their comfortable subsistence, according to the intention of Congress, taking all imaginable care to guard against the infection of the small-pox by persons coming out of the Town of Boston, and any other means whatever.

And it is hereby Resolved and Ordered, That any five of said Committee, if a majority are not present, be a quorum, with full powers to act in the same manner as if the whole were present; and the whole of said Committee are desired, notwithstanding, to give their punctual and constant attendance on said Committee.

Resolved, That the said Committee be, and they hereby are fully empowered, until the 30th of July instant, or until their commission shall be abrogated by the representative body of the inhabitants of this Colony, to receive, examine, and discharge, or cause to be confined, according to their wisdom, any person or persons taken captive, that may properly come under the cognizance of the representative body of this people, and to receive and duly secure any interests or effects, the conduct whereof is not already provided for, that shall be at the disposal of this Colony. And all the powers with which the Committee of Safety were vested, by the Resolve of the 18th of May last, except such as are contained in the above Resolves, are hereby revoked, and declared null and void.

Afternoon.

Ordered, That Major Fuller of Newton, Col. Farley, Mr. Crane, Captain Stone, and Major Fuller, be a Committee to examine the Prisoners brought from Machias, and report what is best to be done with them.

Ordered, That Colonel Mosely, Mr. Woodbridge, and Mr. Kollock, be a Committee to consider Lieutenant Ely Styles's Account of the expense of bringing ten Prisoners from Machias.

The Committee last mentioned having attended the service to which they were appointed, reported the following Resolve, which was accepted, viz:

Resolved, That the Receiver-General be, and he is hereby directed to pay Lieutenant Ely Styles the sum of six Pounds, twelve Shillings, in full discharge of the money he expended in bringing a number of Prisoners from Machias to Watertown.

The Committee appointed to consider what is best to be done with the ten Prisoners brought from Machias, reported. Whereupon, soners to the Jail in Worcester to-morrow morning; that Captain Crafts be desired to take care of the said Prisoners till that time, and that the officer who may be appointed to conduct said Prisoners to Worcester, be empowered to draw on Captain Brown, the Commissary in this Town, for so much Provisions as may be necessary for their support to Worcester, and Captain Brown is directed to supply them accordingly.

The Report above mentioned was reconsidered, amended, and accepted, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas, the Hon. Jedediah Preble and the Hon. Enoch Freeman, Esquires, have employed some persons to build a number of Whale-Boats for the service of the publick; therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee of Supplies be, and hereby are directed to deliver to Captain Briant Morton, or order, to be by said Morton delivered to said Preble and Freeman, such a quantity of Nails and Provisions, as they think will be necessary to complete the building said Boats.

Colonel Easton being admitted, requested that a Committee be appointed to consider the necessity of drawing on the Treasury for the sum of twelve hundred Pounds, said to be due to his Regiment at Ticonderoga.

On a motion made, Ordered, That Deacon Fisher, Dr. Taylor, and Mr. Gill, be a Committee for that purpose, and that they be directed, in case they cannot report to this Congress, to make report to the next House of Representatives.

On a motion made and seconded, that the Congress be dissolved, the question was put, and it passed in the affirmative.

The Congress was accordingly dissolved.

SAMUEL FREEMAN, Secretary.

LORD DARTMOUTH TO GENERAL GAGE.

London, July 1, 1775.

I am to presume that the measure of sending out a detachment of your troops to destroy the magazines at Concord was taken after the fullest consideration of the advantages on the one hand, and hazards on the other, of such an enterprise, and of all the probable consequences that were to result from it. It is impossible for me to reflect upon this transaction, and upon all its consequences, without feelings which, although I do not wish to conceal them, it is not necessary for me to express; but I believe every man of candour will agree with me in opinion, that, let the event be what it may, the rashness and rebellious conduct of the Provincials on this occasion evince the necessity, and will manifest to all the world the justice of the measures which the King has adopted for supporting the Constitution, and in which His Majesty will firmly persevere.

From the moment the blow was struck, and the Town of Boston invested by the rebels, there was no longer any reason to doubt of the intention of the people of Massachusetts-Bay to commit themselves in open rebellion. The other three New-England Provinces have taken the same part, and in fact all America (Quebeck, Nova-Scotia, and the Floridas excepted) is in arms against Great Britain, and the people involved in the guilt of levying a war against the King in every sense of the expression. In this situation every effort must be made, both by sea and land, to subdue the rebellion.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, TO HIS FRIEND IN VIRGINIA, DATED JULY 1, 1775.

The present disturbances in America are, as you may easily imagine, the topick of every conversation among all ranks and degrees of people. The measures of Administration are censured or approved, as they think well or ill of the present Ministry. The friends, the real friends to America, wish they had acted in some instances with more temper, and less violence. The King is much to be pitied; he has an honest heart, and nothing would please him more than to see all his people easy and happy. He has warmly recommended conciliatory measures, and such, I am well assured, will be adopted; but whether they will be sufficient to allay the ferment on your side the water, time only will show. Thus much I can venture to assure you: No more troops will be sent over; more ships-of-war will be sent, to confine your trade to Great Britain, Ireland, and the West-Indies; but as soon as you allow a free export and import, all restraints will be removed, and business will run in the old channel. Taxing America will forever cease, and the King will be empowered to suspend the acts complained of. When he is once vested with this power, America (if the Fates have not otherwise determined) will be happy.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LONDON TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED JULY 1, 1775.

The spirit displayed by the conduct of all the Colonies, you may believe, gives great satisfaction to all the friends of America. To those who are acquainted with the genius and disposition of that people, it is no more than what was expected; but to the people of this Country who, from their cradles, have been taught to believe (by almost every occurrence that has happened within their own observation) that publick virtue does not exist, it still appears like a romance, which they cannot yet bring themselves to believe. The Ministry, however, have been stunned, and are not yet recovered from the blow. One time they proposed sending more troops, and embodying the militia, in order to supply their place at home; at another time it was proposed sending mercenaries from Hanover, but that idea seems to have subsided; now they talk of sending more ships-of-war, and sundry are actually ordered to be got in readiness, but whether they will sail or not I suspect will depend upon future deliberations. In the mean time, give me leave to relate the substance of a conversation a friend of mine had with Lord North a few days ago.

His Lordship asked him what effect he thought his motion would have, when it came to be considered by the Congress? He told him he did not think it would have any; it was not calculated for them; it seemed rather designed for the different Assemblies, with a view, as he apprehended, of disjoining—the reverse of uniting them under one general head as in Congress. His Lordship disclaimed the idea of their having any intention to divide. He said he had no objection to their meeting in Congress; they had a right to meet together, and to consult, if they chose it, and it was impossible to prevent it. What he wished was, that they would take it under consideration, and recommend such things to the different Assemblies as might be attended with conciliatory effects. My Lord, says the gentleman, I cannot see that the motion itself contains any matter that can serve as a ground-work to go upon. It is no act of the Legislature; it contains no promise; it is not even the promise of a Minister, who to-day is, and to-morrow may be succeeded by one who may not think himself at all bound by the promise of his predecessor; it is not even a resolution of the House of Commons; it is no more than an opinion of a Committee of that House upon a future contingency; and your Lordship will pardon me when I observe, that the people of that Country have learnt to entertain such an idea of the disposition of the servants of the Crown to encroach upon the liberties of the subject—your Lordship will excuse me; I do not mean your Lordship in particular—but they dare not trust them. He declared he never entertained an idea of subduing America, properly speaking; if he had, he said, he should have sent a much greater force. What was sent was only what was thought sufficient to protect the friends of Government. But if the Colonies are determined to go on, let them. Let them apply to France or Spain; (these he seemed to think the only Powers who would afford them any protection;) let them see if they will treat them any better than we have done. We have it still in our power to distress their trade, which we most assuredly will do till they have made ample compensation for the expense and loss we have sustained on their account.

It would be easy to make a number of observations on the above discourse, the wheedling, cajoling, contemptible nature of which I think must strike you in the first instance. His Lordship dined yesterday, according to annual custom, with the West-India merchants, upon which occasions he generally affects to be joyous, but it was remarked that he was unusually dull. Lord Dartmouth the other day, with seeming great satisfaction, told a gentleman that there was a report in town that the Congress had taken Lord North's motion under consideration, which he hoped was true; but upon the gentleman's assuring him that the Assembly of Pennsylvania were actually voting money as their quota towards paying an American Army, which might be considered as a prelude to all the other Provinces doing the same, he seemed not a little disconcerted.

SOUTH-CAROLINA DELEGATES IN THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE, CHARLESTOWN.

Philadelphia, July 1, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: By directions of the Continental Congress, we have sent the vessel by which this goes, to procure from you a quantity of gunpowder for the use of the armies actually in the field for the service of America. The frequent severe skirmishes in the neighbourhood of Boston, have so exhausted their magazines, that an immediate supply is absolutely necessary. We entreat you to purchase all that can be bought in Town, and to despatch this vessel with it for this place, as soon as possible, together with as much as can be spared out of the publick stock, without danger to your own safety. Should there be any damaged powder on hand, please send it also, as it may be recovered here.

By one of the resolutions enclosed to the General Committee, you will see that it is recommended to the Southern Colonies to secure all the saltpetre that can be got, as well from the stores as from private persons, which, as you have no powder-mills erected, or persons skilful in making gunpowder, we would advise may be sent to be manufactured here. Should you be able to send more than four thousand weight of powder, we would wish the overplus might be sent by some other opportunity.

In order to prevent suspicion, we have sent bushels of Indian corn in this vessel, which may be exchanged for rice, in which the casks of powder may be concealed so, perhaps, as to prevent suspicion, should she unhappily be unable to avoid being overtaken by a cruiser. The utmost secrecy and despatch are absolutely necessary.

As large quantities of powder will be wanted, we strongly recommend that you continue to import all that you can, and think it probable that large quantities might be got from the Government of the Havana, as we can find no application there from any of these Colonies.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

HENRY MIDDLETON, J. RUTLEDGE, THO. LYNCH, E. RUTLEDGE.
CHRIST. GADSDEN,

To Wm. Henry Drayton, Arthur Middleton, and Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Esquires, Members of the Secret Committee at Charlestown.

Address delivered to the Inhabitants of a County in VIRGINIA, assembled for the purpose of choosing Deputies to represent them in Colony Convention.

Friends and Countrymen:

It is impossible that any People impressed with the least sense of constitutional liberty, should ever patiently submit to the enormous grievances under which we have already, in some respects, fallen, and with which we are likely to be much more oppressed; and accordingly we find our brethren and fellow-subjects in all the Colonies are pursuing such measures as are thought to be most likely to recover and secure our lost rights and privileges. Shall the people of this Colony, heretofore active, particularly in the time of the detestable Stamp Act, to oppose all attempts to deprive them of their personal security and private property, be now inactive and silent? Forbid it liberty! Humanity forbid it!

The several acts of Parliament made for ten years last past, relating to the British Colonies in North America, and their operation upon the property, liberty, and lives of the people in this country, and America in general, are too well known to many of you to require any enumeration or explanation; but many of you also have not the knowledge of these things, and are therefore ignorant of the danger in which you stand. To inform you of your unhappy situation, and to open your minds to a just sense of the dangers which threaten you, is, principally, the design of this address.

From the first settlement of the Colonies till about the year 1763, we had but little reason to complain of the injustice of our fellow-subjects in Great Britain. There were two or three instances, indeed, in which the Colonies were oppressed, under the notion of right to regulate our trade, and make us serviceable in commerce to Great Britain. Amongst these was an act of Parliament declaring that we should not erect any slitting-mills for the purpose of making nails in these Colonies; and we were forbidden to manufacture hats, to be sold amongst ourselves, under severe penalties. At that time, my friends, we only complained of the hardship and injustice of such an act; and, wanting the protection of Britain, looking upon our fellow-subjects there as friends and allies, we did not erect any more slitting-mills for making nails; and hats were manufactured only by a few individuals, to a very small extent, and sold within the respective Colonies. Thus did they attempt to restrain our manufactures in the only instances wherein they thought us at that time likely to succeed to the injury of the British manufacturer, intending thereby to compel us, through necessity, to apply to them for even the necessaries of life, and to pay them, by our labour, the prices they might think proper to lay on them.

Another instance of oppression was that of establishing a Post-Office in these Colonies, and thereby seizing, in effect, the private property of individuals here who had engaged in that business. By that act, all letters coming from Great Britain, or otherwise circulating through these Colonies, are liable to be seized by the Postmaster appointed to that office, and subjected to a tax to be paid before the delivery of them; and part of the money arising from this tax is applied towards the support of the office, and the balance sent to Britain to be disposed of by Government there.

Although the effects of that act are not universally felt amongst you, yet it is an instance of oppression which all are more or less subject to who are concerned in trade, or have any intercourse with men at a distance from them. And I mention this to show you, that if you are not oppressed by this law, it is because your circumstances in life are such that you have but little to do with letters, and the officers are not generally so strict in the performance of their duty as the law requires them to be. But surely, my friends, you cannot but be sensible, that if, as in this instance, the British Parliament have a right to make a law to seize your effects, and keep them from you until you pay a tax to redeem them, you must be in a wretched condition whenever Parliament shall think it proper to extend this authority to things which may more essentially and more immediately affect all ranks and degrees of people in these Colonies. That act has hitherto been suffered to be executed, because the people who are most affected by it are traders in some respects, and often receive an advantage in having speedy and regular intelligence from their various correspondents in different parts of the world; and they were unwilling to differ with their fellow-subjects in Britain concerning a thing which seemed to be intended for the benefit of both. The great inconvenience, therefore, of that act, is principally this, that it has taken out of the hands of people in these Colonies a business they were engaged in, and which might be carried on with the same advantages to commerce, whilst the money arising from that tax would be the property of people here, and not be applied to the purposes of Government in Britain; and farther, that it is declaratory in its consequences, of a right to take our property from us whenever the people of Britain shall be inclined to do so.

And let us, my fellow-subjects, consider the consequences which followed our submission to those acts, even in the manner above-mentioned. Not satisfied with the advantages they received from their trade with the American Colonies—a trade so circumscribed, that it was morally impossible for us to procure more than the mere necessities of life by the produce of our labour exported to Britain—they no sooner found us in a condition to export a large proportion of grain and other commodities, not requisite for the British markets, to foreign countries, (which, if permitted, might be of advantage to Britain, by enabling us to pay for, and consequently to consume more of their manufactures,) than they indulged us with the liberty of carrying our grain, and some other articles, to particular markets, but with this restriction, that we should not import such goods as were to be had from Britain, and that we should carry whatever articles they did permit us to receive, into Britain first, and pay a duty there. However, as this regulation amounted almost to a prohibition of such articles, and they were likely not to receive such advantages as they at first expected, we were at length allowed to bring them immediately into these Colonies, on paying to the officers of the Customs here a very high duty, to be disposed of by Government in Britain; hence proceed the duties we pay at this day on wines, coffee, molasses, &c., &c.; all which duties are not applied to the support of Government in these Colonies, but increase the revenue of Great Britain, and enable them to maintain standing armies in America, to secure the execution of their laws, under the denomination of guards and garrisons to protect us and our property.

Another instance of oppression is the extending the jurisdiction of the Courts of Admiralty, with pains and penalties heretofore unknown. In this Court we are deprived of our trial by jury, and must submit to the decision of a dependant party judge, whose emoluments of office arise from his condemnations; and although we may be released from the prosecution, we must still suffer the injury and oppression brought upon us by the iniquitous prosecutor, who is exempted from the damages we sustain by means of an unjust prosecution.

The suspending the legislative power of New-York, until their House of Burgesses rescinded or blotted out a vote they had passed declaring their right to the same freedom which the people of Great Britain enjoy, and complied with an arbitrary requisition to provide for troops, is another capital instance of the tyrannical disposition of the British Parliament towards America.

All these things and many more have we known, to convince us that the British Parliament have not viewed us with the eye of brotherly love and affection, but with a determination to make us subservient to our fellow-subjects in Britain, in all cases whatever, and our condition as wretched as that of slaves.

The detestable Stamp Act furnishes us with another memorable proof of the injustice and tyranny they had prepared for us; and I thank the God of heaven and earth, who permits the wicked sometimes to provide torments for themselves, that of his gracious mercy to us he suffered that act to be passed, which opened our eyes, and made us behold the slavery intended for three millions of people. Let us return thanks to Him, my countrymen, for his great mercy; and let us look up to Him for protection in the day of our distress.

The consequences that would have attended a submission to that act, you are better acquainted with than with those which have arisen from all the other acts I have mentioned. The reason is plain. You were told by Parliament that you must pay a tax on every instrument of writing used in these Colonies; that you must pay a tax on painters' colours, oil, glass, and paper, which you were obliged to import from Great Britain. This was a doctrine none of us could misunderstand. By this all were affected, and so sensibly too, that it was like drawing the vital blood from our veins. By that act our money was demanded, and we were reduced to the necessity of paying or resisting. We resisted. The happy effects of our opposition you cannot have forgotten, and our method of resistance must still be fresh in your memories. We shut up our Courts; we associated; we refused to buy their goods; they took off the taxes. Were the Parliament actuated in this respect by principles of justice and regard to us? No, my countrymen, they were not. They saw the impropriety of their conduct, not in having taxed us, but in the mode of taxing us. They perceived their inability at that time to enforce submission to a law against which they had not expected any opposition. They had attacked all ranks and degrees of men in these Colonies, and had met with a sudden, unexpected, and violent opposition. The clamours of their merchants, tradesmen, and manufacturers, contributed also to the repeal of those duties, as they were immediately affected by the opposition. But let us examine this repeal a little farther. Did they take off all the duties upon British merchandise imported into these Colonies? Did they relinquish the right of taxing us? No. We find that they reserved a duty on the article of tea, trifling indeed as to the sum, but fatal in its consequences to our liberty and property. We find at this time, also, they passed another act declaring their right to tax us; to regulate our trade; to prevent our manufacturing, or, in their own words, "to bind us in all cases whatsoever." What! shall we then receive our laws from people at three thousand miles distance from us, ignorant of our situation and circumstances in life, and not bound by the same laws? Shall we, like poor, abject slaves, tamely give up our liberty, which our forefathers handed down to us, and suffer our property to be taken from us at the will and direction of a British Parliament? Shall we subject ourselves and our posterity to be driven by our masters to such employments as they shall allot for us? To have our looms, our spinning-wheels destroyed, whenever they shall think we manufacture too much cloth? I wait your answer. But methinks I see the blood of true Britons swelling your veins, and hear you cry, with one voice, we will be free.

Let us consider, then, my countrymen, what it is we are to do. You are told that the present dispute between Great Britain and the Colonies, is concerning the duty on tea. It is so. Perhaps some of you may now tell me it is a dispute with which you have nothing to do, as you do not make use of that commodity, and the duty cannot affect you. But you will go farther, perhaps, and tell me that the high-minded gentlemen are the occasion of the present confusion, and are bringing you into difficulties to support their extravagance and ambition. Let me entreat you, my fellow-subjects, to reflect a moment on your situation. Is it possible you can be so blind to your real interests as not to perceive the oppression daily coming upon you from Britain? Can you suppose the gentlemen of all America would be so mad as to risk their lives and fortunes merely to save the trifling duty of three pence per pound on tea? Are not the gentlemen made of the same materials as the lowest and poorest amongst you? And do you suppose they cannot, they would not refrain from the use of that article, if that would procure the safety of these Colonies? Have you found, in the course of your observations, that the gentlemen (as they are styled) are so very frugal and saving of their money, as to bring themselves into the smallest difficulty for so small an advantage? No, my countrymen, you have not. Deceive not yourselves, then, nor let others deceive you. Listen to no doctrines which may tend to divide us, but let us go hand in hand as brothers, as fellow-sufferers in the same cause, firmly united to defend our rights and liberty, and to preserve freedom to our posterity. Fortunes we may not leave them, but we shall be despicable indeed, if we tamely suffer them to become slaves.

But let us reflect again on the nature of this dispute. The British Parliament, when they repealed the Stamp Act, did not give up the right of taxing us; they reserved the duty on tea, and declared by an act that they had a right to bind us "in all cases whatsoever." The plain meaning of this declaration is, that we must either submit to such impositions as they may hereafter think proper to burden us with, or they will not suffer us to make use of our property. In this situation we have been unmindful of the necessary means of defence, whilst they have been preparing to execute their laws upon us.

Having reserved the duty on tea, the consumption of that article has been lessened near two-thirds, to the great injury of the East-India Company of Merchants in Great Britain. As Parliament had been the cause of this injury, the Minister was determined not only to redress them, but at the same time to carry the favourite plan of taxing America into execution. An advantage is then offered to the East-India Company, which by law they had not been entitled to, of sending their tea immediately to America. This measure being adopted by them, the Minister vainly hoped to find us submitting openly to this tax; as, notwithstanding the duty, we should receive the tea on cheaper terms. If this measure should not succeed, he was then prepared to carry the declaration of Parliament into force, and procure such other oppressive laws to be made, as might lay us in the deepest distress, and compel us to submit.

In this manner, my countrymen, were the distresses of the people of Boston brought upon them. The East-India Company sent ships loaded with tea to different parts of America. They sent tea to Boston. In all other parts they suffered it to be landed and stored, or it was agreed to carry it back to Britain. At Boston they refused to carry it back, and the people would not suffer it to be landed, well knowing that if it was, the duty would be paid by the Company's agents, and the tea sold, if not in New-England, to the other Colonies in America. They remonstrated against the landing of the tea; they waited many days patiently for a satisfactory determination; the officers of the Customs refused to suffer the ship to return; the men-of-war determined it should not pass; and by these circumstances were they reduced to the necessity of throwing the tea into the water, as they attempted to land it.

Although the law of nature and self-defence in all such cases, does justify their conduct, yet the dispute is not now about the price of the tea, but the duty on that tea. It is not the sum of ten thousand Pounds, which was the value of the tea, that the people of Boston and all North America are contending with Britain for, but it is our right to freedom to dispose of our property when we have acquired it. If paying for the tea was the condition on which our rights should be restored, and on which our property might remain secure, all America would not engage in this dispute. But this is not the case. Parliament will not be satisfied with that, but have determined that we shall submit to their laws and to their taxes.

And let us now inquire what methods they have taken to oblige us to submit. Punishments should always be proportioned to crimes, and where the laws direct the punishment, no power can go beyond it. This is the security we boast of under our free constitution of Government; and it is our invaluable privilege to make these laws. The power that deprives us of this privilege makes us slaves. What, then, is the conduct of Parliament towards us? They will not be satisfied with payment for the tea, but farther insist that we shall submit to whatever laws they make. To compel us to do this they dissolve our Assemblies; suspend our Legislatures; block up the Town of Boston; deprive upwards of thirty thousand inhabitants of the means of subsistence; seize their wharves, &c., to the amount of two hundred thousand Pounds, which, by the act, are never to be restored to them, although they should submit to all that is required by that law. They have altered the Charter of Massachusetts-Bay, which is an agreement between the people of that Province and the King, in writing, under his seal; and have passed an act empowering the Governour to seize the persons of such as do not conform to all things required by their laws, and to send them where he shall think proper, (even to Britain), to be tried for their supposed offences, where, destitute of friends and money, they will fall unhappy victims to the avarice of corrupted judges, and the rapaciousness of merciless tyrants. Many more things of like tendency are they now preparing for all North America.

To you, then, my countrymen, to all of us, does it belong to take such measures as shall prevent their wicked designs, and secure our lives, our liberty, and property. On the virtue and courage of the people of these Colonies does it depend whether we shall be happy or miserable in this world, and enjoy in peace and quietness the fruits of our labour. Your Representatives in General Congress have planned the measures of resistance; on your courage and virtue do they rely for support in the execution of them. Let us, then, my countrymen, go hand in hand; let us have one voice; let us convince mankind that we are, as one man, actuated by one soul; and that if we are not, we still deserve to be free.

The mode of opposition recommended to us is an union and association of the Colonies, to break off all commercial intercourse with Great Britain, unless our grievances shall be redressed. And why is this plan recommended to us? Surely because it is, of all others, the most safe, speedy, and effectual we can embrace, to restore that harmony to Britain and the Colonies we profess to desire. Rashness and violence can never avail us in the execution of this plan, and therefore we should avoid every conduct tending to so destructive an end; for how can this Association be observed, unless we establish arts and manufactures? How is it possible these should succeed, without peace, order, and the security of our property? And how can these be preserved, unless we discourage every kind of violence, by promoting a due respect for the laws of our country, as far as our unhappy circumstances will admit of it. The principles of the ever-glorious Revolution will always justify a suspension of the laws under like circumstances, but we should never enforce these principles, unless compelled thereto by extreme necessity. Prudence and moderation will give weight to our measures, whilst a contrary conduct will only serve to disunite us, and consequently to involve us in confusion. This is a doctrine which every friend to liberty and his country will inculcate, and on this will the success of our present undertaking chiefly depend. But whilst I recommend to you a temperate conduct, I would not have you to neglect that provision for your safety which the urgency of the case requires. On the contrary, I would advise you to look forward to every contingency, and be prepared for "mournful events."

COMMITTEE OF YORKTOWN (PA.) TO PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Yorktown, July 1, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We had the honour of receiving your favour of the 15th ultimo, enclosing a resolve of the honourable Continental Congress of the 14th ultimo. We immediately summoned the Committee of this County, and laid before them your letter, &c. The Committee proceeded to the choice of officers fit to be recommended to the Congress, to command the company of riflemen to be raised, and appointed six Commissioners to provide necessaries for them. Every resolve passed in Committee with the greatest unanimity, and the gentlemen of Yorktown, after the meeting, dispersed themselves through the County, and assisted the officers in recruiting.

The spirit of the people on this occasion gave the Committee infinite pleasure. The men seemed actuated with the greatest zeal, and thought themselves honoured in having their names enrolled among the Sons of Liberty, who are to fight for their Country, and in defence of their dearest rights and privileges. The only uneasiness they feel is, that they are not at this moment at the scene of action. From the spirit of the soldiers, we entertain the most flattering hopes that they will prove serviceable to the cause of liberty, and reflect honour on this Country.

The principal people here have caught the spirit of the honourable Congress, and in their small circle have done every thing in their power to animate their neighbours to stand forth in this day of despotism, and resist the arbitrary and unjust measures of Parliament with all the power which Heaven has given them. And we have the pleasure to inform you that their labours have not been in vain, and that the County is ready to strain every nerve to put into execution any measures which the Congress may judge necessary to our common defence.

The officers we take the liberty to recommend to you are, Captain Michael Dowdle, Lieutenants Henry Miller, John Dill, and John Watson. They are men whose courage we have the highest opinion of. The company, including officers and soldiers, are beyond the number fixed for this County, and as General Gates thought it improper to discharge any, we have sent them all.

We request the favour of you that proper care be taken that none are draughted out of their company into another. This is the request of the inhabitants of this County, many of them having their dearest friends engaged in the service, and would not by any means have them taken from their present officers.

We hope no alteration will be made in the officers. The Captain has behaved very well on this occasion, and has done all in his power, by advancing money, &c., to forward the important common cause.

Mr. Miller is known to some of you, gentlemen. The other officers are men of worth and property; they have all wives and families, and are entitled to the warmest thanks of their Country.

The Commissioners appointed to provide necessaries for the men, will forward their accounts as soon as they possibly can.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,
JAMES SMITH, JOSEPH DONALDSON, GEORGE IRVIN, THOMAS HARTLEY,
JOHN KEAN, MICHAEL HAHN.

To the Pennsylvania Delegates in Congress.

P. S. The company began their march the nearest road to Boston this day.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, Saturday, July 1, 1775.

SIR: I do myself the honour to advise your Excellency that the Connecticut Troops that arrived in this Colony, under the command of Brigadier Wooster, are encamped within two miles of this Town. I have not yet had a return of their numbers; as soon as my order for that purpose is complied with, I shall transmit it.

I enclose you, Sir, a copy of the resolutions of the honourable the Continental Congress, of the 27th ultimo. I shall prepare, with all possible despatch, to carry into execution their views, and propose leaving this for Albany, in my way to Ticonderoga, on Monday next.

Eight transports with troops, that have been at Sandy Hook since Thursday last, are to sail from thence to-day. Reports prevail that the men on board have mutinied; that they refused to go to Boston. Of this, however, I have not been able to get any certainty. Handbills have been introduced amongst them to encourage them to quit, on the first favourable opportunity, a service which must render them odious to all honest men.

Governour Tryon's conduct has hitherto been unexceptionable, and from the information I have been able to procure, (some of which I put great confidence in,) I have reason to believe that the line he has chalked out for himself is such as we could wish he should hold.

I believe the commissions for this department were already forwarded to you before my letter (in obedience to your order) to the Congress on that subject arrived. If they are to be sent back, I beg of you to order them to be directed to the President of the Provincial Convention here.

No preparation has as yet been made to occupy a post in the Highlands. By what I can learn, the Provincial Convention have doubts about the propriety, (which they have or mean to state to Congress,) arising from the want of ammunition to maintain the post after it shall have been completed.

A ship from London, in five weeks, advises that the Remonstrance sent by the Assembly of this Colony to the House of Commons has been rejected by them, as containing sentiments derogatory to the rights of Parliament. This manœuvre has already had salutary effects; many whose sentiments are friendly to America, but who differed as to the mode of procuring redress, now publicly declare that they will no longer sit idle spectators of their Country's wrongs. That success and happiness, equal to the merits and virtues of my General, may crown all his operations, is the wish of every honest American, and by none more sincerely than me.

I am, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

His Excellency George Washington, Esquire, General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United Colonies.

EDWARD FLEMING TO PRESIDENT OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, July 1, 1775.

SIR: I was yesterday congratulated by a member of your body on being appointed a Lieutenant-Colonel to Colonel Clinton's battalion, for Ulster County. I beg, Sir, to return my thanks to the Congress for the notice they have been pleased to take of me; but as I have a family resident in Town, and as all my property (which is by no means inconsiderable) lies in this City and County, I conceive that my presence is absolutely necessary for their preservation and safety, and that it would be extremely imprudent in me to leave them, and go to Ulster County, for the purpose of superintending the raising and disciplining troops, &c., for Colonel Clinton's Regiment. These, with other considerations, Sir, induce me to decline the acceptance of the appointment. When the day of trial comes, and that I have secured my family in some place of safety, I shall not be slack in proving myself a man, and good citizen, and be ready to go wherever the exigency of affairs may require, for the preservation of our common rights and privileges. In the mean time, shall not be wanting to the publick in rendering such services as my small abilities will afford.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, Sir, yours and the Congress's most obedient and very humble servant,
EDWARD FLEMING.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire.

S. SP. SKINNER TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD

New-York, July 1, 1775.

MY LORD: From a real principle of loyalty, benevolence, and love toward Great Britain and America, and through the confusion and criticalness of the times, am induced to trouble your Lordship with the following extract of a letter. The sending of additional troops to America, and the new acts of restraint, manifestly appears compulsive, and, for the present, I am afraid, have disconcerted and unhinged a conciliatory proposition respecting a revenue; but independency and rebellion are disclaimed; self-defence not. Plundering and burning of houses and Towns is infamous, and certainly must very much obstruct the granting an American revenue to the King.

In all probability both Countries (and the West-Indies) will be ruined; Great Britain, especially, and her troops worsted and disgraced in America. I know the value of British disciplined troops, but a thousand American gun-men, on their own intricate, advantageous ground, it is likely, at any time, will defeat a large number of any European Troops.

Your Lordship will find that I speak from actual experience, having travelled for observation and information through all the Provinces, nearly, and carefully noted the militia and people. They make the most useful guns in America, and upon a moderate computation, have now about four hundred thousand British and American made guns of the common size, including a large quantity of rifled barrels, much cannon and ammunition, and can, with amazing expedition, if forced thereto, embody fifty thousand disciplined troops, mostly used to the woods and hunting, with thirty thousand irregulars to assist occasionally, and who will do surprising execution. Americans cannot want men, or paper money, ever in human appearance, and are an active, prudent people—moderate, but with astonishing resolution and courage, and expert gun-men from their youth, and whose women breed them plenty of soldiers in this climate.

No respectable body of people, my Lord, of either Catholics, Churchmen, or Dissenters, in America, will ever agree to any measures but either requisition, or a free voluntary revenue. All the Colonies are fixed in unanimity, and unanimous in those points. Americans will cleave together undivided; those that tell otherwise are deceivers (intentionally) that would absolutely ruin Government, and are not to be credited in the smallest degree. The most eligible plan is, to try their free, voluntary generosity. May God interpose. Suspending the restraining acts, and withdrawing the extra men-of-war and extra troops immediately, in time, before desertion, sickness, and winter advances—that is, excepting only the customary number of regiments in usual places, for it evidently appears that they can act only to disadvantage in this Country, consequently must (if God permit) end in disappointment and disgrace to Britons; Americans to have their Continental Congress annually, or as occasion may require; and to proportion their revenue themselves, for no other people can possibly measure, or truly judge of their ability; Britain to repeal all the American Acts, except those existing at the conclusion of the last war. All affairs then, and not till then, will be peaceable, happy, and well for the civil and religious constitutional rights and liberties of Great Britain, and her Empire in America.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

S. SP. SKINNER.

"The extract, dated NEW-YORK, June 8, 1775.—My field of view never extended beyond the line of endeavouring to prevent an arbitrary unconstitutional mode of raising a revenue; an unconstitutional tax or duty, or a compulsive revenue, I certainly will reprobate to the hour of my death, but a free voluntary revenue toward support of Government at large, I shall think it my duty to promote; for, as it is a well known truth, that a people who are taxed without their consent, can have no property which they can properly call their own; so, in the contrary scale, and by a parity of experimental reasoning, it is equally true, that without Government is steadily fixed on a broad substantial bottom, we can then, in either case, have no property which we can safely call our own.

"The ministerial proposition for a reconciliation (as it now stands) is compulsive, and in part inadmissible, but it doth not appear prudent or polite to reject the whole of it; yet it ought immediately to be stripped of its abstruse and complicated drapery—the proposition ought to be rendered plain, and modelled exactly to the Constitution. There doth not appear the least doubt but the rough plan may be polished; I think it might be fashioned and improved so as to give quietness and full satisfaction to every reasonable person in Great Britain and America; but it doth not seem advisable, or useful, for any Assembly to take up the proposition disjunctively, but by the honourable Continental Congress, who, no doubt, will return proposition conciliatory, for proposition received.

"America's favourite plan of requisition is a very good one, provided a difference of times and circumstances doth not alter the case. The good old King George the Second was constrained to conform to the fashion of those times, and to renew his civil list annually by requisition from his Parliament; but his present Majesty, in that point, is furnished out with more consequence, and not in the same predicament; the King hath his civil list of eight hundred thousand pounds per annum, established by Parliament during life, with an addenda in course of two or three hundred thousand pounds more, which leaveth less room for requisition; so that notwithstanding it was eligible, and a very proper mode for America with George the Second, it is now rather ineligible and out of fashion with George the Third.

"In lieu of requisition, suppose we should copy the British Parliament, and (waiving punctilios) do, ourselves, honourably propose a moderate voluntary revenue, suitable to our circumstances, to be forwarded in country produce (as we have but little or no hard cash) as a free gift from all the Provinces in America conjunctively; and presented annually to the Crown for life, in addition to His Majesty's civil list establishment, provided the extra Troops are withdrawn immediately, and the damage made good to Boston, &c.; and the tea act, and all the accursed acts that sprung from its root are previously repealed; and all our oppressive acts to be repealed. Even all the acts, excepting those of navigation, and a very few others, may conveniently and reputably be laid aside, in consequence of our politically offering, and rightly timing for greasing the wheels of Government, or granting a free voluntary revenue, in proportion to our small ability, and also in further consideration of extra expenses in supporting more of our own civil establishments.

"This mode of procedure, or something analogous, I apprehend would preserve entire (and in no degree violate) the true constitutional liberty of America, by steering clear as possible of the inconveniency of the British Parliament; it would give additional consequence to His Majesty, and, at the same time, would have a strong tendency to quiet our enemies at home, as it would exhibit to the deluded Britons a striking specimen of American politeness and generosity. It is really true policy, and would ease those our industrious brethren (who labour hard and die poor) a small proportion in their excessively burdensome duties and taxes; for they are annually obliged, every session of Parliament, to make provision for some material deficiency in the civil list establishment.

"As it appears possible, and very probable, that the main substantial end can be accomplished, and that completely at this juncture, with great honour, and without any further accumulated destruction of blood and property, let me most earnestly entreat that we may warily regard the important matter immediately, agree to a cessation of hostilities, and by every possible, honourable means, negotiate to evade involving and continuing the destructive contest, respecting any particular construction of words, or singular mode to accommodate and finish the perplexed subject in dispute. Let us negotiate, and meet the British Ministry at the threshold of their opened door, and return a proposition conciliatory for their proposition; but let us cleave together to the Constitution for ever; and when our lives, &c., are villanously attacked, we are undoubtedly in every respect justifiable in effectual resistance and self-defence. And may it please God to grant happiness, and constant success to us in the event thereof.

"S. SP. SKINNER.

"N. B. Altercation may ensue; but your Lordship's good sense will easily discriminate truth and honesty from sophistry and falsehood."

DECLARATION OF JAMES BALL.

Warwick, July 1, 1775.

Whereas I, the subscriber, an inhabitant of the Town of Warwick, hereby humbly acknowledge that I have given great offence to the Committee of Correspondence, and other leading men, and all the inhabitants of said Warwick, by my past misconduct, in casting reflections on the Congresses, and not giving or even trying to give satisfaction to the Committee of Correspondence of said Warwick, when requested agreeable to the Congress; for which I am heartily sorry, and humbly ask forgiveness. I thereby heartily agree to abide by all the doings and resolutions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses, as long as the major part of the people on the Continent, and the inhabitants of this Province, choose members to attend on such Congresses respectively, and to aid and assist the people of this Province in defence of our rights against a tyrannical system of the British Administration, and to resist the King's Troops, and defend the rights of America now in contest, even to life and fortune.

JAMES BALL.

GEN. FOLSOM TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp on Winter Hill, July 1, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Being obliged, for want of proper tents, to quarter Colonel Poor's Regiment in Barracks at Medford, which has created me much trouble and difficulty, they being a mile and a half distant from camp, last evening eighteen men, under the command of Captain Rowe, deserted; which might have been prevented, had they been regularly encamped. The reason, I understand, which they assigned to their Captain, before they deserted, (he not giving me or his Colonel the least notice thereof till six o'clock this morning) was, that they did not intend, when they enlisted, to join the Army, but to be stationed at Hampton. Colonel Poor has sent after them, but if he cannot get them back, hope you will take some effectual method to send them as soon as possible, and to prevent and discourage future desertions; for otherwise, if they are passed over with impunity, their example will induce others, and, by that means, cause such a defection of the Troops, as will weaken, if not entirely break up your whole Battalion.

Wednesday last, the whole of the New-Hampshire Troops, fit for duty, were ordered to their alarm posts; when formed we were not able to line our breastwork more than two deep, our lines being necessarily extensive, on account of the situation of our camp; therefore desire that the two remaining companies, now stationed at Portsmouth and Hampton, may be sent, if you can possibly spare them, there being not one quarter part of the Troops in ours as in the other lines at Cambridge, Roxbury, and on Prospect Hill. In a few days the breastwork will be completed, by which time the cannon I wrote for, I hope, will arrive, so that we may be prepared to give the ministerial Troops a proper reception should they attempt to force our lines.

Nothing remarkable has transpired since my last. The enemy are fortifying themselves as strongly as possible, on Bunker's Hill, and when they have completed their works, it is probable they will land somewhere near where the New-Hampshire Troops are encamped, it being very convenient for them to bring up their floating batteries upon our left wing; however, hope to give a good account of part of them at least whenever they come.

Your obedient servant, NATHANIEL FOLSOM.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GEN. FOLSOM.

In Committee of Safety, Exeter, July 1, 1775.

It gives us great pleasure to find, by yours of the 26th last month, that a reconciliation had taken place between you and Colonel Stark. We doubt not you will use your utmost endeavours to keep up a good harmony among the Troops. In order thereto, we agree with you, that a due subordination must be observed. Major Hobart, who is appointed paymaster, will have commissions for Stark's and Reed's Regiments, and is to consult you on filling up the vacancies.

Two twenty-four, and two double fortified six-pounders are to be sent off to-morrow morning from Hampton. The artillery company is not raised, nor have we been able to get suitable officers for that service. We think it advisable that you should inquire if a good man for that business can be engaged, and what encouragement he will expect. When we can be informed of this, we shall lay it before the Congress. We suppose if good officers can be obtained, men may be enlisted out of the battalions more suitable for that purpose than elsewhere. We enclose your commission, and hope that the appointment of any other General Officer will not be expected. We are your friends, and humble servants. By order of the Committee.

To General Folsom.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COL. REED.

In Committee of Safety, Exeter, July 1, 1775.

SIR: The Committee, without knowing that you had in actual service, or in your eye, any person as Adjutant of your Regiment, have commissioned Mr. McGregore, a young man, we imagine, very suitable for that place. If any person you judge suitable, is disposed to act as volunteer, without pay, in that capacity, we have no objections, unless it should plainly appear to us that he would not answer the end. But you will easily perceive the unsuitableness of recalling the commission from Mr. McGregore, for no reason on his part, and commissioning and paying a person of whom, till another was appointed, we had not so much as a recommendation.

You may assure yourself, that so far as the publick service will allow, we shall take pleasure in gratifying you or the Regiment, or any individual. But although we should be willing to make use of any and the best information, we must insist upon it, that our appointments should take place, as the contrary must be attended with boundless difficulties. By order of the Committee.

To Colonel Reed, of the 3d New-Hampshire Regiment.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, July 2, 1775.

[Read July 5, 1775.]

SIR: Your letter of the 24th June, enclosing the resolutions of Congress, relative to the persons employed in taking possession of Crown Point, came to hand on Friday last. I shall procure the returns agreeable to the orders, and liquidate the sum to be paid them as soon after my arrival at Ticonderoga as affairs of more importance will admit.

Yesterday I had a conference with the Provincial Convention here on the subject-matter of employing the Green Mountain Boys, after which a Committee was appointed to take it into further consideration; the result, I apprehend, will be to employ five hundred of them, which is full as many as they can raise, and to appoint a Lieutenant-Colonel and Major to the command of them.

Doubts seemed to arise whether your intentions were that these men should be incorporated into those Regiments, for the raising of which they had already issued warrants and nominated the officers, or to make them a separate corps. My opinion was that Congress intended the latter, and, as such, they will be formed.

You will receive from the Convention here some accounts of Colonel Guy Johnson's conduct, too much of which I fear is true; and the inhabitants in the western quarter of this Colony, of New-Jersey, and the northern parts of Pennsylvania, will probably be exposed to some insults from the savages in their vicinity. I beg leave, therefore, to suggest, that if two Regiments more, of seven hundred and fifty men each, were raised by this Colony, and stationed, one on the southern part of its western frontiers, adjacent to Jersey and Pennsylvania, the other towards the Oneida carrying place, it would strike so much awe into the Indians, as probably to prevent their making incursions upon us.

I fear Governour Trumbull will not have it in his power to furnish me with the necessary quantity of powder. Is it not possible to procure some from Pennsylvania? I shall be greatly distressed for want of a few field-pieces. I wish to see those in the State-House yard, Philadelphia, tried in actual service.

Governour Tryon continues a prudent conduct. I cannot learn that he has taken any step that will give umbrage. The rejection of the New-York Assembly's Remonstrance by the House of Commons, has had the good effect to make those in this city hearty in the cause of America, whose sentiments, though friendly, differed as to the mode of procuring redress.

Congress has not provided for a deputy Adjutant-General in this department. The necessity of such an appointment would be superseded if another Brigade-Major was allowed, which seems more immediately necessary, as we have two Brigadiers.

Whoever sees the Connecticut Troops admires their strength, stature, youth, and agility; but every one laments their want of regimentals.

I am informed that seven or eight youths of the Caughnawaga tribe are at Mr. Wheelock's school, in New-Hamp- shire. What sentiments that gentleman entertains in this unhappy controversy I am ignorant of. If friendly, might he not be serviceable?

I should be culpable in my own opinion, and unjust to the Provincial Convention of this Colony, if I passed over, in silence, the distinguished zeal with which they second your views. Without immediately knowing for what purpose the supplies I have asked were wanting, they with alacrity have begun to procure them, judging, with propriety, that many military operations are of such a nature as do not, consistent with prudence, permit their being known to too many.

I am, Sir, with sentiments of the most profound respect, yours and the Congress's most obedient servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, July 2, 1775.

SIR: I have the honour to acquaint you I arrived here last night. This morning proving very rainy, and my horses much fatigued, I have halted for a few hours, which I shall employ in providing some articles I have had no leisure to procure since I left Virginia. From hence I shall proceed with all speed to Cambridge. This morning I waited upon the Generals Worcester, Schuyler, and Montgomery. General Schuyler mentioned in privacy, his having recommended to the Congress, the appointment of another Brigade-Major in this department, as there was no Deputy Adjutant-General allowed. This, Sir, my experience tells me, is an officer, if properly chosen, that will be very necessary to add to the Army in this district, especially as there are two Brigades, and two Brigadier-Generals.

You will pardon the liberty I take, and believe it to proceed from the zeal with which I wish to approve myself, your most faithful, and obedient humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

BALTIMORE (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Inspection for Baltimore County, held in Baltimore Town, on the 3d of July, 1775, a Letter from Henry Lloyd, agent for the Contractors for supplying the Troops at Boston, to Doctor John Stephenson, being fallen into the hands of the Committee, was read, and is as follows:

"Boston, May 17, 1775.

"SIR: The stoppage of provisions from the Southern Governments for the use of His Majesty's Troops, makes it necessary to endeavour to get a supply, by concealing from the publick eye the destination of provisions shipped for that purpose. I shall therefore propose for your consideration the following method of doing it: Cannot a vessel be freighted with flour for the West-Indies? you may take up a vessel as large as two hundred tons and give her a full freight. I should send you bills on them for the amount of what you may ship to me in this way; but the negotiation of such bills might discover your plan, and defeat it, so that I should be glad you would advise me of some friend of yours. When I am made acquainted with his name, and the sum you shall draw for, will send to him from hence my bills on the contractors for the amount you advise me of. You will please likewise to give the contractors timely advice, that they may insure their interest, if they think proper, and inform me the name of the vessel and master you engage, that I may lodge a permit at the light-house in this harbour for admission to come up to Town, and discharge her cargo here. Pray let the flour you purchase be such as will keep over the summer, and let the casks be good, well hooped, and the heads well secured with lining hoops. You will be careful to write me by a conveyance that your letter may not fall into the hands of the Provincials.

"I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

"HENRY LLOYD.

"To Doctor John Stephenson."

The Committee sent for Mr. Stephenson, and having shown him the Letter, he made the declaration following:

"I believe the within writing to be Mr. Henry Lloyd's writing, and I declare that I have never received any copy of it, or any other letter to that purport; and I further declare, that if the letter had come to my hands, I would not have executed the order, nor will I execute any order of the kind from any person whatsoever, contrary to the resolves of the Continental Congress, or Provincial Convention.

JOHN STEVENSON."

On motion, Resolved, That Henry Lloyd, of Boston, has knowingly and wilfully violated the Association of the American Congress, by endeavouring to supply the enemies of this Country with Provisions; and that agreeable to the Resolutions of the said Congress, it is the duty of us and all our constituents from henceforth not to have any commercial intercourse with him; and it is recommended, that an inviolable regard be paid to this Resolution.

DORCHESTER COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

Cambridge, July 3, 1775.

Whereas, divers persons trading in small vessels up and down the several rivers of this Province, have, of late, frequently come into the rivers of this County with Dry Goods, Coffee, Molasses, and other articles which are prohibited from being imported into this Country since the first day of December last, and which, they say, were purchased by them at Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other places in the Country, without proper certificates from the merchants they respectively purchased of, that the said Goods and Merchandises were imported before the said first day of December; which has put the Committee of this County to great trouble and inconvenience, in taking possession of and storing such Goods till proper certificates were obtained respecting the same; and has occasioned frequent murmurs of those persons who were thus prevented, by their own negligence, from disposing of their Merchandise, under pretence that they did not think such certificates would be required for Goods which were purchased in the Country: the Committee of the said County, desirous to prevent any person in future from falling into the same disagreeable predicament of having their Goods detained till such time as they produce satisfactory vouchers of their Merchandise being imported within the time limited by the Continental Congress, do hereby give notice to all persons whatsoever, that they will not permit or suffer any one to sell or dispose of any Goods or Merchandises which may be brought into the said County, unless the person or persons to whom the same belong, can produce a certificate from the Committee of the place where they purchased such Goods, that the same were imported within the time limited as aforesaid.

Signed per order:

HENRY HALE, Clerk.

JOHN ALSOP TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour of 28th ultimo I received, respecting some blankets. In answer, a friend of mine has a quantity at Maryland, with some strouds, and other Indian goods, which he chooses to sell all together. They are ordered here; as soon as they arrive, he will give the invoice, which I shall lay before the Congress, as I suppose they will purchase the whole. Shall inform them of the number of blankets wanted by you, but I fear there is not so many as you stand in need of. I am, with respect, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN ALSOP.

CAPT. JOHN LANGDON TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 3, 1775.

SIR: No doubt before this comes to hand, General Sullivan, who set out for home last Tuesday, will have waited on you, or the Committee of the Province, to whom I beg leave to refer for particulars.

Since his departure, we hear that several companies of expert riflemen have marched from Virginia and Maryland. Six companies from this Province will march this week to join the Army before Boston. I have also the pleasure to inform you that the powder mills are going on fast, having been supplied with several tons of saltpetre; the manufacturing of which article is likely to meet with great success here, as also in Virginia, and without doubt, in two or three months, will be able to furnish large quantities. We hear from South-Carolina that a considerable quantity of powder was arrived there, some of which will immediately be forwarded to Boston; this may be depended on. There has been, within a few days, a considerable quantity sent from this place to our Armies before Boston and Ticonderoga. Every method has been taken, and will continue to be taken, for the importation of large supplies of that necessary article, powder; some of which hope will arrive soon. It is not likely that I shall be able to get powder to send to our Province, as the whole will be in the hands of the Committee, to be sent from time to time to our Army; therefore, if any should be wanting for the common cause, no doubt it may be had from them.

I would here beg leave to suggest, that we should not, by any means, at present make use of cannon, if it is possible to avoid it, until we are better supplied. The Assembly of this Province have voted to raise four thousand five hundred Minute-men. Every measure seems to be taking to defend our just rights to the last extremity. The general voice of the people here is, that our cause is just and righteous, and that God is on our side, as has most evidently appeared. The low, base, and wanton cruelty of the ministerial sons of tyranny, in burning the once pleasant and populous Town of Charlestown, beggars all description. This does not look like the fight of those who have so long been friends, and would hope to be friends again, but rather of a most cruel enemy. But we shall not wonder, when we reflect, that it is the infernal hand of tyranny, which always has and ever will deluge that part of the world which it lays hold of in blood.

I am in some hopes that the Congress will rise in about a fortnight, but this is mere conjecture, as it will depend on what news we receive from our Army, and some other matters. I am very sorry to be alone in so great and important a business as that of representing a whole Colony, which no one man is equal to; but how to avoid it, I know not. Whether it will be thought worth while, at this uncertainty, to send me any assistance, our honourable Convention will be judges. I shall endeavour, as far as my poor abilities will admit of, to render every service to my Country in my power. I am, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

JOHN LANGDON.

To Matthew Thornton, Esquire.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

Committee Chamber, July 3, 1775.

The Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia having undertaken to erect a Saltpetre Manufactory, and having appointed Messrs. Owen Biddle, George Clymer, John Allen, James Mease, Lambert Cadwalader, and Doctor Benjamin Rush, to superintend the same, they do earnestly request the inhabitants of this Province in general, and of this City and Liberties in particular, to furnish them with all such materials and assistance as they may require, to enable them to carry the said important and necessary Manufactory into execution with as much expedition as possible.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN BENEZET, Assistant Secretary.

By His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esquire, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief in and over the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories depending thereon, in AMERICA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral of the same:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, the General Assembly of this Province stands prorogued to the fifth day of July, instant, I have thought fit, for His Majesty's service, to prorogue, and I do by and with the advice of His Majesty's Council, further prorogue the said General Assembly to the ninth day of August next; of which all His Majesty's subjects concerned therein are required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and seal at arms at Fort George, in the City of New-York, the third day of July, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, in the fifteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, by

WILLIAM TRYON.

By his Honour's command:

SAML. BAYARD, JUN., Sec'y.

God save the King.

ADDRESS OF THE CORPORATION OF NEW-YORK TO GOVERNOUR TRYON.

Address left with his Excellency Governour Tryon, the third day of July, 1775, by the Worshipful Whitehead Hicks, Esquire, Mayor of the City of New-York:

To His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esquire, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief of the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories thereon depending, in AMERICA, and Vice-Admiral and Chancellor of the same:

The humble Address of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of NEW-YORK:

May it please your Excellency:

We wait upon you, Sir, to congratulate you on the better establishment of your health, and to bid you welcome to a people who, from the rectitude of your administration, could not part with you without the deepest regret, and who must therefore receive you again with all the confidence of safety and protection which the experience of your virtues and abilities can inspire.

Would to Heaven that an event so honourable to you as this fresh mark of the King's approbation really is, and which is so acceptable to us, had found us in a condition more propitious to your felicity; for even amidst the complicated distresses of this melancholy hour, we feel an addition to our grief, from the aspect of the times upon the happiness we sincerely wish you to enjoy.

To whatever causes the suspension of the harmony once subsisting between the Parent State and her Colonies may be imputed, be assured, Sir, that we sigh with the utmost ardour for the re-establishment of the common tranquillity, upon that ancient system of Government and intercourse which has been such a fruitful source of general prosperity and opulence.

It is with affliction we behold a Nation, as renowned for wisdom as for valour, involved in a civil war, in which disloyalty in His Majesty's American subjects to their Prince, or want of affection to their Mother Country, constitute no part of the unnatural controversy. And we trust, under a merciful God, in the aid of your intercession with His Majesty, for a speedy termination of these hostile animosities of his contending subjects, which undermine the power and threaten the destruction of the Empire.

The Governour's Answer to the Address of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of NEW-YORK, delivered to the Mayor to be laid before the Corporation.

GENTLEMEN: I receive with satisfaction your congratulations on my return to this Country, and obliging assurances of your affectionate regard from my former residence amongst you, and of your continued confidence in me at this melancholy crisis of publick affairs, already carried to an extreme much to be lamented by every good man and well-wisher of his King and Country.

I confess my disappointment at the change of circumstances in this Government, and feel the weightiest distress at the present unfriendly aspect of the times. Long residence in the Colonies, and a happy experience of repeated friendships, have, as it were, naturalized me to America, and bound me, while I remained in England, faithfully to represent the loyalty, sentiments, and situation of the inhabitants of this Province, and to support their interest with my best endeavours. At the same time, my breast glowing with an ardent zeal for the honour of my Sovereign, and affection for my native Country, I was induced to embark again for this Government, cherishing the pleasing hope of being able to contribute, in some small degree, the hastening the general wish of the Nation for a speedy and happy reconciliation between Great Britain and her Colonies. If there can be a time when it would be wisdom and humanity to listen to the calm and dispassionate voice of reason and moderation, it surely must be the present. I wish to embrace the idea, that neither disloyalty in His Majesty's American subjects, or disaffection to the Mother Country, constitute any part of the present unnatural controversy; but that the contention flows from a mere misconception of constitutional principles. The Parliament, in their Resolution of the 27th of February, having made the first advance to a measure of accommodation, it would surely be glorious in the Americans to avail themselves of so important an opportunity in so noble a cause. In the present moment, were America to liberate the restraints she has laid on her commerce and constitutional authority, and through her Provincial Assemblies grant, suitable to the ease of their circumstances, supplies to the Mother Country for the protection of the whole British State, I am confident in my own mind the controversy would fall to the ground, and that many acts of conciliatory grace would be extended to America by Great Britain, which national honour cannot suffer to have torn from her by violence.

I am acquainted, in a despatch from the Earl of Dartmouth, that the Memorial and Representation of the General Assembly of this Province, were unfortunately blended with expressions containing claims, which made it impossible for Parliament, consistent with its justice and dignity, to receive it; yet the Petition to the King has been presented to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive it with the most gracious expressions of regard and attention to the humble requests of his faithful subjects in New-York; and I am authorized to say, that nothing can give greater satisfaction to the royal breast, than to see us again a happy and united people.

WILLIAM TRYON.

New-York, July 7, 1775.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 5, 1775.]

New-York, July 3, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of Saturday last, with the resolution of Congress of the same day, and copy of the military arrangements enclosed, was delivered me at five this morning.

Permit me, Sir, to observe, that the resolution seems to be founded on a supposition that the inhabitants in the neighbourhood of Ticonderoga are a people distinct from those called Green Mountain Boys, and that they are numerous; whereas the fact is, that most of the inhabitants in the north-eastern part of the County of Albany, and in the County of Charlotte, and who reside on what are commonly called the New-Hampshire Grants, are distinguished by the appellation of Green Mountain Boys; and although they are settled in an extent of country upwards of one hundred and thirty miles in length, from nearly as far south as Albany to forty or fifty miles north of Crown Point, yet so lately has that country begun to settle, that it will be difficult (as Colonel Allen observes) to raise five hundred men in it, although there are more inhabitants, but necessarily occupied in procuring subsistence for their families. Such of them as assisted in the reduction of Ticonderoga, and afterwards garrisoned it, are already returned to their respective habitations. Hence, Sir, you will perceive that the troops in that quarter cannot be re-enforced, at any rate, by more than five hundred men, to be procured there, and those still to be levied.

From what information I have been able to procure, I suppose that the forces under Colonel Hinman's command do not exceed thirteen hundred men, including those that occupy Fort George, the landing at the north end of Lake George, and the post at the Saw-mills, and such as are necessarily employed in transporting provisions, &c., from Albany, which will probably reduce them to eleven hundred and under; and if of these I leave two hundred to garrison Crown Point and Ticonderoga, the remainder will then exceed General Carleton's regular Troops by about three hundred men only, a force very inadequate barely to attempt destroying his floating batteries, boats, and vessels, without hazarding the loss, not only of the command of the lakes, but of the fortresses in our possession on its banks. These observations I have taken the liberty to make, that Congress, by being more truly possessed of facts, may make a probable guess of the consequences that will follow an attempt which I conceive myself not at liberty to desist from making, without orders to the contrary. I shall leave this to-day, and order Brigadier Montgomery to follow as soon as possible.

Preparations are making here to fortify the pass in the Highlands. I had proposed that part of General Wooster's corps should have gone on that service. If Congress intends that any of them shall be employed in that way, they will please to signify it, as they cannot otherwise, since the last order, be moved from New-York.

I am, Sir, most respectfully and very sincerely, your obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

New-York, July 3, 1775.

SIR: I did myself the honour to write you a few hours ago; since which I have conversed with Mr. Kirkland, one of the Indian Missionaries. The information he gives me of the temper of the Indians of the Six Nations; of Colonel Johnson's nefarious designs; of the conduct of some Roman Catholick Highlanders, resident in the County of Tryon, is so interesting, that I have taken the liberty to request him to repair to Congress with all despatch.

His influence with the Indians renders him capable, and I believe there is no doubt of his willingness, to serve his Country in this critical hour.

I am, Sir, most respectfully, your obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esquire.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I do myself the honour to enclose you an estimate of such stores, &c., as at present appear to me necessary to be forwarded to Albany; the pitch, oakum, and nails, I wish to have sent with all possible despatch. I am very certain that a variety of other articles will be wanted, which I shall be better able to ascertain after my arrival at Albany, for which place I propose setting out to-morrow.

I am informed that a considerable quantity of lead was found at Ticonderoga; but if it should not equal my expectations, I may be exposed to insurmountable difficulties. I therefore wish that at least half of the quantity which I have estimated, may be ordered up without delay, together with fifty casks of powder, which I am advised will be sent you from Philadelphia.

As it is probable, from the manœuvres of Governour Carleton, that I shall speedily want a re-enforcement of Troops at Ticonderoga, and not being at liberty to remove the Connecticut Troops from hence, I entreat you will be pleased to forward whatever men may be levied in this Colony, immediately to Albany, without waiting until the corps are completed.

I hope, gentlemen, on every occasion, to be favoured with your advice. And, indeed, as the important charge conferred on me by the Continental Congress was done in deference to your polite and honourable (yet altogether unmerited) recommendation of me, I shall, with the fullest confidence, look up to you for your aid and countenance, at once to promote the publick service, and to prevent me from sinking under the weighty concerns of my office. And give me leave to assure you, that though I have the clearest conviction that I shall never be able to equal the high opinion you have induced the Congress to entertain of me, yet no effort shall be wanting on my part to deserve it as far as possible, that I may not draw disgrace on you, my Country, or myself.

I am, gentlemen, with sentiments of the most profound respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

The Gentlemen of the New-York Provincial Congress.

COMMITTEE OF SECRECY (NEW-YORK) TO MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS.

New-York, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We think it necessary to inform you, that by a vessel lately arrived from Greenock, in Scotland, we have an extract from a letter from a gentleman there, informing his correspondents here that a considerable quantity of goods was shipped in the Glasgow Packet, Captain Porterfield, who sailed from that port in April last, bound for Salem. As the vessel in all probability must be arrived, we hope that the Committee of that place have been attentive to their duty; but as they are marked for the use of the Army, we fear they may have passed unnoticed, notwithstanding the greatest vigilance.

We are, Gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

JOHN IMLAY,

DANIEL PHENIX,

Members of the Committee of Secrecy and Inspection.

PETER T. CURTENIUS (COMMISSARY) TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I have made an inquiry about the articles the Congress gave me an order for, and find that I can get coarse cloth, of different colours like the patterns, for two battalions, at seven shillings and six pence, to eight shillings per yard, and a few of them from eleven to thirteen shillings per yard, which last will do for sergeants' coats; if you think the colours differ too much, they can be dyed a dark brown at one shilling and six pence per yard. Mr. Pey, one of your members, can inform you whether it is too much. As to blue cloth, I can get enough for two battalions more, that is, if the Congress will permit Robert and John Murray to take fifteen or sixteen pieces blue strouds out of their store at Elizabethtown.

Muskets that are good I find very scarce; not fifty ready made that are good for any thing. I might get about one hundred made in a month, at eighty or eighty-two shillings a piece.

Raven's duck, none to be had as yet; but I can get about seventy pieces drilling, at two shillings and four pence per yard, which is eight pence higher than I gave for duck; and ten pieces Russia sheeting, very stout, at five pounds, ten shillings per piece, which is about three shillings per yard, but then it is a quarter of a yard wider than duck or drilling.

Canteens I can get ready made, about twenty-five hundred, of Mr. Levy, at one shilling a piece, but I would not venture to buy them, as they are something tarnished, until the Sub-Committee view them first; new ones will cost one shilling and six pence.

English spades, none to be had; socket spades can be made by our blacksmiths, which are better than English ones.

Lead in bars, none to be had. Shot I can get at forty-four shillings per hundred weight; but I can get bullets cast to any size that shall be wanted, at fifty shillings per hundred weight, which is cheaper than shot at forty-four shillings, because it wastes fourteen pounds per hundred weight.

Flints, cartouch paper, gun-worms, screw-drivers, camp kettles, haversacks, hatchets, felling axes, and pick-axes, I can get the whole quantity.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER T. CURTENIUS.

S. PATRICK TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Orange Furnace, July 3, 1775.

HONoured SIRs: The subscriber having a furnace in New-York Province, now in blast, would engage to make and deliver iron ball, of any given dimensions, any where on the North River where he can with safety land them, at fifteen Pounds per ton; and as the furnace is in blast, he would execute any order he might be favoured with expeditiously; and is, Gentlemen, your humble servant,

S. PATRICK.

The Honourable the Provincial Congress, assembled at New-York.

COLONEL HINMAN TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 3, 1775.

I would inform you that Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel Mott, who is appointed Engineer by the Colony of Connecticut, arrived here yesterday. He has taken a survey of the fortresses at Fort George and this place, and is of the opinion that they are altogether indefensible, should an attempt be made with artillery. Should a number of troops arrive from Canada sufficient to keep the field, (a thing not improbable,) these posts must of consequence fall into their hands. You will therefore see the necessity of an augmentation of troops being immediately sent, as well as a supply of gunpowder, of which we are almost destitute. The importance of maintaining these posts for the benefit of your Province in particular, and of the united Colonies in general, is such, that no arguments need be used to enforce the speedy execution of some wise and spirited measures for their defence.

It is my opinion that a sufficient number of troops should be stationed at Fort George, with a constant scouting party, in order to prevent any sudden attack from the enemy, and to keep open a safe communication with Albany. I purpose forthwith to throw up an intrenchment around the redoubt at Crown Point, in order to render the place more defensible.

My men are daily on fatigue, in repairing bridges, mending highways, removing the cannon, and other necessary employments, so that you will readily see how inadequate my numbers are to the performance of all these duties, with that speed and safety the necessity of the case requires.

I think it is absolutely necessary that a Captain's company, of those intended for this department, with suitable implements, be immediately directed to repair the roads and bridges in their way to Fort George, since it will be impracticable for the wagons to pass much longer, in the wretched condition they are in at present, especially that part between the Half-Moon and Fort George.

The troops to be forwarded should be furnished with tents, a thing of absolute necessity, inasmuch as the barracks are more crowded already than is either for the convenience or health of the soldiery. Sundry gentlemen, of late, have made application to pass these posts with letters of recommendation from the several Congresses. I should therefore think it proper that the letters they bring with them should be certified, as to their number, and to whom directed, in order to prevent the communication of any intelligence which might disserve the interest of the united Colonies.

Captain Edward Mott, who will wait on you with this, will give you farther information to whatever questions you will think proper to ask, as to the state and condition of these fortresses, and will forward any commands you will think proper to send.

I am, Sir, with respect, your very humble servant,
BENJAMIN HINMAN, Colonel.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

WALTER SPOONER TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Springfield, July 3, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The Congress of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, on the 14th day of June last, appointed Walter Spooner, Jedediah Foster, and James Sullivan, a Committee to repair to the Fortresses of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, on the Lake Champlain, to inquire into the importance of holding those posts, and the method by which they may be maintained; to establish, in the pay of said Colony, so many men to defend the same posts as they should judge necessary, not exceeding four hundred. And the said Committee were also by the said Congress directed, when they should have made themselves fully acquainted with the situation and importance of said posts, respectfully to signify their thoughts thereon to your Honours.

Wherefore, by order of said Committee, I take leave to inform you, that it is the opinion of said Committee, that such is the importance of those fortresses, that should they once be in the hands of the enemies to America, the Colony of New-York, together with the New-England Colonies, would be in continual danger of having depredations committed on them by the regular forces who would be possessed of those garrisons; and should the Canadians and savages (who we hope are not yet at enmity with us) be inclined to take part with the Ministerial Army, the distress of the Colonies before-mentioned must be extremely great.

A garrison at the south end of Lake George, however tenable, could be of but little service to the New-England Colonies; because the most easy route for an army from Quebeck into New-England, would be through Lake Champlain to South-Bay, from whence they might travel by land through the new settlements of New-York into the New-England Governments, and destroy the frontier Towns on their march; drive the farmers from their fields; prevent the large supplies of wheat and other necessaries, which may soon be expected from those new settlements; send distress and famine into the bowels of the country; and all this without being on a right line within many miles of the south end of Lake George.

I am also ordered by said Committee to signify to your Honours, that it is the opinion of said Committee that the defence of those fortresses must be supported by holding the command of Lake Champlain, which they conceive may be more easily done by having vessels of various constructions, well manned, armed, and floating there; for which purpose the Committee have stationed four hundred men there, which are all that the embarrassed circumstances of our Colony can at present admit of, to co-operate with near a thousand under the command of Colonel Hinman, who is sent to those posts by the Government of Connecticut. But whether the forces now on the lake are sufficient for the purposes aforementioned, your Honours will judge.

I am, with due respect, in behalf of said Committee, your Honours' most obedient humble servant,

WALTER SPOONER.

To the Hon. President and Members of the American Congress now sitting at Philadelphia.

WALTER SPOONER TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Springfield, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Notwithstanding the many calamities that the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay now struggles under, the Congress there are resolutely determined to leave nothing within their power undone which may have a probable tendency to preserve the rights and property of the American Colonies. In pursuance of this resolution, they, on the 14th day of June last, appointed a Committee, whereof I have the honour to be chairman, to proceed to Ticonderoga and Crown Point, to inquire into the importance of holding these posts; and among other things, beg leave to signify to you their thoughts on the subject. The Committee have made those inquiries, as they were directed, and have ordered me to take leave to inform you that it is their opinion, that should the fortresses on Lake Champlain fall into the hands of our enemies, the Colony of New-York, with the New-England Colonies, must be in the utmost insecurity; for the enemy might land at the southern end of a part of the waters of Lake Champlain, called South-Bay, from whence, as Fort Edward is razed to the foundation, there is nothing to check them, or prevent them spreading fire and devastation down to Albany, and over all the frontier Towns eastward, in New-York and the New-England Colonies.

Wherefore, it is the opinion of the Committee, that all possible care ought to be taken to keep the command of Lake Champlain, which, perhaps, may be more easily effected by armed vessels of various constructions, than otherwise.

The Committee have established on the lakes, in the pay of the Massachusetts Colony, four hundred effective men, with proper officers, which are all that the distressed state of the Colony can at present admit of; which Regiment, from the peculiar embarrassment which that Colony is now labouring under, must look for present supplies of provisions to the Colony of New-York.

While the Committee were at the posts above mentioned, there was a dangerous mutiny set on foot by some persons employed by Colonel Arnold, an officer of our Colony, who appeared to have their own interest more at heart than the publick good, which, had it not been for the influence and well-timed exertions of Judge Duer, a gentleman of the County of Charlotte, in your Colony, and the principal officers of the Connecticut Forces, might have been attended with fatal consequences. As the Committee suppose the Colony they serve to be under great obligations to that worthy gentleman, they cannot but inform his own Government of his zealous exertions for the publick good.

I am, with due respect, in behalf of the Committee, your most obedient humble servant,

WALTER SPOONER.

To the Hon. President and Members of the Convention of the Colony of New-York.

WALTER SPOONER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Springfield, July 3, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: When the Congress of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay were informed that your Government had sent Colonel Hinman to Lake Champlain, with a thousand men, to defend the important posts there, it was with the deepest concern that they saw he was not commander-in-chief of those fortresses and their appendages, and immediately despatched a Committee, whereof I have the honour to be chairman, to let the commander of their forces know, that it was the expectation of our Congress, that the Commander-in-Chief of the Connecticut Forces should be over our officers and privates. The Committee was also ordered respectfully to signify to your Honour their opinion of the necessity of holding those fortresses, as also of the most expedient method to do it.

Whereupon, they proceeded, and at Crown Point let Colonel Arnold know that it was expected he should give up the command of the garrisons, &c., to Colonel Hinman, and be under him as his chief officer there; but he declined it, and declared that he would not be second to any man, disbanded his forces, and resigned his commission. A majority of his men engaged anew under Colonel James Easton, who the Committee appointed, under the Commander of the forces of your Government on the lakes to be regulated by your martial law. And the Committee left the garrisons and appendages in peace, with much satisfaction, commanded by Colonel Hinman, who, they are confident, is fully equal to the appointment.

The Committee also order me to inform your Honour, that it is their opinion, that the abandoning the posts on Lake Champlain would probably prove the utter ruin of the New-England Governments; and that they apprehend armed vessels, floating batteries, &c., will be the surest means of commanding the lakes. The Committee would write your Honour more fully on this subject, but they are convinced, from the letters you have favoured our Congress with, that you are fully possessed of the importance of holding those fortresses.

Justice compels the Committee to let your Honour know, that on Colonel Arnold's refusing to serve under Colonel Hinman, a mutiny arose amongst some of Arnold's men, who would not engage anew in our service, which seemed to be attended with dangerous symptoms; but by the noble exertions of the officers of your Government, with those of Judge Duer, of Charlotte County, in the Colony of New-York, and the ample support by them rendered to the Committee in the most difficult situation, it was happily quelled. The particulars of it are too tedious and disagreeable for your Honour's attention, while you have constantly business of the last importance before you. But this much the Committee order me to take leave to say, that from the polite, generous, and manly disposition of Colonel Hinman, and the officers in the Connecticut Forces under him, we may gather the most happy prospects of a campaign at the Northward replete with honour and interest to the Colonies.

I am, in behalf of the Committee, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

WALTER SPOONER.

Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

GOVERNOUR WENTWORTH TO SECRETARY ATKINSON.

Castle William and Mary, July 3, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I have occasion to inspect the books of Charters in the Secretary's Office, and to make some minutes out of them. I desire you will deliver them to the bearer for that purpose, and I will be responsible for their safety and return into the Secretary's Office. I am, dear Sir, yours, &c.,

J. WENTWORTH.

Honourable Theodore Atkinson, Esq.

CONGRESS OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE TO THE MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS.

Exeter, July 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We take the earliest opportunity to convey to you some intelligence we have just received from Canada, by the way of Mr. Dean, a Missionary, lately come from that country. We enclose copies of two letters from Doctor Wheelock, and from a Committee in Hanover. Mr. Wheelock and Colonel Bedel, who will take the charge of this, will be able to give you, perhaps, some further particulars. We wish to have, as soon as possible, your judgment on the matter, and shall probably defer acting until we hear from you. If any plan of operation towards, or in Canada, is suitable, we wish to act in concert with you and the other Colonies in the neighbourhood. We trust we shall not be backward in exerting ourselves in the common defence; but would act with caution in a matter of importance.

We are, with respect, gentlemen, your friends and brethren in the common cause.

In the name and by order of the Congress:

MATTHEW THORNTON, President.

REVEREND DOCTOR WHELOCK TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Dartmouth College, June 28, 1775.

MUCH RESPECTED GENTLEMEN: Yesterday Mr. Dean returned from his tour to Canada, on which I sent him in the capacity of a Missionary, last March, with a view to strengthen and perpetuate the friendship which has lately commenced between the Indian tribes in that quarter and the Seminary, to attach them to these Colonies, and secure these frontiers from an invasion from that quarter. And on hearing his narrative, the intelligence appeared so interesting, and the authority so good, that I thought best to send him forward immediately to the honourable Continental Congress, whose determination I thought would probably be governed in some important respects by his accounts.

The Tribes of Indians near Montreal and Quebeck are doubtless well affected towards these Colonies and the cause we are engaged in. But about forty savages from a great distance, came into Montreal, with a profession of coming to a Congress or treaty, we understand, at the desire of the Governour, who ordered the Commissary to make provision for the entertainment of three hundred more, by which he supposed the number was expected soon. The neighbouring tribes will none of them join with the savages, excepting that the Caughnawagas, to save themselves from being distressed, have engaged to assist in defending him at Montreal, but to go no further, and gave the fullest evidence that this concession was only for self-preservation; and Mr. Dean is confident that the Governour cannot persuade an Indian there so much as to conduct those foreigners through the roads to our settlements. He further informs, that the inhabitants of Canada were much alarmed at our people's taking the forts on the lake; and that upon it, they (the Regulars) exerted themselves much in preparing themselves for an attack from our soldiers; and that this appeared to be their grand object when he left the place. But my son, who comes on purpose, can give you a more full and particular account of this and of the present state of Oswego, &c. And I would humbly propose to your consideration, gentlemen, whether it be not expedient, and of the first and greatest importance to the safety of the whole, that all these frontier Towns be well and speedily supplied with arms and ammunition, and as much as they can, to put themselves into a posture of defence; and that in order hereto, some method to procure such stores be pointed out to them by the honourable Congress; and also some means be provided to make it practicable by such as are poor and unable to purchase for themselves.

I most heartily pray the Father of lights to direct you in your consultations and determinations on this most interesting affair; and am, much respected gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ELEAZER WHELOCK.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress now sitting at Exeter.

P. S. My son can inform you of the measures used by the Canadian Indians to engage all their allies not to join against us.

Since I wrote the foregoing letter, I have seen a man direct from Albany, and late from Mount Johnson, who informs me that Colonel G. Johnson has lately received presents to the amount of three thousand Pounds, from the King, to be disposed of to engage the Indians within his jurisdiction against the Colonies; and that all his endeavours for that purpose have been fruitless. Not one of the Indians would go to receive the presents. That said Superintendent has withdrawn, with his family and presents, by the way of Oswego; but where he is going is not known. That the Mohawks and Oneidas are firm for the Colonies; which also agrees with other accounts.

COMMITTEES OF HANOVER AND LEBANON TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Copy of the Message.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The Provincial Congress, deeply concerned at the present alarming state of affairs, and the distresses of America, humbly request that your Excellency would appoint a day of Fasting and Prayer, to be observed throughout this Province, that a happy reconciliation may soon take place between America and the Parent State, and that, under the auspicious reign of His Majesty and his descendants, both Countries may remain united, virtuous, free, and happy, till time shall be no more.

By order of the Congress:

ARCHIBALD BULLOCH, President.

The President being informed by the Messenger, that John Jamieson and John Simpson, Esquires, were in waiting, and desired to be admitted; which being agreed to, they were desired to walk in. They then produced and delivered in to the President a Paper containing several Resolutions entered into by a number of persons, inhabitants of the Town of Savannah; which was ordered to be read, and is as follows, viz:

"At a meeting of several of the Inhabitants of the Town of Savannah, at Mrs. Cuyler's, on Friday, the 13th of June, 1775, John Mullryne, Esq., in the chair; Joseph Clay, James Mossman, Rev. Mr. J. J. Zubly, John Simpson, Noble Wimberly Jones, John Jamieson, William Moss, John Glen, Josiah Tattnall, John Graham, Lewis Johnston, William Young, Richard Wyllly, Andrew McLean, Basil Cowper, Philip Moore, George Houstoun, Joseph Butler, James Read, Thomas Ried, William Pantou, James Edward Powell, William Struthers, Alexander McGowen, John C. Lucena, Thomas Sherman, J. N. Faming, Levi Sheftall, Charles Hamilton, George Spencer, William Brown, Junior, Francis Courvoisier, James Anderson.

"Whereas, publick confusions and grievances are much increased by private dissensions and animosities:

"Resolved, therefore, nem. con., That we will use our utmost endeavours to preserve the peace and good order of this Province; and that no person behaving himself peaceably and inoffensively, shall be molested in his person or property, or even in his private sentiments, while he expresses them with decency, and without any illiberal reflections upon others.

"Whereas, the acts for raising a perpetual revenue in America, and all the measures used to enforce these acts, are not partial but general grievances, and it is more likely that redress will be obtained by the joint endeavours of all who may think these acts unconstitutional or oppressive, than by any measure that might be taken singly by individuals; therefore,

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, (as a proper measure to be pursued, because the General Assembly is not now sitting, from whom an application to the Throne must be very proper, and as no time should be lost,) that a humble, dutiful, and decent Petition be addressed to His Majesty, expressive of the sense, apprehensions, and feelings of all such as may choose to subscribe such a Petition, which it is hoped will be done by every man in the Province; and it is therefore the wish of this meeting, that such a measure be adopted by the Provincial Congress, intended to be held on Tuesday next, the fourth of July.

"Resolved, That the interest of this Province is inseparable from the Mother Country, and all the sister Colonies; and that to separate themselves from the latter would only be throwing difficulties in the way of its own relief, and that of the other Colonies, and justly incurring the resentment of all those to whose distress our disunion might cause an addition.

"Resolved, That this Province ought, and it is hoped will forthwith join the other Provinces in every just and legal measure to secure and restore the liberties of all America, and for healing the unhappy divisions now subsisting between Great Britain and her Colonies.

"Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be laid before the Provincial Congress on Tuesday, the fourth day of July next, and that Mr. Jamieson and Mr. Simpson do wait upon them with the same, as recommended to them by this meeting. By order of the meeting:

"JOHN MULLRYNE."

A motion was made and seconded, that the Paper above mentioned do lie upon the table for the perusal of the members; which being carried, the same was ordered to lie upon the table accordingly.

A motion was made and seconded, that this Congress do put this Province upon the same footing with our sister Colonies; which being put, it was ordered that it be taken into consideration to-morrow morning.

Thursday, July 6, 1775.

The Order of the Day being read, the same was taken into consideration, and, after some deliberation, it was unanimously

1. Resolved, That this Province will adopt and carry into execution all and singular the measures and recommendations of the late Continental Congress.

2. Resolved, In particular, that we, in behalf of ourselves and our constituents, do adopt and approve of the American Declaration or Bill of Rights, published by the late Continental Congress, and also of their several resolves made in consequence of some infractions thereof.

3. That from and after this day we will not receive into this Province any Goods, Wares, or Merchandise, shipped from Great Britain or Ireland; or from any other place, any such Goods, Wares, or Merchandises as shall have been exported from Great Britain or Ireland; nor will we import any East-India Tea from any part of the world, nor any Molasses, Syrups, Paneles, Coffee, or Pimento, from the British Plantations, or from Dominica; nor Wines from Madeira or the Western Islands, nor foreign Indigo.

4. That we will neither import or purchase any Slave imported from Africa, or elsewhere, after this day.

5. As a Non-Consumption Agreement, strictly adhered to, will be an effectual security for the observation of the Non-Importation, we, as above, solemnly agree and associate, that, from this day, we will not purchase or use any Tea imported on account of the East-India Company, or any on which a duty hath or shall be paid; and we will not purchase or use any East-India Tea whatever, nor will we, nor shall any person for or under us, purchase any of these Goods, Wares, or Merchandises we have agreed not to import, which we shall know, or have cause to suspect were imported after this day.

6. The earnest desire we have not to injure our fellow-subjects in Great Britain and Ireland, and the West-Indies, induces us to suspend a Non-Exportation until the tenth day of September, 1775, at which time, if the acts and parts of acts of the British Parliament hereinafter mentioned are not repealed, we will not, directly or indirectly, export any Merchandise or commodity whatsoever to Great Britain or Ireland, or the West-Indies, except Rice to Europe.

7. Such as are merchants, and use the British and Irish trade, will give orders as soon as possible to their factors, agents, and correspondents in Great Britain and Ireland, not to ship any Goods to them, on any pretence whatever, as they cannot be received in this Province; and if any merchant residing in Great Britain or Ireland shall, directly or indirectly, ship any Goods, Wares, or Merchandise for America, in order to break the said Non-Importation Agreement, or in any manner contravene the same, on such unworthy conduct being well attested, it ought to be made publick, and on the same being so done, we will not, from thenceforth, have any commercial connexions with such merchant.

8. That such as are owners of vessels will give positive orders to their Captains or masters not to receive on board their vessels any Goods prohibited by the said Non-Importation Agreement, on pain of immediate dismissal from their service.

9. We will use our utmost endeavours to improve the breed of Sheep, and increase their numbers to the greatest extent; and to that end we will kill them as sparingly as may be, especially those of the most profitable kind, nor will export any to the West-Indies or elsewhere; and those of us who are or may become overstocked with, or can conveniently spare any Sheep, will dispose of them to our neighbours, especially to the poorer sort, on moderate terms.

10. That we will, in our several stations, encourage frugality, economy, and industry, and promote agriculture, arts, and the manufactures of British America, especially that of Wool; and will discountenance and discourage every species of extravagance and dissipation, especially horse-racing, and every kind of gaming, cock-fighting, exhibition of shows, plays, and other expensive diversions and entertainments; and on the death of any relation or friend, none of us, or any of our families, will go into any farther mourning dress than a black crape or ribbon on the arm or hat for gentlemen, and a black ribbon and necklace for ladies; and we will discontinue the giving of gloves and scarfs at funerals.

11. That such as are venders of Goods or Merchandise will not take advantage of the scarcity of Goods that may be occasioned by this Association, but will sell the same at the rates we have been respectively accustomed to do for twelve months last past; and if any vender of Goods or Merchandise shall sell any such Goods or Merchandise on higher terms, or shall in any manner, or by any device whatsoever, violate or depart from this agreement, no person ought, nor will any of us deal with any such person, or his or her factor or agent, at any time thereafter for any commodity whatever.

12. In case any merchant, trader, or other persons shall attempt to import any Goods or Merchandise into this Province after this day, the same shall be forthwith sent back again, without breaking any of the packages thereof.

13. That a Committee be chosen in every Town, District, and Parish within this Province, by those who pay towards the general tax, whose business it shall be attentively to observe the conduct of all persons touching this Association; and when it shall be made appear, to the satisfaction of a majority of any such Committee, that any person within the limits of their appointment has violated this Association, that such majority do forthwith cause the truth of the case to be published in the Gazette, to the end that all such foes to the rights of British America may be publickly known and universally contemned as the enemies of American liberty, and thenceforth we will break off all connexion with him or her.

14. That a Committee of Correspondence to this Province do frequently inspect the entries of the Custom-House, and inform the Committees of the other Colonies which have acceded to the Continental Association, from time to time of the true state thereof, and of every other material circumstance that may occur relative to this Association.

15. That all manufactures of this Province be sold at reasonable prices, so that no undue advantage be taken of a future scarcity of Goods.

16. And we do further agree and resolve, that we will have no trade, commerce, dealings, or intercourse whatsoever with any Colony or Province in North America which shall not accede to, or which shall hereafter violate this Association, but will hold them as unworthy of the rights of freemen, and as inimical to the liberties of their Country.

And we do solemnly bind ourselves and our constituents, under the ties of virtue, honour, and love of our Country, to adhere to this Association, until such parts of the several acts of Parliament, passed since the close of the last war, as impose or continue duties upon Tea, Wines, Molasses, Syrups, Paneles, Coffee, Sugar, Pimento, Indigo, foreign Paper, Glass, and Painters' Colours, imported into America; and extend the powers of the Admiralty Courts beyond their ancient limits, deprive American subjects of trial by Jury, authorize the Judge's certificate to indemnify the prosecutor from damages that he might otherwise be liable to from a trial by his peers, require oppressive security from claimants of Ships or Goods seized before he is allowed to defend his property, are repealed; and until that part of the Act of 12 George 3, ch. 24, entitled "An Act for the better securing His Majesty's Dock-Yards, Magazines, Ships, Ammunition, and Stores," by which any person charged with committing any of the offences therein described in America may be tried within any Shire or County within the Realm, is repealed; and until the four acts passed in the last session of Parliament, viz: that for stopping the Port and blocking up the Harbour of Boston, that for altering the Charter and Government of the Massachusetts-Bay, and that which is entitled "An Act for the better administration, &c.," and that for extending the limits of Quebeck, &c., are repealed; and until the two acts passed in the present session of Parliament, the one entitled "A Bill to restrain the Trade and Commerce of the Colonies of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and South-Carolina, to Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Islands in the West-Indies, under certain conditions and limitations;" and the other, "An Act commonly called the Fishery Bill."

Friday, July 7, 1775.

The following is his Excellency's Answer to the Message of this Congress:

Savannah, July 7, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I have taken the opinion of His Majesty's Council relative to the request made by the gentlemen who have assembled together by the name of a Provincial Congress, and must premise, that I cannot consider that meeting as constitutional; but as the request is expressed in such loyal and dutiful terms, and the ends proposed being such as every good man must most ardently wish for, I will certainly appoint a day of Fasting and Prayer to be observed throughout this Province.

JAS. WRIGHT.

To Stephen Drayton, Esq., and the other Gentlemen who waited on the Governour.

A motion was made and seconded, that the thanks of this Congress be given to his Excellency the Governour, for his Answer to the Message of this Congress, and his ready compliance with their request; which, being put, unanimously passed in the affirmative.

Ordered, That Dr. Zubly, John Smith, and Joseph Clay, be a Committee for that purpose.

A motion was made and seconded, that five persons be chosen to represent this Province in the Continental Congress appointed to be held at the City of Philadelphia on the 10th of May last; and the question being put, it passed unanimously in the affirmative.

The Congress then proceeded to the choice, when John Houstoun and Archibald Bullock, Esquires, the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones, and Lyman Hall, Esq's, were duly elected.

Dr. Zubly expressed his surprise at being chosen, and said that he thought himself, for many reasons, a very improper person; but the choice was insisted upon, and the Doctor declared he would by no means go unless he had the approbation of his congregation; whereupon, Noble Wimberly Jones and John Houstoun, Esquires, were appointed to request their consent.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Secret Committee be appointed, which being agreed to, it was

Resolved, That the President do nominate seven persons to be that Committee, whose business it shall be to be vigilant and active in the discovery of all matters which may affect the publick; and that they shall have right to lay all such intelligence and information before the President of this Congress while sitting, and in its recess before the President of the Council of Safety, in order that the evil designs of wicked men may be early frustrated.

A motion was made and seconded, that the Congress do petition the King upon the present unhappy situation of affairs; which being agreed to, it was ordered that Dr. Zubly do prepare and bring in the same.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Letter be forthwith wrote to the President of the Continental Congress, giving him an account of the proceedings of this Congress; which being agreed to, it was ordered that Dr. Zubly, John Smith, William Young, William Le Conte, and William Gibbons, Esquires, be a Committee for that purpose.

John Walton, Esquire, who was elected as well for Wrightsborough Township as for the Town and District of Augusta, came in and took his seat for the former.

A motion was made and seconded, that an Address be presented to his Excellency the Governour by this Congress; which being agreed to, it was ordered that Dr. Zubly, Basil Cowper, John Walton, Joseph Clay, and Edward Telfair, be a Committee to draw up the same.

Saturday, July 8, 1775.

Resolved, That this Congress are of opinion that the Paper delivered into this Congress on the second day of its meeting, ought not to have been entitled or dressed in the form of Resolves, but rather as recommendations, or in nature of a Petition or Address to this Congress.

Resolved, nevertheless, from the desire this Congress hath to promote union and concord among ourselves, and as it does not appear that the said Paper was intended to be considered as coming from a distinct or independent body, that therefore the matter contained in the same (being such as is in the general agreeable to us) shall be duly considered and attended to.

A motion was made and seconded, that a sum, not exceeding Ten Thousand Pounds sterling, be provided to defray the necessary services of this Province in the present alarming and distracted state of affairs, which passed unanimously in the affirmative.

A motion was then made and seconded, that the Congress resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to consider ways and means for raising and sinking the said sum of Ten Thousand Pounds sterling; which being agreed to, the Congress resolved itself into a Committee accordingly.

The President having resumed the Chair, Mr. Clay, from the Committee of the Whole Congress, reported, that they had entered upon the consideration of ways and means, had made some progress therein, and desired leave to sit again.

The President reported to the Congress that he had, in obedience to the resolution of yesterday, nominated seven persons to be a Secret Committee.

Doctor Zubly, who was ordered to prepare and bring in a Petition to His Majesty, reported that he had done so, and produced a Paper containing the same, which he delivered in to the President; and the said Paper being read, and approved of, it was Resolved that the President do sign the same.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Committee of Intelligence be appointed; which being agreed to, it was Ordered, That William Young, David Zubly, Stephen Drayton, Daniel Roberts, John Glen, Edward Telfair, William Ewen, Joseph Clay, and George Walton, Esquires, be that Committee.

William Young, Esquire, of the Committee appointed to write a Letter to the President of the Continental Congress, reported, that they had done so, and delivered a Paper in to the President containing the same; which being read, and approved of, it was Resolved, That the President do sign the same, and that it be forthwith sent.

Monday, July 10, 1775.

The following Resolves were unanimously entered into:

Whereas, by the unrelenting fury of a despotick Ministry, with a view to enforce the most oppressive Acts of a venal and corrupted Parliament, an army of mercenaries, under an unfeeling commander, has actually begun a civil war in America: and whereas, the apparent iniquity and cruelty of these destructive measures have, however, had this good effect, to unite men of all ranks in the common cause: and whereas, to consult on means of safety, and the method of obtaining redress, the good people of this Province of Georgia have thought proper to appoint a Provincial Congress, the Delegates met at the said Congress, now assembled from every part of the Province, besides adopting the Resolutions of the late Continental Congress, find it prudent to enter into such other Resolutions as may best express their own sense and the sense of their constituents, on the present unhappy situation of things, and therefore thought fit and necessary to resolve as follows, viz:

Resolved, That we were born free, have all the feelings of men, and are entitled to all the natural rights of mankind.

Resolved, That by birth or incorporation we are all Britons, and whatever Britons may claim as their birthrights is also ours.

Resolved, That in the British Empire, to which we belong, the Constitution is superiour to every man or set of men whatever, and that it is a crime of the deepest dye, in any instance, to impair or take it away, or deprive the meanest subject of its benefits.

Resolved, That that part of the American Continent which we inhabit was originally granted by the Crown, and the Charter from Charles the Second expressly makes its constitutional dependance on the Crown only.

Resolved, That those who would now subject all America, or this Province, to dependancy on the Crown and Parliament, are guilty of a very dangerous innovation, which in time will appear as injurious to the Crown as it is inconsistent with the liberty of the American subject.

Resolved, That by the law of nature, and the British Constitution, no man can legally be deprived of his property without his consent, given by himself or his representatives.

Resolved, That the Acts of the British Parliament for raising a perpetual revenue on the Americans, by laying a tax on them without their consent, and contrary to their protestations, are diametrically opposite to every idea of property, to the spirit of the Constitution, and at one stroke deprive this vast Continent of all liberty and property, and as such, must be detested by every well-wisher to Great Britain and America.

Resolved, That the subsequent laws, made with a view to enforce these Acts, viz: The Boston Port Bill; the alteration of their Charter; the Act to carry beyond sea for trial; and (what refines upon every species of cruelty) the Fishery Bill; are of such a complexion that we can say nothing about them for want of words to express our abhorrence and detestation.

Resolved, That the loyalty, patience, and prudence of the inhabitants of New-England, under their unparalleled pressures, having been construed into a timidity and a dread of Regular Troops, a civil war, in support of acts extremely oppressive in themselves, hath actually been begun, and that there is too much reason to believe that plans have been in agitation big with every thing horrible to other Provinces; plans as rash, barbarous, and destructive, as the cause which they were intended to serve.

Resolved, That in these times of extreme danger, our Assembly not being permitted to sit, we must either have been a people without all thought or counsel, or have assembled as we now are in Provincial Congress, to consult upon measures which, under God, may prove the means of a perpetual union with the Mother Country, and tend to the honour, freedom, and safety of both.

Resolved, That the Province bears all true allegiance to our own rightful Sovereign, King George the Third, and always will, and ought to bear it, agreeable to the Constitution of Great Britain, by virtue of which only the King is now our Sovereign, and which equally binds Majesty and Subjects.

Resolved, That we are truly sensible how much our safety and happiness depend on a constitutional connection with Great Britain; and that nothing but the being deprived of the privileges and natural rights of Britons could ever make the thought of a separation otherwise than intolerable.

Resolved, That in case His Majesty, or his successors, shall, at any time hereafter, make any requisition to the good people of this Province, by his representative, it will be just and right that such sums should be granted as the nature of the service may require, and the ability and situation of this Province will admit of.

Resolved, That this Province join with all the Provinces in America, now met by Delegates in Continental Congress, and that John Houstoun and Archibald Bullock, Esquires, the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Lyman Hall, and Noble Wimberly Jones, Esquires, be the Delegates from this Province, and that any three constitute a quorum for that purpose.

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed, whose duty it shall be to see that the Resolutions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses be duly observed, and that every person who shall act in opposition thereto, have his name transmitted to the Continental Congress, and his misdeeds be published in every American paper.

Resolved, That with all such persons, except the indispensable duties that we owe all mankind, (bad men and enemies are not excepted,) we will have no dealings nor connection; and we extend this our Resolution also to all such persons or corporations in Great Britain who have shown themselves enemies to America.

Resolved, That we will do what in us lies to preserve and promote the peace and good order of this Province; and should any person become an innocent sufferer on account of these grievances, we will do whatever we justly may for his relief and assistance.

Resolved, That in such calamitous times as the present every possible indulgence ought to be given to honest debtors; that it would be ungenerous, unless there appear intention of fraud, in any gentleman of the law to sue without previous notice; and any person so sued may apply to the Committee, and should it appear to them that the creditor is in no danger of losing his money, or can be properly secured, they shall interpose their friendly offices to persuade him to drop the prosecution; and every prosecutor that shall appear to take advantage of the confusion of the times to distress his debtor, ought to be publickly pointed out and held in abhorrence.

Resolved, That notwithstanding, in a late bill for restraining the trade of several Provinces in America, this Province is excepted, we declare that we look upon this exception rather as an insult than a favour; as being meant to break the union of the Provinces, and as being grounded on the supposition that the inhabitants of such excepted Province can be base enough to turn the oppression of America into a mean advantage.

Tuesday, July 11, 1775.

John Houstoun and Noble Wimberly Jones, Esquires, appointed to request the consent of Doctor Zubly's congregation for their permission for him to go to Philadelphia, reported, that they had done so, and that the said congregation had voted that they were willing to spare their Minister for a time for the good of the common cause. Doctor Zubly then declared that he was willing to go, and thanked the Congress for so signal a mark of honour and confidence.

Mr. Clay, from the Committee appointed to draw up an Address to his Excellency the Governour, from this Congress, reported, that they had done so, and delivered it in to the President; which was ordered to be read, and is as follows, viz:

To His Excellency Sir JAMES WRIGHT, Baronet, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of GEORGIA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral of the same:

May it please your Excellency:

We, his Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Delegates of this Province, in Provincial Congress met, beg leave to address your Excellency.

In these very critical and alarming times the good people of this Province find themselves under an absolute necessity to take some measures for the security and preservation of their liberties, and every thing that is near and dear to them; and they have accordingly chosen a large number of persons to meet together at Savannah, to consult on the means to obtain redress under our many and very heavy grievances. These being accordingly met, (to be distinguished from the usual representation,) have styled themselves a Provincial Congress; and from the number and character of the names, which your Excellency may see in our last Gazette, your Excellency will be convinced the Province was never more fully represented in any Assembly; though possibly this measure never would have taken place, had we not, from several successive prorogations or adjournments, but too much reason to fear your Excellency had received very strong instructions not to suffer the Assembly to enter into any measures to secure the rights of America, or even to petition for relief, unless in terms which would have been giving up the rights, and fixing lasting disgrace on the petitioners.

Although there is no doubt but a great majority of the inhabitants of this Province always looked upon the claim of Parliament to take away the property of Americans as illegal and oppressive, yet, from a variety of causes, not unknown to your Excellency, this Province, in the American chain, has hitherto been the defaulting link. We have now joined with the other Provinces in the Continental Congress, and have sent a Petition to His Majesty, appointed Delegates to the American Congress, and entered into such Resolutions, which we mean inviolably to adhere to, as will convince the friends and foes of America that we would not live unworthy of the name of Britons, or labour under the suspicion of being unconcerned for the rights and freedom of America.

Extracts of some letters which are inserted in Parliamentary proceedings, widely differ from what must appear to every unprejudiced person the real state of this Province. We are not acquainted with an individual in Georgia that looks upon the claims of Parliament as just; and all men speak with abhorrence of the measures made use of to enforce them. Our fellow-subjects who formerly entered a dissent, which we find was transmitted to the Minister in terms that bespeak the great pleasure it gave the transmitter, now generally say, they never differed with America as to the reality of grievances, but only in the mode of obtaining redress.

Though candour may allow these mutilated extracts, laid before Parliament, were probably rather designed by the Minister to screen himself, and justify his own measures, than to give a just and true account of what information he might have received, yet we cannot help observing the general purport of these letters seem to have a much greater regard to the designs of the Minister, than to give an impartial account of the real state of things. Other Provinces, no doubt, if they find themselves mentioned in any part of them, will view them in what light they may think fit; but as to any prejudicial informations they may contain against many persons in this Province, while it is not to be expected they will give up their feelings as private men, your Excellency may be assured we shall always pay due respect to His Majesty's representative, and shall with great pleasure acknowledge every service your Excellency may hereafter render to Great Britain and America, whose interest we know, and whose connection we wish to be forever inseparable.

Your Excellency may be assured these are objects which we have greatly at heart, and shall ever do what in us lies towards a reconciliation with our Parent State on constitutional principles, as well as endeavour to preserve the peace and good order of this Province.

Resolved, That the foregoing Address be signed by the President, and be presented to his Excellency the Governor; and that Stephen Drayton, Edward Telfair, William Le Conte, John Walton, George Houstoun, and Philip Box, be a Committee to present the same.

Wednesday, July 12, 1775.

The Congress resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration ways and means to raise and sink Ten Thousand Pounds sterling; and, after some time spent therein, the President resumed the Chair.

Resolved, That the Congress being a full representation of the whole Province, the members of the same, their constituents, and all others resident or holding property within the same, are bound to contribute, by an equal and general tax, towards the sinking the Ten Thousand Pounds sterling.

Resolved, That the Congress while sitting, and the Council of Safety in its recess, have power to issue Certificates from time to time, as occasion shall require, to the amount of Ten Thousand Pounds sterling, and that all such Certificates shall be signed by the Treasurers, and at least three of the Members of the Council of Safety.

Resolved, That any person who shall not receive any such Certificate in payment will be guilty of a breach of the publick faith, and ought to be considered as an enemy to the Province, and treated accordingly.

Resolved, That the said Certificate be sunk in three years after a reconciliation shall take place between Great Britain and the Colonies.

Thursday, July 13, 1775.

Resolved, That this Congress do approve of, and adopt the Association entered into at Savannah, on the fifth day of June last past, viz:

Association unanimously entered into by the Provincial Congress, at SAVANNAH, in GEORGIA, on THURSDAY, the thirteenth of JULY, 1775.

GEORGIA.

Being persuaded that the salvation of the rights and liberties of America depend, under God, on the firm union of the inhabitants in its vigorous prosecution of the measures necessary for its safety; and convinced of the necessity of preventing the anarchy and confusion which attend the dissolution of the powers of Government, we, the free-men, freeholders, and inhabitants of the Province of Georgia, being greatly alarmed at the avowed design of the Ministry to raise a revenue in America, and shocked by the bloody scene now acting in the Massachusetts-Bay; do, in the most solemn manner, resolve never to become slaves; and do associate, under all the ties of religion, honour, and love to our Country, to adopt, and endeavour to carry into execution, whatever may be recommended by the Continental Congress, or resolved upon by our Provincial Convention, appointed for the purpose of preserving our Constitution, and opposing the execution of the several arbitrary and oppressive Acts of the British Parliament, until a reconciliation between Great Britain and America, on constitutional principles, which we most ardently desire, can be obtained; and that we will in all things follow the advice of our General Committee, appointed respecting the purposes aforesaid, the preservation of peace and good order, and the safety of individuals and private property.

Resolved, That John Smith, Basil Cowper, George Houstoun, Joseph Clay, William Young, Philip Box, Seth John Cuthbert, William O'Bryan, George Walton, William Le Conte, William Gibbons, Samuel Elbert, Edward Telfair, and Oliver Bowen, be a Committee to present the Association to all the inhabitants of the Town and District of Savannah, to be signed; in doing which, expedition is particularly recommended, and an account of all who decline signing shall be returned to the General Committee.

Friday, July 14, 1775.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Committee be appointed, to report their opinion who shall be qualified to vote for Delegates to sit in future Congresses, and the most equal method of representation; and the same being agreed to, a Committee was appointed accordingly.

Committee: Stephen Drayton, John Glen, and Joseph Clay, Esquires.

Resolved, That in every case where a summons shall be applied for, the Magistrate to whom such application shall be made, do in the first place, and before the issuing of such summons, give notice thereof, either by personal information, message, or letter, to the party defendant, and also use his best endeavour to compromise and settle the matter, and, unless the defendant has discovered circumstances of fraud or delay, and is ready and willing to give security for the debt, and shall actually offer to do so, payable in a reasonable time, no such summons ought to be issued. And in case a warrant in a civil case shall be applied for, the same ought not to be granted, unless there appears to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, that there are good and sufficient grounds, besides the plaintiff's oath, to apprehend the defendant means to abscond; but the same method ought to be observed as is recommended respecting summonses.

Mr. Drayton, from the Committee appointed to report their opinion who shall be qualified to vote for Delegates to sit in future Congresses, &c., reported, as the opinion of that Committee, that every man contributing towards the general tax shall be qualified to vote for Delegates to sit in future Congresses, and that the following proportion will be the most equal representation, viz: the Town and District of Savannah shall have seventeen members; District of Little Ogeechee, three; Vernonburgh, two; Acton, two; Sea Islands, three; Goshen and Abercorn, two; Parish of St. Matthew, seven; St. George, nine; St. Paul, nine; St. Philip, seven; St. John, twelve; St. Andrew, nine; St. David, three; St. Patrick, two; St. Thomas, two; St. Mary, two; St. James, two; Ceded Lands, three: and that the President and thirty-four members do constitute a Congress to proceed upon business.

Resolved, That the foregoing Report be approved of, and that Delegates be elected by the persons, and in the proportion therein mentioned.

Resolved, That the following form of Delegation be recommended to the inhabitants of the several Parishes and Districts throughout the Provinces, to prevent clashing and unequal powers being given by different Parishes and Districts, viz :

GEORGIA.

The affairs of the Continent of America being now brought to a truly alarming and critical situation, and there being no other method left but that the whole body of the people unite as one, in opposing such acts as tend utterly to destroy the liberty, property, and birthright of America; and it having been thought necessary and convenient, in order to consult on proper ways and means for our mutual security, to assemble and convene the people in each Colony and Province, by their representatives, into one body or Council, styled a Provincial Congress, who shall act in all cases whatsoever for the good of the common cause. Now, therefore, be it known, that we, the inhabitants of Parish, (or District,) being met together in order to choose such men as are capable of the important trust, do choose A, B, C, D, &c., being the number determined on in the Provincial Congress, held at Savannah, 4th July, 1775, to represent us in the Provincial Congress to be held at said Town of Savannah on the fourth December next. And we do require you, the said A, B, &c., to do, transact, join, and concur with the other Delegates of this Province, so sitting as above recited, in all things as shall appear eligible and fit at this alarming time, for the preservation and defence of our rights and liberties; and we further empower you to choose other Delegates, if in your wisdom you think proper, or if any requisition in that case should be made by the Grand Continental Congress, in order to join or succeed the Delegates in that Congress, now chosen by the people of this Province. And we do bind ourselves solemnly, under the sacred ties of religion, virtue, honour, and love of our Country, to abide by, enforce, and carry into execution, or endeavour so to do, at the risk and peril of our lives and fortunes, whatsoever you, with the other Delegates, shall resolve and agree upon to be necessary for the well-doing and preservation of the violated rights of this Province, and the Continent in general.

Signed by us this . . . day of, 1775.

Saturday, July 15, 1775.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Committee be appointed to report their opinion with respect to the better governing the Militia of this Province; which being agreed to, a Committee was appointed accordingly, to wit: Stephen Drayton, Samuel Elbert, Dr. Brownson, and Peter Tarlin.

A motion was made and seconded, that a Committee be appointed to communicate to the inhabitants of this Province, an account of the disputes subsisting between Great Britain and the Colonies, and also the proceedings of this Congress; and the same being agreed to, it was Ordered, That the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones, William Young, and George Walton, be a Committee for that purpose.

Resolved, That the Congress shall expire on the twentieth day of August next; that a new election be made at such times between the said twentieth day of August and first of September, as the inhabitants of the several Parishes and Districts (except the Town and District of Savannah) shall think fit, respectively, and that the members so elected, with those who shall afterwards be chosen for the Town and District of Savannah, do meet in General Congress at Savannah, on the fourth day of December next, or sooner, if the Council of Safety shall think it expedient to summon them.

Resolved, That the Members of this Congress use every endeavour to give as publick notice of elections as possible; and that each Parish and District shall, at the time of such elections, likewise choose a sufficient number as a Parochial or District Committee, to enforce the different Resolves of the Continental and Provincial Congresses.

Resolved, That the inhabitants of the Town and District of Savannah do meet at Savannah on Friday, the fifteenth day of September next, to choose seventeen Delegates to represent them in Provincial Congress.

Resolved, That the several Delegates for the Town and District of Savannah, or a majority of them, together with all other Delegates who shall happen to be in Town, shall be a General Committee for the Province; that they shall have power to superintend, direct, and advise all the Parochial or District Committees, and, in case of difficulty, to inform them of their duty. And any person who shall apprehend himself aggrieved by the decision of any of the Parochial or District Committees, may appeal to the said General Committee, who shall hear his case, and do justice according to the spirit and intention of this Congress. And in case such appellant shall still be dissatisfied, he may lay his case before the next Congress, provided there be no delay occasioned by any such appeal, but the sentence of each Committee shall take effect immediately after being pronounced.

Monday, July 17, 1775.

Resolved, That the Reverend Mr. Haddon Smith, by twice refusing to comply with the request of this Congress, and to join on a day of Fasting and Prayer, appointed by the Continental Congress to be observed throughout all America, besides the day appointed by his Excellency the Governour, at the request of this Congress, has given too much reason to believe he does not wish that the happy event, mentioned in the American Proclamation, may take place, and that the said Mr. Haddon Smith has thereby incurred the censure of this Congress, and ought to be considered as unfriendly to America.

Resolved nemine contradicente, That the Delegates appointed by this Congress to go to Philadelphia, do apply to the Continental Congress to incorporate this Province with the other united Provinces of North America, and that they pledge the faith of us and our constituents, to contribute an adequate part of the expenses which have or may accrue, in the defence of the violated rights of America.

Resolved, That the Council of Safety have full power, upon every emergency, during the recess of Congress, to give such information and propose such measures, by way of advice to our Continental Delegates, as the circumstances of the case may require, and they shall think conducive to the publick good.

Resolved, That it be strongly recommended to the friends of America in this Province, that they use their utmost endeavours to preserve peace and good order, and to cultivate harmony with one another, and always to avoid national reflections, which can only tend to produce divisions and jealousies among the inhabitants.

Resolved, That this Congress do adjourn to the nineteenth day of August next, and that the General Committee have power to call it to sit at Savannah sooner, if they, upon any emergency, shall deem it expedient for the good of the Province. By order of the Congress.

A true copy from the Minutes :

GEORGE WALTON, Secretary.

Savannah, July 25, 1775.

To the Inhabitants of the Province of GEORGIA :

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN : We are directed to transmit to you an account of the present state of American affairs, as well as the proceedings of the late Provincial Congress.

'It is with great sorrow we are to acquaint you, that what our fears suggested, but our reason thought impossible, is actually come to pass. A civil war in America is begun. Several engagements have already happened. The friends and foes of America have been equally disappointed. The friends of America were in hopes British Troops could never be induced to slay their brethren. It is, however, done, and the circumstances are such as must be an everlasting blot on their character for humanity and generosity. An unfeeling commander has found means to inspire his troops with the same evil spirit that possesseth himself. After the starving, helpless, innocent inhabitants of Boston delivered up their arms, and received his promise that they might leave that virtuous devoted Town, he is said to have broke his word, and the wretched inhabitants are still kept, to fall a prey to disease, famine, and confinement. If there are powers that abhor injustice and oppression, it may be hoped such perfidy cannot go long unpunished. But the enemies of America have been no less disappointed. Nothing so contemptible in their eyes like the rabble of an American Militia, nothing more improbable than that they would dare to look Regulars in the face, or stand a single fire. By this time they must have felt how much they were mistaken. In every engagement the Americans appeared with a bravery worthy of men that fight for the liberties of their oppressed Country; their success has been remarkable; the number of the slain and wounded on every occasion vastly exceeds theirs; and the advantages they gained are the more honourable, because, with a patience that scarce has an example, they bore every act of injustice and insult till their lives were attacked, and then gave the fullest proof that the man of calmness and moderation in council, is usually also the most intrepid and courageous in battle.

You will doubtless lament with us the hundreds that died in their Country's cause; but does it not call for greater sorrow that thousands of British soldiers fought and found their deaths, when they were active to enslave their brethren and their Country?

However irritating all those proceedings, yet so unnatural is this quarrel, that every good man must wish and pray that it may soon cease, that the injured rights of America may be vindicated by milder means, and that no more blood may be shed, unless it be of those who fomented, and mean to make an advantage of those unhappy divisions.

From the proceedings of the Congress, a copy of which accompanies the present, you will be convinced that a reconciliation, on honourable principles, is an object which your Delegates never lost sight of. We have sent an humble and manly Petition to His Majesty; addressed his representative, our Governour; provided, as far as in our power, for internal quiet and safety; and Delegates will soon attend the General Congress, to assist and co-operate in every measure that shall be thought necessary for the saving of America.

His Excellency, at our request, having appointed the nineteenth instant as a day of humiliation, and news being afterwards received that the Continental Congress had recommended the twentieth instant to be observed as such, both days have been observed with a becoming solemnity, and we humbly hope many earnest prayers have been presented to the Father of Mercies on that day, through this extensive Continent, and that he has heard the cries of the destitute, and will not despise their prayers.

You will permit us most earnestly to recommend to you a steady perseverance in the cause of liberty, and that you will use all possible caution not to say or do any thing unworthy of so glorious a cause; to promote frugality, peace, and good order; and, in the practice of every social and religious duty, patiently to wait for the return of that happy day when we may sit quietly under our vine and fig-tree, and no man make us afraid.

J. J. ZUBLY,
N. W. JONES,
GEORGE WALTON.

The following are copies of a Petition from the Inhabitants of Georgia, which was presented to the King on Friday, October twenty-eighth, by Governour Johnstone, and of Letters which accompanied it:

Savannah, July 14, 1775.

To GEORGE JOHNSTONE, Esquire:

SIR: It is with a singular pleasure I am desired to transmit the accompanying papers to you, sensible that in a cause where the essential rights of so many millions are concerned, no endeavours on your part will be wanting to give them their full effect.

The many proofs which the people of this Province had of your magnanimity, justice, and disinterested integrity, in establishing the neighbouring Colony of West-Florida, have rendered your name respected throughout America; and your subsequent conduct has endeared you still further to every lover of mankind in the eastern and western world. These motives have determined the Congress in the application they now make.

I am sensible if the same Councils prevail, the task of conveying such disagreeable truths to the Throne must prove very painful; but we believe there is no person who would undertake the office with less reluctance, or execute it with more becoming duty and respect to His Majesty.

I am, &c.

Savannah, Georgia, July 14, 1775.

SIR: When turbulent and wicked minds are employed solely to raise commotions in the State, and disturb the tranquillity of the subject; when, by their baneful influence, life, property, and freedom, are inhumanly invaded, and the innocence and loyalty of thousands are unjustly questioned; we, the inhabitants of Georgia, by a just delegation from the different Parishes, being now convened in Congress in this Town, have resolved to address His Majesty in a dutiful petition, setting forth our grievances, and the bad tendency of the many wicked and treacherous proceedings against this Continent, that have passed since the year 1763.

Although we know the fate of all other petitions on this head, and cannot flatter ourselves that we should meet with one different; yet, as the right of petitioning is the subject's, we beg leave to enclose this our prayer and remonstrance to you, hoping and trusting on the noble sentiments you entertain and support, in favour of us much injured Americans, that, countenanced by one of your great abilities, it may approach the Throne.

We assure you, Sir, we are, and always were, firmly attached to His Majesty's family; nor can any thing shake our integrity. But when, by evil and wicked Ministers, our birthright as Englishmen shall be violated, that integrity must urge us to hand down to our children a right so invaluable.

We conceive our immediate dependance on the Crown can by no means hinder our doing that indispensable duty in joining with the rest of America against acts that tend to enslave a people whose loyalty and faith were never even suspected, until the actions of the times wanted an excuse.

We have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servants,

WILLIAM YOUNG, EDW. TELFAIR,
JOHN GLEN, DANIEL ROBERTS,
DAVID ZUBLY, JUN., WILLIAM IRVEN,
STEP. DRAYTON,

A Committee of Intelligence.

To George Johnstone, Esquire.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty:

The humble Address and Representation of his loyal subjects, the Delegates of the Inhabitants of GEORGIA, now met in Provincial Congress:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY: Though we bring up the rear of American petitioners, and, from the fate of so many petitions presented to your Majesty from America, your great City of London, and others of your European subjects, have a most melancholy prospect, we still hope He, by whom Kings rule, and to whom Monarchs are accountable, will incline you to pay some regard to our most humble and faithful representation.

In times like these, when the edge of present feeling is blunted by the expectation of calamities still greater, we must take the liberty to speak before we die. We would acquaint our Sovereign with things which greatly affect his interest; we would endeavour to awaken the feeling and pity of our common father.

Your Majesty is the rightful sovereign of the most important empire in the universe. The blessings of Providence on your arms has put a country in America under you of greater importance and extent than several kingdoms in Europe. In this large extent of territory, by some late acts, Popery is not only tolerated, (which we conceive would have been but an act of justice,) but an indulgence has been granted, little short of a full establishment, to a religion which is equally injurious to the rights of sovereigns and of mankind. French and arbitrary laws have there, by authority, taken place of the just and mild British Constitution; and all this has been done with a professed and avowed design to overawe your Majesty's ancient Protestant and loyal subjects, some of whom had no small share in the merit of that conquest. Acts to raise a perpetual revenue on the Americans, without their consent, have been enacted, which at one stroke turn all your American subjects into slaves, and deprive them of that right which the most oppressive task-master does not deny to the servant bought with his money. Experience must now have shown, as it will clearer, should these acts be enforced, that instead of increasing the revenue, or lessening the burden of your European subjects, they can only serve to increase their taxation.

Laws which we conceive fraught with so much injustice, have been attempted to be enforced by equal cruelty; and whenever we thought ourselves at the height of our troubles, your Majesty's Ministers have stretched their unhappy ingenuity to find out new methods of distress; and it is believed methods have been more than thought of, too shocking to human nature to be even named in the list of grievances suffered under a British King.

The goodness of God hath made your Majesty the father of a very numerous issue, on whom we place the pleasing hopes of a Protestant succession; but your Majesty's arms in America now every day make mothers childless, and children fatherless. The blood of your subjects has been shed with pleasure, rather than with pity. For an act which amounted to no more, even under the worst construction, than an irregular zeal for constitutional liberty, and without any step taken to find out the supposed guilty persons, the capital of your American Dominions has been blocked up, deprived of its trade, and its poor of subsistence. Thousands, confessedly innocent, have been starved, ruined, driven from, or kept like prisoners in their own habitations; their cries and blood, innocently shed, have undoubtedly, and daily do reach His ears who hateth injustice and oppression.

Believe us, great Sir, America is not divided: all men (Crown officers not excepted) speak of these acts and measures with disapprobation; and if there has been some difference of opinion as to the mode of relief, the rigorous experiments which your Ministry thought fit to try on the Americans, have been the most effectual means to convince these of the iniquitous designs of your Ministry, and to unite them all as in a common cause.

Your Majesty's Ministers, after introducing the demon of discord into your Empire, and driving America to the brink of despair, place all their dignity in measures obstinately pursued, because they were once wantonly taken. They hearkened to no information, but what represented Americans as rebels or cowards. Time will every day make it clearer how much they were infatuated and mistaken.

Too long, we must lament, have these men imposed on your paternal affection. Deign now, most gracious Prince, in their room, to hearken to the cries of your loyal and affectionate subjects of this extensive Continent; let the goodness of your own heart interpose between weak or wicked Ministers and millions of loyal and affectionate subjects; no longer let the sword be stained with the blood of your own children; recall your troops and fleets; and if any misunderstanding remains, let the Americans be heard, and justice and equity take place; let us be ruled according to the known principles of our excellent Constitution, and command the last shilling of our property, and the last drop of our blood in your service.

Uncertain as to the event of this our humble representation, it affords us a relief that we may, unrestrained, apply to the great and merciful Sovereign of the whole earth, who will not despise the prayer of the oppressed; and to him we most ardently pray, that the wicked being removed from before the King, the King's Throne may be established in righteousness.

By order of the Congress at Savannah, this 14th day of July.

ARCH. BULLOCK, President.

THE LAW OF LIBERTY: A SERMON ON AMERICAN AFFAIRS, PREACHED AT THE OPENING OF THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF GEORGIA, BY JOHN J. ZUBLY, D. D.

JAMES ii. 12.—So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty.

There was a time when there was no King in Israel, and every man did what was good in his own eyes. The consequence was a civil war in the nation, issuing in the ruin of one of the tribes, and a considerable loss to all the rest.

And there was a time when there was a King in Israel, and he also did what was right in his own eyes, a foolish son of a wise father; his own imprudence, the rashness of his young counsellors, his unwillingness to redress the grievances of the nation, and the harsh treatment he gave to those who applied for relief, also brought on a civil war, and issued in the separation of the ten tribes from the house of David. He sent his treasurer to gather an odious duty or tribute, but the children of Israel stoned him that he died. And when he gathered one hundred and fourscore thousand men, that he might bring again the kingdom unto Rehoboam, God sent him a message, "Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren; return every man to his house, for this thing is done of me." God disapproved of the oppressive measures and ministry of Rehoboam, and that King's army appears more ready to obey the command of their God, than slay their brethren by orders of a tyrant. "They obeyed the voice of the Lord, and returned from going against Jeroboam."—2 Chron. x. 18. xi. 4.

The things that happened before are written for our learning. By comparing past times and proceedings with these that are present, prudence will point out many salutary and religious lessons. The conduct of Rehoboam verifies the lamentation of his father, "Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child."—Eccles. x. 16. A very small degree of justice and moderation might have preserved his kingdom, but he thought weapons of war better than wisdom. He hearkened not, neither to the people, nor to some of his more faithful counsellors; and the consequence was, that instead of enslaving the ten tribes who stood up for their liberty, God gave Judah to be servants to the King of Egypt, that they might learn the difference between his service and the service of the kingdoms of the nations. A people that claim no more than their natural rights, in so doing, do nothing displeasing unto God; and the most powerful monarch that would deprive his subject of the liberties of man, whatever may be his success, he must not expect the approbation of God, and in due time will be the abhorrence of all men.

In a time of publick and general uneasiness, it behooves both superiours and inferiours to consider. It is easy to extinguish a spark; it is folly to blow up discontent into a blaze. The beginning of strife is like the letting out of waters, and no man may know where it will end. There is a rule given to magistrates and subjects, which, if carefully attended to, would secure the dignity and safety of both, but which, if not duly regarded, is usually attended with the worst consequences. The present, my hearers, will easily be allowed, is a day of trouble, and surely in this day of adversity we ought to consider. When a people think themselves oppressed and in danger, nothing can be more natural than that they should inquire into the real state of things, trace their grievances to their source, and endeavour to apply the remedies which are most likely to procure relief; this I take to be the design of the present meeting of persons deputed from every part of the country. And as they have thought proper to open and begin their deliberations with a solemn address unto God, and the consideration of his holy word, I most cheerfully comply with their request to officiate on this occasion, and shall endeavour, as I may be enabled, to point out such directions from the holy scriptures as may make us wise in the knowledge of time, and direct us how to carry ourselves worthy of the character of good subjects and Christians. Whatever may be necessary for this purpose, I take to be comprehended in the apostolical rule, which I have laid down as the subject of this discourse; "So speak, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

There are two things which properly come before us, viz:

First. That we are to be judged by the law of liberty; and Second. The exhortation to act worthy, and under the influence of this important truth on every occasion.

A law is a rule of behaviour, made under proper authority, and with penalties annexed suitable to deter the transgressions. As all laws suppose man to be in a social state, so all laws ought to be made for the good of man. A law that is not made by such as have authority for so doing, is of no force; and if authority makes laws destructive in themselves, no authority can prevent things from finally taking their natural course.

Wherever there is society there must also be law; it is impossible that society should subsist without it. The will, minds, tempers, dispositions, views, and interests of men are so very different, and sometimes so opposite, that without law, which cements and binds all, every thing would be in endless disorder and confusion. All laws usually wear the complexion of those by whom they were made; but it cannot be denied that some bad men, from a sense of necessity, have made good laws, and that some good men, from mistake or other weaknesses, have enacted laws bad in themselves, and pernicious in their consequences.

All human laws partake of human imperfection. It is not so with the laws of God; he is perfect, and so are all his works and ways. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart. The commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. All his judgments are truth, and righteousness altogether."—Psalm xix.

Among men every society and country has its own laws and form of government, which may be very different, and cannot operate beyond their limits; but those laws and that form of government are undoubtedly best, which have the greatest tendency to make all those that live under them secure and happy. As soon as we consider man as formed into society, it is evident that the safety* of the whole must be the grand law which must influence and direct every other. Men did not pass from a state of nature into a state of society, to render their situation more miserable and their rights more precarious. That government and tyranny is the hereditary right of some, and that slavery and oppression is the original doom of others, is a doctrine that would reflect dishonour upon God. It is treason against all mankind; it is indeed an enormous faith that millions were made for one. Transubstantiation is but a harmless absurdity, compared with the notion of a divine right to govern wrong, or of making laws which are contrary to every idea of liberty, property, and justice.

The law which the Apostle speaks of in our text, is not a law of man, but of Him who is the only lawgiver, that can save and condemn, to whom all owe obedience, and whose laws none can transgress with impunity.

Though all the laws that God ever gave unto man are worthy of God, and tend to promote the happiness of those to whom they were given, yet we may observe a very striking variety in the different laws which he gave at different times and to different people. "He shewed his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel; he has not dealt so with any other nation." Ps. cxlviii. 18, 19.

To the generality of mankind he gave no written law, but yet left not himself without a witness among them; the words of the law were written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while excusing or else accusing one another. It cannot be said they were without law, whilst what they were to do, and what they were to forbear, was written in their hearts.

To Israel God came with a fiery law in his hands; it was given with the most awful solemnity upon Mount Sinai. And as the sum and substance of all their ceremonial, political and moral law centered in the ten commandments, so the sum and substance of these are comprehended in love to God and love to man, which, as our Lord himself informs us, contain all the law and all the prophets.

All manifestations of the will of God have been gradual; and it is probable the means of knowing God will be progressive through different ages, till eternity gives the good man a full sight of God in his immediate presence. During the dispensation of the old testament and the ceremonial law, a spirit of bondage obtained unto fear, the law was a schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ; neither did the law make any thing perfect but the bringing in of a better hope. Grace and truth were brought to light by Jesus Christ; and hence the dispensation of the gospel under which we live, is called the law of liberty.

Though there is a manifest distinction between law and gospel, and sometimes these two things are even opposed to one another, yet the doctrine of the gospel is also called "The law of faith," Rom. iii. 17.; partly because it was usual with the Jewish writers to call every doctrine a law, and partly also because the doctrine of the gospel presents us with a rule of life, which all its professors are bound to obey; hence they are said to be "not without law, but under the law of Christ," 1 Cor. ix. 11.; and hence our apostle speaks of a royal law, which, though we cannot obey in perfection, nor derive any merit from our imperfect obedience, we cannot neglect without danger, nor disobey without shewing our disregard to the doctrine of the gospel in general.

It deserves very particular attention that the doctrine of the gospel is called a law of liberty. Liberty and law are perfectly consistent. Liberty does not consist in living without all restraint; for were all men to live without restraint, as they please, there would soon be no liberty at all. The strongest would be master, the weakest go to the wall; right, justice, and property, must give way to power, and, instead of its being a blessing, a more unhappy situation could not easily be devised unto mankind, than that every man should have it in his power to do what is right in his own eyes. Well regulated liberty of individuals is the natural offspring of laws, which prudentially regulate the rights of whole communities; and as laws which take away the natural rights of men are unjust and oppressive, so all liberty which is not regulated by law is a delusive phantom, and unworthy of the glorious name.

The gospel is called a law of liberty, because it bears a most friendly aspect to the liberty of man. It is a known rule, Evangelium non tollit politias, the gospel makes no alteration in the civil state; it by no means renders man's natural and social condition worse than it would be without the knowledge of the gospel. When the Jews boasted of their freedom, and that they never were in bondage, our Lord does not reprove them for it, but only observes, that national freedom still admits of improvement: "If the Son shall make you free, then are you free indeed." John viii. 16. This leads me to observe that the gospel is a law of liberty in a much higher sense. By whomsoever a man is overcome, of the same he is brought into bondage; but no external enemy can so completely tyrannize over a conquered enemy, as sin does over all those who yield themselves its servants. Vicious habits, when once they have gained the ascendant in the soul, bring man to that unhappy pass, that he knows better things and does worse. Sin, like a torrent, carries him away against knowledge and conviction, while conscience fully convinceth him that he travels the road of death, and must expect, if he so continues, to take up his abode in hell; though his decaying body clearly tells him sin breaks his constitution, as well as wastes his substance; though he feels the loss of credit and wealth, still sin has too strong a hold of him to be forsaken; though he faintly resolves to break off, yet, till the grace of God brings salvation, when he would do good, evil is present with him. In short, instead of being under a law of liberty, he is under the law of sin and death; but whenever he feels the happy influence of the grace of the gospel, then this "law of liberty makes him free from the law of sin and death," Rom. viii. 2. It furnisheth him not only with motives to resist, but with power also to subdue sin; sin reigns no longer in his mortal body, because he is not under the law but under grace. By this law of liberty he is made free from sin, and has his fruit unto holiness, and the end of it eternal life. There is another reason why the gospel is called a law of liberty, which is to distinguish it from the ceremonial law under the Mosaic dispensation; a yoke, of which an Apostle saith, neither they nor their fathers were able to bear. It was superadded on account of their transgressions, and suited to the character of a gross and stubborn nation, to whom it was originally given. They were so prone to idolatry, and so apt to forget their God, their notions were so gross and carnal, that a number of external rites and ceremonies became necessary to put them in mind of him, and to attach them to some degree of his worship and service. This, however necessary, was a heavy burden; it bid them "touch not, taste not, handle not." It required of them expensive sacrifices, and a costly and painful service. It was attended with the most fearful threatenings. If any man brake Moses' law, he died under two or three witnesses; and the very spirit they then received, was a spirit of bondage unto fear; whereas the gospel dispensation breatheth a spirit of confidence, and under the law of liberty we call upon God, as Abba, Father. By this law of liberty the professors of the gospel will be judged.

Every man is a rational, and therefore accountable, creature. As a creature he must needs depend on his Creator; and as a rational creature he must certainly be accountable for all his actions. Nothing is more evident than that man is not of himself; and if once we admit that he holds his existence, his faculties and favours from God that made him, it becomes a very obvious conclusion that his Maker must have had some view in giving him existence, and more understanding than to the beasts of the field, neither can it be a matter of indifference to him whether man acts agreeably or contrary to his designs. The Creator of the natural world is also its moral ruler; and if he is now the proprietor and ruler of intelligent beings, at some time or other he must also be their judge.

If God had not made his will known unto man, there could have been neither transgression nor judgment. If it should be said that God has not manifested himself alike unto all men, and that some have much smaller opportunities to know his will and their duty than others, it is enough to observe, that no man will be judged by a rule of which it was impossible he should have any knowledge. Every work and every man will be brought into judgment, and the judgment of God will never be otherwise than according to truth; but those that never had the law of liberty will not be judged by that law; and those that have been favoured with the revelation of the gospel, will be more inexcusable than any others if they neglect the day of their visitation. "As many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law, shall be judged by the law." Rom. ii. 12. All men are under some law; they feel, they are conscious, that they are so; the thoughts which already excuse or condemn one another, are an anticipation of a final and decisive judgment, when every man's reward will be according to his works.

That all those who heard and professed to believe the gospel will be finally judged by that, we have the fullest assurance. God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to his gospel. "The word that I have spoken," saith Christ, "the same will judge them that heard it on the last day." John xii. 48. It greatly interests us clearly to know what is the import and consequence of being judged by the gospel as a law of liberty, and it contains the following things:

The general character, all the thoughts, words, and actions, together with the general conduct of all those who professed the gospel, will be brought to the test, and tried by this rule. Man's own opinion of himself, the good opinion of others, will here stand him in no stead; his character will not be determined by his external appearance, but by his inward reality. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Sam. xvii. 7. The self-righteous pharisee will be rejected, notwithstanding his fair appearance and boasting; the penitent publican will be received, though he has nothing to plead, but Lord have mercy on me a sinner. The law is spiritual, and no law more so than the law of the gospel; it requires not merely an external obedience, but an internal conformity to the will of God; it demands truth in the inward part; it looks not only to the actions that are done, but to the principle from which they flow; we must judge of man's inward disposition by his visible action; but God judges of the actions of men according to their invisible spring; thoughts are out of the reach of human cognizance, but they are the first object of divine notice: there is not a word that drops from our tongue but what our judge hears; whatever we do, or whatever we neglect, is all under his immediate eye; and he not only attends to our general character, but also to every thought, word, or action, and the prevailing complexion of all these taken together form our true and real character.

In the judgment, according to this law, our character, words, thoughts, and actions will be brought to the test of this rule; our conduct will be compared with these precepts; this is the balance of the sanctuary in which the professors of the gospel shall be weighed, and as they shall be found approved or deficient, their case must be determined. Those whose temper and actions shall be found conformable to the law of liberty, will be acquitted, graciously accepted, and made ever happy; and those who turned the grace of God into wantonness, and made the liberty of the gospel a cloak for their sins, will be finally rejected. The gospel informs us, that a day is already appointed for that purpose; it acquaints us with the person of our judge, and every circumstance, as well as the rule, according to which he will proceed in judgment. Perhaps on that day, when all nations shall appear before the judge, and he will divide them as a shepherd divideth the sheep from the goats, distinct places will also be allotted to those who are to be judged by natural conscience and the law of nature, and those who have been favoured with a divine revelation, and especially with the light of the gospel: the people of Nineveh will arise against empty professors of the gospel, and will condemn them. Those who have been exalted above others in means and privileges, will sit proportionably lower than those who have made a better improvement of lesser means; and, notwithstanding the fondest hope and finest profession, it is a determined rule of the law of liberty, that "except our righteousness shall exceed that of the Scribes and Pharisees, we shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."

It deserves our peculiar attention, that the Apostle considers the gospel as a law of liberty, at the same time when he sets it before us as the rule by which we are to be judged. We are not to imagine because the gospel is a law of liberty, therefore men will not be judged; on the contrary, judgment will be the more severe against all who have heard and professed the gospel, and yet walked contrary to its precepts and doctrine. As the transgression of a law of liberty must be more inexcusable than the transgression of a law unjust or oppressive in itself, or even the ceremonial law, which was given only for a certain period, and to answer temporary purposes; so their judgment and doom must be proportionably heavier, who have sinned against love and liberty, as well as against power and justice.

According to this law the fate of men will not only be determined, but sentence will also be put into execution. God sitteth on the throne of judgment every day, and judgeth righteously; but he hath moreover appointed a particular day when he will manifest his power and justice before the whole creation; when the dead, both small and great, will stand before God; when those that acted agreeable to the law of liberty, will attain the fulness of glory of the freedom of the sons of God, and when he will also take vengeance on all that have not known God, and have not obeyed his holy gospel. This naturally leads to the second thing proposed, to take a nearer view of the importance of the exhortation, "So speak, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

It seems as though the Apostle had an eye to some particular branch of the law of liberty, i. e. the love which we owe unto our neighbour, and that his design is to obviate the mistake as though men might be considered as fulfilling the law of Christ, in paying respect to some of its commands and prohibitions, at the same time that they were entirely regardless of the rest. He assures them, that "whosoever shall keep the whole law, but shall transgress in one point" (e. g. having respect of persons) "is guilty of all." On this principle the Apostle builds the general exhortation, "So speak, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." This implies,

1. Be thoroughly convinced of the certainty of a judgment to come, and that it extends to you, to all your thoughts, words, and actions. There is not any truth of greater moment, nor perhaps more easily forgotten. The belief or unbelief of this important doctrine must have the most sensible effects. All the Apostles frequently put their hearers in mind of a judgment to come; and there is not any truth more necessary to be frequently inculcated and daily thought on; and wherever this truth is really believed and felt, it will have a constant and natural influence on the behaviour of those who truly believe it.

2. See to it that in judgment you may stand. All men will be brought into judgment, but few will be able to stand; none will be excused, or be able to withdraw, and only those who have acted worthily will meet with the divine acceptance. The difference will be amazing and beyond all conception: an eternity of happiness, which eye has not seen, ear has not heard, and which never entered into the heart of any man, lies on the one side; and despair, misery, and torment on the other. Those that are able to stand, will meet with the smiles and approbation of their judge; and to all the rest the King will say, "These mine enemies that would not have me to bear rule over them, bring them here, and slay them before mine eyes." Those that believe and are convinced of this awful alternative, should certainly make it their care that they may be able to stand in judgment; neither should the persuasion of this only influence their conduct in general, but these words ought to be considered as a rule, which we ought to have constantly before our eyes in all our discourses and every undertaking; we should ever "so speak, and so act, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

I shall draw a few inferences, before I conclude with a more particular address to the worthy gentlemen at whose request I preach on this occasion.

1. The gospel is a law of liberty.

A late writer* asserts, "every religion countenances despotism, but none so much as the Christian." This is a very heavy charge against religion in general, but bears hardest on the Christian. Whether it proceeds from malice, ignorance, or misapprehension, it is needless to determine: but if Christianity be a law of liberty, it must be obvious how ill-grounded is such a charge against it. It cannot be denied but some Christian writers have wrote against the rights of mankind. All those who stand up for unlimited passive obedience and non-resistance, may have given but too much cause for such surmises and suspicions; but the truth is, that both those which make this charge, and those who gave occasion for it, were alike ignorant of the spirit and temper of Christianity; and it may well be doubted whether the venders of such odious doctrines, who foisted tenets, so abominable and injurious to mankind, into the system of Christian religion, have not done that holy religion greater hurt, under the pretence of friendship and defence, than its most barefaced enemies by all their most violent attacks. Some Christian divines have taught the enormous faith, that millions were made for one; they have ascribed a divine right to Kings to govern wrong: but what then? Are such abominable doctrines any part of Christianity, because these men say so? Does the gospel cease to be a law of liberty, because some of its professors pervert it into an engine of tyranny, oppression, and injustice?

The assertion, that all religion countenances despotism, and Christianity more than any other, is diametrically opposite to fact. Survey the globe, and you will find that liberty has taken its seat only in Christendom, and that the highest degree of freedom is pleaded for and enjoyed by such as make profession of the gospel.

There are but two religions which are concerned in this charge; the Jewish and the Christian. Natural religion, writers of this kind, I suppose, would not include in their charge; if they do, they set all religion at variance with the rights of mankind, contrary to the sense of all nations, who are generally agreed, that, abstractly of a world to come, religion is of real service and necessity to mankind, for their better government and order.

As to the Jewish religion, it seems really strange that any should charge it with favouring despotism, when by one of its express rites, at certain times, it proclaimed "Liberty throughout the land, to the inhabitants thereof." Levit. xxv. 10. It required their Kings "not to be lifted up in their hearts above their brethren." Deut. xvii. 20. And the whole system of that religion is so replete with laws against injustice and oppression, it pays such an extraordinary regard to property, and gives such a strict charge to rule in justice and the fear of God, and to consider those over whom they judge as their brethren, even when dispensing punishments, and forbids all excess in them, that it is really surprising any one acquainted with its precepts should declare it favorable to despotism or oppression.

The Christian religion, while it commands due respect and obedience to superiors, no where requires a blind and unlimited obedience on the part of the subjects; nor does it vest any absolute and arbitrary power in the rulers. It is an institution for the benefit, and not for the distress of mankind. It preacheth not only "glory to God on high," but also "peace on earth, and good will among men."

The gospel gives no higher authority to magistrates than to be "the ministers of God, for the good of the subject." Rom. xiii. From whence it must surely follow, that their power is to edify, and not to destroy: when they abuse their authority, to distress and destroy their subjects, they deserve not to be thought ministers of God for good; nor is it to be supposed, when they act so contrary to the nature of their office, that they act agreeable to the will of God, or in conformity to the doctrine of the gospel.

The gospel recommends unto masters to forbear threatenings, and to remember that they also have a master in heaven; it assures them that the eye of God is equally upon the servant and the master, and that with God there is no respect of persons: it commands masters, from the most solemn considerations, to give unto servants that which is just and equal: it saith to the meanest slave, "Art thou called, being a servant, care not for it, but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather." 1 Cor. vii. 21.

The doctrine of the gospel has that regard to property, that it commands even soldiers: "Do violence to no man, and be content with your wages." Luke iii. 14. That a Paul sent back a runaway slave, though now converted, and belonging to his intimate friend, and at a time when he seems to have stood in real need of his services, from a delicacy that he would do nothing without the owner's mind, lest his benefit should appear as if it were of necessity, and not willingly. Philem. xiv. From the same spirit of justice, a Zaccheus, after his conversion, restored fourfold what before he had taken from any by false accusation; surely, then, the spirit of the gospel is very friendly to the rights and property of men.

The gospel sets conscience above all human authority in matters of faith, and bids us to "stand fast in that liberty wherewith the Son of God has made us free." Gal. v. 1. Freedom is the very spirit and temper of the gospel: "He that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman. Ye are bought with a price, be ye not the servants of men." 1 Cor. vii. 22, 23. At the same time that it commands us to submit to every ordinance of men, it also directs us to act "as free, and not using liberty as a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God." 1 Pet. iii. 13-18.

Those, therefore, that would support arbitrary power, and require an unlimited obedience, in vain look for precedents or precepts for such things in the gospel, an institution equally tending to make men just, free, and happy here, and perfectly holy and happy hereafter.

2. The main design of the gospel is not to direct us in our external and civil affairs, but how we may at last stand with comfort before God, the judge of all.

Human prudence is to be our guide in the concerns of time; the gospel makes us wise unto salvation, and points out the means to be pursued, that it may be well with us in the world to come. As rational creatures, we are to make use of our reason; as Christians, we are to repent and believe the gospel. Motives of a worldly nature may very properly influence us in our worldly concerns; we are created not only for eternity, but also for time: it is not at all improper for us to have a due regard for both. The gospel will regulate our desires and restrain our passions as to earthly things, and will raise us at the same time above time and sense, to objects of a nature more worthy of ourselves. A due regard for, and a frequent meditation on, a judgment to come, will greatly assist us in all our concerns; and this very consideration the gospel holds out to us in the clearest manner. It not only affirms, as a truth, what reason and conscience might consider only as probable, but it takes away, as it were, the veil from between us and things to come; it gives us a present view of the future bliss of saints, and the terrors and despair of sinners: rather an historical account than a prophetick description of all the proceedings of the dreadful pleasing day; it clearly points out the road to destruction, and the way to escape; it affords us a plain and general rule to obtain safety and comfort, when it bids us, "So speak, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

This general rule may also be of considerable service in extraordinary and particular cases. It is impossible to provide express directions for every particular case; and in the course of things circumstances may happen when a good man may be at a loss to know his duty, and find it difficult so to act as to obtain his own approbation. There may be danger of going beyond, and danger in not coming up to, the mark. To act worthy of God, who has called us, is the general rule of the Christian at all times, and upon every occasion; and did we but always follow this rule, what manner of persons should we then be! But in cases of intricacy, we may still be in doubt what may be most for the glory of God, and most consistent with our duty. Sometimes, also, our relative duties may seem to come in competition with one another, and we may hesitate in our own mind which for the present has the strongest call. We would fain obey our superiors, and yet we cannot think of giving up our natural, our civil and religious rights, nor acquiesce in or contribute to render our fellow-creatures or fellow-citizens slaves and miserable. We would willingly follow peace with all men, and yet would be very unwilling that others should take the advantage of a pacifick disposition to injure us in hopes of doing it with impunity. We would express duty, respect, and obedience to the king, as supreme, and yet we would not wish to strengthen the hands of tyranny, nor call oppression lawful: in such a delicate situation it is a golden rule, "So to speak, and so to do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." Nothing has a greater tendency to make men act wrong than the disbelief of a future judgment; and nothing will more effectually restrain and direct them than the full persuasion that such an event will certainly take place; nothing would have a happier tendency to make us act with prudence, justice, and moderation, than the firm persuasion that God will bring every work into judgment, and every secret thing, whether it be good or bad.

Neither could I think on any direction more applicable to the design of our present meeting, or which I might more properly recommend to the respectable gentlemen now met together to consult on the recovery and preservation of the liberties of America, and who chose to begin their deliberations with a solemn act of worship to Almighty God, who has established government as his ordinance, and equally abhors licentiousness and oppression; whose singular blessing it is if subjects enjoy a righteous Government, and under such a Government lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

You are met, gentlemen, in a most critical time, and on a most alarming occasion, not in a legislative capacity, but (while the sitting of the usual representation is not thought for the King's service, or necessary for the good of this Province) you are chosen by the general voice of this Province to meet on their behalf, to consult on such measures as, in our local circumstances, may be most to the real advantage, and tend to the honour of our Sovereign, as well as the good and safety of this Province, and of all this great Continent. For the sake of the auditory, I shall briefly state the immediate causes that have given rise to this Provincial and a General American Congress, and then offer such humble advice as appears to me most suitable to our circumstances.

To enforce some acts for laying on a duty to raise a perpetual revenue in America, which the Americans think unjust and unconstitutional, which all America complains of, and some Provinces have in some measure opposed,* a fleet and army has been sent to New-England, and after a long series of hardships by that Province patiently endured, it is now out of all question that hostilities have been commenced against them; blood has been shed, and many lives have been taken away; thousands, never so much as suspected of having any hand in the action which is made the pretence of all the severity now used against that Province, have been and still are reduced to the greatest distress. From this other Provinces have taken the alarm: an apprehension of nearer foes, not unlikely to appear as auxiliaries in an unjust cause, has thrown our neighbours into arms; how far and wide the flame so wantonly kindled may be permitted to spread, none can tell; but in these alarming circumstances the liberty of this Continent, of which we are a part, the safety and domestick peace of this Province, will naturally become a subject of your deliberations; and here I may well adapt the language of old, "There was no such deed done nor seen from the day that America was first settled unto this day; consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds." Judges xix. 30. I mean not to anticipate and direct your counsels; but from your desire I should speak on this occasion, I take it for granted you will permit me to offer such hints as may appear suitable to the place and design of our present meeting.

In the first place, as there is no evil in a city in which the hand of God may not be seen, so in vain is salvation

* This opposition in some Provinces consisted in sending the tea, on which this duty was to be paid, back to England, not suffering it to be sold or landed in others; and in Boston, when they were prevented from sending it back, it was entirely destroyed, but no person hurt, nor any blood shed.

looked for from the hills and from the mountains, but can come from Him only who has made heaven and earth. This undoubtedly is a day of trouble, but God saith to his people, "Call upon me in a day of trouble, and I will deliver thee." Ps. l. 15. "What nation has God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for?" Deut. iv. 7. If this be our first step, if first of all we look unto him from whom our help cometh, we may hope all will be well at last. Let us be thoroughly convinced of this, we must stand well with God, else it can never be well with us at all; without him and his help we can never prosper. The Lord is with you, if you are with him: "If you seek him, you will find him; but if you forsake him, you will be forsaken by him." 2 Chron. xv. 2. If God be for us, who can be against us? if he be against us, who can be for us? Before we think on, or look any where else, may our eyes be unto God, that he may be gracious unto us. Let us humbly confess and speedily turn from our sins, deprecate his judgment, and secure his favour. "Rend your hearts, and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord your God, for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil; who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him, even a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the Lord your God." Joel ii. 13, 14.

Let it be a standing rule with every one that is to sit in council upon this occasion, "so to speak, and so to do, as one that is to be judged by the law of liberty." Let us most carefully avoid every thing that might make us incur the displeasure of God, and wound our own consciences. The effects of your deliberation may become very serious and extensive, and the consequences extremely important: think therefore before you speak, deliberate before you execute, and let the law of liberty, by which you are hereafter to be judged, be the constant rule of all your words and actions. Far be it from us to be reduced under laws inconsistent with liberty, and as far to wish for liberty without law; let the one be so tempered with the other, that when we come to give our account to the supreme Lawgiver, who is the great judge of all, it may appear we had a due regard to both, and may meet with his approbation.

Such always hath been, and such is still the attachment of America to the illustrious house of Hanover, that I need not put you in mind of our duty to the King as supreme. By our law the King can do no wrong; but of his present Majesty, who is universally known to be adorned with many social virtues, may we not justly conclude that he would not do any wrong, even though he could? May we not hope, that to the greatness of a monarch he will superadd the feelings of the man, the tenderness of a father? May we not hope, that when the truth of things, the tears of his suffering subjects, the distresses caused by acts extremely ill advised, once reach his notice, a generous pity will force his heart, and that pity, when he feels it, will command redress? "The heart of the King is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water, and he turneth it as he pleaseth." Prov. xxi. 1. Most earnestly therefore let us pray, that in this great and most important matter also God may give unto the King an understanding heart, that power may be governed by wisdom, and the wheels of Government roll on with justice and moderation.

Should you think that all our present distress is owing to evil counsellors, nothing need to hinder you from praying that God would turn their counsels into foolishness: you may make it your earnest request, both in publick and in private, that the wicked being removed from before the King, his throne may be established in righteousness; that the rod of the oppressor may be broken, and justice and equity take place of tyranny and oppression.

It may be owing to nothing but the firm attachment to the reigning family, that so many Americans look upon the present measures as a deep laid plan to bring in the Pretender. Perhaps this jealousy may be very groundless; but so much is certain, that none but Great Britain's enemies can be gainers in this unnatural contest*.

Never let us lose out of sight that our interest lies in a

* Were it designed to give the Pretender an opportunity to raise divisions in Great Britain, starve the manufacturers, send away troops from Ireland and Scotland, and breed civil war in America, must all be circumstances too favourable, and, I may say, very tempting to promote such a project.

perpetual connection with our Mother Country. Notwithstanding the present unwise and harsh measures, there are thousands in Great Britain that think with us, and wish well to the American cause, and make it their own: let us convince our enemies, that the struggles of America have not their rise in a desire of independency, but from a warm regard to our common Constitution; that we esteem the name of Britons, as being the same with freemen: let every step we take afford proof how greatly we esteem our Mother Country, and that, to the wish of a perpetual connection, we prefer this only consideration, that we may be virtuous and free.*

Let me entreat you, gentlemen, think coolly, and act deliberately: rash counsels are seldom good ones: Ministerial rashness and American rashness can only be productive of untoward compounds: inconsiderate measures, framed on the other side of the Atlantic, are the cause of all our mischiefs; and it is not in the least probable that inconsiderate measures in America can be productive of any good. Let nothing be done through strife and vain glory; let no private resentment nor party zeal disgrace your honest warmth for your country's welfare: measures determined on by integrity and prudence, are most likely to be carried into execution by steadiness and moderation. Let neither the frowns of tyranny, nor the pleasure of popularity, sway you from what you clearly apprehend just and right, and to be your duty. Consider how much lies at stake; how greatly your religion, your liberty, your property, your posterity, is interested. Endeavour to act like freeman, like loyal subjects, like real Christians, and you will "so speak, and so act, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." Act conscientiously, and with a view to God, then commit your ways to him; leave the event with God, and you will have great reason to hope that the event will be just, honourable, and happy.

And now, gentlemen, you have the wishes and prayers of every thoughtful person, that your deliberations may be carried on with candour, unanimity, and prudence; may be blessed to preserve the quietness of this province, and co-operate in restoring the rights and tranquillity of all America, as well as promote the prosperity of the whole British empire. This will afford you a heartfelt satisfaction, and transmit your name to posterity with honour, when all those who had opposite views, and sought their greatness in the ruin of others, will be held in abhorrence and detestation.

I have but a few hints to give to my hearers in general.

* The idea of a separation between America and Great Britain is big with so many and such horrid evils, that every friend to both must shudder at the thought. Every man that gives the most distant hint of such a wish, ought instantly to be suspected as a common enemy; nothing would more effectually serve the cause of our enemies, than any proposal of this kind; all wise men and all good men would immediately speak, write, and act against it: such a proposal, whenever it should be made, would be an inlet to greater evils than any we have yet suffered. But what America detests as the greatest evil, a British Ministry has taken the greatest pains to effect; has wasted British blood and treasure to alienate America and Great Britain; the breach is growing wider and wider, it is become like a great sea; every moment is a loss that is not improved towards bringing about a reconciliation.

COMMITTEE OF INTELLIGENCE OF CHARLESTOWN TO THE SOUTH-CAROLINA DELEGATES IN THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Charlestown, July 4, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed are a copy and extracts of letters which fell into the hands of the Secret Committee, who laid them before the Council of Safety. They are thought to be of so great importance, that the Council have desired the Committee of Intelligence to transmit them to you, not only by sea, but through Committee conveyance, by land. They seem to give some light into the real intentions of Administration; and thereby you may, in some degree, be enabled to guard against their machinations. We have also transmitted proper copies of them to North-Carolina and Georgia; and we have desired the former Colony to forward to you our duplicate of this packet. We also enclose to you some copies of our circular letter to the Committees of this Colony.

This day the Provincial Congress of Georgia is to sit in Savannah. It is thought that they will make ample

The times are evil; this is a day of adversity; and in a time of adversity we ought to consider. It may, perhaps, soon become impossible, even to the most indolent, to continue unconcerned; and those that wish no more than to hide themselves in quiet obscurity, may not always have it in their power to remain neuter: to know the signs of the time, is a considerable part of human prudence; and it is a still greater to walk circumspectly, and redeem the time, because the days are evil. Whatever part you may think yourselves obliged to take, "so speak, and so do, as they that shall be judged hereafter, and judged by the law of liberty."

In these times of confusion I would press on my hearers a most conscientious regard to the common laws of the land. Let our conduct shew that we are not lawless; by well-doing let us put to silence the reproaches of our adversaries. Let us convince them that we do not complain of law, but of oppression; that we do not abhor these acts because we are impatient to be under government, but being destructive of liberty and property, we think them destructive also of all law. Let us act "as free, and yet not make liberty a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God."

While it is yet peace and quietness with us, let us not think ourselves inaccessible to the evils which are already come upon others; there are some evils which we would rather deprecate in private than speak of in public; against which, being forewarned, we should be fore-armed; every trifling report should not alarm us, but it would be folly still greater not to be on our guard against sudden dangers.

Remember them that suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body. Think on those who are driven from their habitations and all their conveniences of life, or confined in their own houses by an enraged soldiery, to starve in their own country in the midst of property and plenty, not permitted to enjoy their own, and distressed in every connexion, and this without any cause alleged against numbers of them, without complaint, suspicion, or a legal trial: the like was never heard since the cruel siege of Londonderry, and is a species of cruelty at which even that hardhearted bigot James the Second, relented.

Above all, let every one earnestly pray, that He that is higher than the highest would soon make a righteous end of all their confusion; that he would incline the King to hear the cries of his subjects, and that no more innocent blood may be shed in America.

One thing more: consider the extreme absurdity of struggling for civil liberty, and yet to continue slaves to sin and lust. "Know ye not to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey? his servants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness." Rom. vi. 16. Cease from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it: who will hurt you while you follow that which is good? become the willing servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, hearken to and obey the voice of his gospel, for "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty;" and "if the Son makes you free," then, and not till then, "shall you be free indeed."

amends for their past conduct; indeed, we think there is no room to doubt of it.

Our own affairs continue in a good posture. The Regiment of Horse is nearly completed; and the Regiments of Infantry are in great forwardness. At present, between two and three hundred garrison the barracks, and we mean immediately to establish a fortified post at Dorchester. The Council of Safety, on Thursday, will go there to reconnoitre the situation. This letter comes forwarded by Committee conveyance from North-Carolina, and is a duplicate of the original, which we have sent by a pilot-boat.

COMMITTEE OF INTELLIGENCE OF CHARLESTOWN TO THE COMMITTEE AT NEWBURN, NORTH-CAROLINA.

Charlestown, July 4, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed are a copy and extracts of letters, which, falling into the hands of our Secret Committee, were laid before the Council of Safety. By desire of the Council, we transmit them to you; as well to enable you to counteract your Governour, as to manifest how dangerous he is to the liberties of America. You see he means, and is ordered, to arm one part of your people against the other. We trust that you will, on this occasion, act with due vigour and policy, in your endeavours to defeat so diabolical a design.

The Council of Safety most seriously recommend, that you so manage the communication of this important letter, as to confine it, if possible, only among the friends of American rights, as it might be of the most pernicious consequence if your Governour, or his emissaries, or the disaffected Counties, or people at large, should obtain any particular knowledge of it.

We transmit to you copies of our circular letter, which, if you think proper, may be reprinted; and we also transmit to you a letter to our Delegates at Philadelphia, which we beg you will forward to them from one Committee to another.

COMMITTEE OF INTELLIGENCE OF CHARLESTOWN TO THE COMMITTEE AT SAVANNAH, GEORGIA.

Charlestown, July 4, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed are extracts of letters, and an original, which, having fallen into the hands of our Secret Committee, and being by them laid before the Council of Safety, the Council have desired the Committee of Intelligence to transmit them to you. Your Chief Justice seems to hold a very criminal correspondence, and to show a disposition no less inimical to the liberties of America.

We also recommend, in the most pressing manner, that you keep a watchful eye upon every motion that your Governour can make. We enclose to you copies of our circular letter; and we hope this despatch will arrive in due time to be laid before your Provincial Congress, of whose proceedings we have the highest expectation.*

SOMERSET COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

Princess Anne, July 4, 1775.

It having this day been made appear, by Doctor John Odel Hart, to this Committee, that on Friday last a Pedlar, calling himself James Dooe, and lately from Scotland, was exposing Goods to sale at Salisbury Town, in this County; that he then and there was called upon by several members of this Committee for certificates, or some other evidence of the said Goods having not been imported contrary to the Association of the honourable Continental Congress; which not being able to produce, he was advised

* The Swallow Packet being just arrived from England, William Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Secret Committee, resolved to seize the mail, and, on his way to the Post-Office, on the 2d day of July, he met John Neufville and Thomas Corbet, two members of the Committee of Intelligence, who were proceeding thither on the same errand. On their arriving at the Post-Office, then kept by Jervis Henry Stevens, on the Bay, at the corner of Longitude-Alley, as Secretary to George Roupell, the Deputy Postmaster, they demanded the mail which had just arrived in the Packet; to which a peremptory refusal was given. They then informed Stevens they would take it by force, if not speedily delivered; to which he answered he should not deliver it. They then took possession of it, and carried the publick letters to the State-House, where the Secret Committee were immediately summoned to meet; and upon examining them, they found the despatches which had been for Lord William Campbell, Governour of South-Carolina, and John Stuart, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, had been already forwarded to them; but their enterprise was rewarded, by obtaining despatches from the Ministry to the Southern Governours, regulating their conduct upon Lord North's conciliatory motion, and to Governour Martin, of North-Carolina, encouraging his plans of raising the people of the four Counties of Guilford, Dobbs, Rowan, and Surry, whom he had reported to "breathe a spirit of loyalty to the King, and attachment to the authority of Great Britain." All these letters were signed by Lord Dartmouth, five of which were for James Wright, Governour of Georgia; one for the Lieutenant-Governour of South-Carolina; and one for Governour Martin, of North-Carolina. The Resolution of Parliament, also, upon Lord North's conciliatory motion, was forwarded to the Governours by Lord Dartmouth, in the same Packet.

These despatches were deemed of so much consequence, that copies of them were immediately forwarded to our Delegates in the Continental Congress, and to the Committees at Newbern, in North-Carolina, and Savannah, in Georgia; but the originals were never sent to the Continental Congress, as the publick has been led to believe; for they are now in the possession of the author of these Memoirs, having been in that of his family ever since his father, William Henry Drayton, left South-Carolina, in March, 1778, as a Delegate to the Continental Congress, then sitting at Little-Yorktown, in the State of Pennsylvania.

About the same time the mail was seized, the Secret Committee were also fortunate in intercepting two letters from Sir James Wright, Governour of Georgia, each of them dated 27th of June, 1775; one of them directed to Admiral Graves, and the other to General Gage.—Drayton.

by the said members to attend the weekly meeting of this Committee on this day and place, and abide their determination thereon, and, in the mean time, to forbear offering any of his Goods for sale; all which the said Dooe faithfully engaged to perform; but the said Dooe not having appeared, and this Committee being informed that he did afterwards offer his said Goods for sale: on full consideration of the above information,

Resolved unanimously, That the said Dooe, from his conduct aforesaid, has given great reason to suspect that he is not only inimical to the liberties of America, but that the said Goods, or some of them, have been imported in violation of the Continental Association; therefore,

Resolved unanimously, That we will not, and that the inhabitants in this County ought not, to have any intercourse or connexion whatever with the said Dooe, until he shall appear before this Committee and give proper satisfaction for his conduct above-mentioned; and it is recommended that an inviolable regard be paid to this Resolution. By order of the Committee:

HENRY JACKSON, Clerk.

JOHN N. BLEECKER TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 4, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I received your letter of the 29th ultimo, and have, agreeable to your directions, delivered up all the stores and provisions in my care, an account whereof you have enclosed. I cannot omit observing, that the person in whose care I had left the stores, &c., during my absence, did not think himself justified to deliver them without an order from you, especially as it appears by Mr. Phelps's warrant that he is only appointed for one regiment, a copy of which is enclosed. A number of different accounts for provisions and necessities, purchased as well by me as in my absence, have not yet been delivered, which prevents my transmitting an account at present of the expenses which we have been at; but I shall not fail to render an account in a few days. Five barrels of damaged powder from Ticonderoga is sent to Judge Livingston's mill. The garrisons will be in want of flour very soon, and none to be had here before I delivered up the stores.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOHN N. BLEECKER.

To P. V. B. Livingston, Esquire.

Account of Stores and Provisions delivered over by JOHN N. BLEECKER to ELISHA PHELPS, at ALBANY, July 3, 1775:

Seven barrels of flour, 32 barrels of pork, 1 tierce of peas, 10 tierces of rice, 86 hatchets, 38 pair two-point blankets, 12 pair one-point blankets, 2½ hogsheds of rum, 40 camp kettles.

JOHN N. BLEECKER.

Colony of CONNECTICUT:

JONATHAN TRUMBULL, Esq., Governour and Commander-in-Chief in and over His Majesty's ENGLISH Colony of CONNECTICUT, in NEW-ENGLAND, in AMERICA:

To ELISHA PHELPS, Gentleman, greeting:

I do, by these presents, reposing especial trust and confidence in your loyalty, fidelity, and good conduct, constitute you, the said Elisha Phelps, to be Commissary in Albany, and places adjacent above, for the provisions supplied from the Provincial Convention of New-York, and for the Fourth Regiment of the inhabitants enlisted and assembled for the special defence and safety of his Majesty's said Colony, stationed at Ticonderoga, and places adjacent, agreeable to a Resolve of the honourable Continental Congress. I do authorize and empower you to exercise your said office in a due performance of the duties thereof, in and for the Regiment aforesaid; keep proper accounts, and the same render on oath, when required, according to the trust reposed in you; for which this is a sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal at arms, in Lebanon, this 8th day of June, in the fifteenth year of His Majesty's reign, Annoque Domini 1775. JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

WILLIAM SCHUYLER, ETC., TO JOHN MARLETT.

Warrensburgh, July 4, 1775.

These may inform you that I received your letter from New-York on the 2d instant. I also received a letter from Mr. Daniel Lane, on the 28th of June, but could not do any thing in it at that time, by reason of the port being so near shut.

As to the people who have signed where I live, there is only one, to wit: John Snuke. Those that have not signed, who have been asked, are, the Reverend John Stuart and Henry Hare. We also hear from the Oneida, that the Indians will not join with Colonel Guy Johnson, nor have any thing to do with him; also, that Abraham C. Cuyler, Mayor of Albany, has gone up to Oswego, under pretence of collecting some debts; but we did not put so much trust in him, as he had two loaded batteaus with him; and sent word immediately to John Fry, Esq., that we apprehended that he had some stores for the enemy against America; which John Fry, Esq., sent word back that their Committee should meet the next day at Van Alsten's, for business.

From your most obedient and humble servants,

WM. SCHUYLER,
JOHN BLEVIN, Clerk,
JAMES McMASTER.

To John Marlett, Esq., now at New-York.

N. B. After the above was wrote, we received a letter informing us, that yesterday, at Abraham Hodges's, there were a company of men met together, and in talking about the troublesome times, Esquire Peter Meetin being present amongst them, in cool blood told them that he had the King's Proclamation from Governour Gage, to offer any person or persons who would recant from the Association and sign the King's Proclamation, should be pardoned; and he expected soon to have all their estates to handle.

This may also inform you, that Peter Bowen, on Tripe's Hill, refuses to sign the Association, and Nicholas Ross.

BROOK WATSON TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Lake Champlain, near St. John's, July 4, 1775.

By the general assistance which your letter to the officers in the service of the Colonies procured me, I am now so near Montreal that I expect to get there this evening, therefore, embrace the opportunity of the returning boat, to make you my thanks for your kind attention to me and my friends; and I pray you, Sir, to make my warmest acknowledgment to your Provincial Congress, for the obliging letter they kindly favoured me with, and for the pleasing expressions in my regard which it contained. A sincere friend to America and its rights I truly am, and as such cannot help expressing my uneasiness at the general spirit which I have observed amongst the Colonies' Troops quartered at Fort George, Ticonderoga, and Crown Point. They talk and act as if it was fully determined they should soon march into the Province of Quebeck. Surely this, my good Sir, cannot be the intention of the General Congress. If it is not, immediate pains should be taken to suppress the dangerous idea, or it may soon produce the most dangerous consequences. Should the Colonies send their troops into that Province, or should they go without orders, the Canadians and the Indians, their friends, will naturally fall upon your back settlements with fire and sword. Then the King's Troops on one side, and the Canadians and Indians on the other, what are the Colonists to expect but slaughter. For God's sake exert every faculty to prevent so great an evil.

I know the body of gentlemen who have so properly chose you for their President are greatly alarmed at the deplorable situation of affairs between Great Britain and her Colonies. America must look forward with the greatest anxiety, and rejoice in any prudent plan for the restoring of harmony and the security of property. I would to God I had a head to contrive, and a pen to persuade what might produce so desirable an event; for the credit and comfort of all their future movements depend upon it. But while liberty and slavery, in their greatest extreme, is the alternative held out by the violent and designing on this side the waters, and submission or destruction the language of the others, what hopes have the people but in the moderation, wisdom, and justice of the General Congress. In their address to His Majesty of last year, they wisely declared that they "asked but for peace, liberty, and safety; that they wished not a diminution of the prerogative; nor did they solicit any new rights in their favour; that his royal authority over them, and their connexion with Great Britain, they would carefully and zealously endeavour to support and maintain." This declaration breathed the spirit of good subjects, valuing their just rights too much to abuse them; but these sentiments were not constitutionally conveyed to the royal ear.

That Government is ready to receive any fair propositions which may be constitutionally offered, cannot be doubted, after we consider the Minister's declaration in Parliament, "that if the dispute in which the Americans are engaged goes to the whole of their authority, they can enter into no negotiation; they can meet no compromise: but if it be only as to the suspension of the exercise of their rights; or as to the mode of laying and levying taxes for a contribution towards the common defence, it might be just as wise to meet any fair proposition which might come from any Province or Colony."

This declaration, I humbly conceive, clearly points out the line of conduct which the General Congress ought to pursue, as it cannot be the wish of that Assembly to carry matters to an extreme, by which the whole Empire must suffer, and America drove to the last distress. Would they state their real grievances with temper and wisdom; their desires with moderation and justice, in a dutiful memorial to the King, to be transmitted by the Provincial Assemblies to their respective agents in London; such application could not fail to produce the most desirable effects. But if, on the other hand, the Congress should order or suffer the people to proceed to extremes, which I now much fear, nothing but the sword can determine the unnatural contest; and they would soon discover the fatal truth of what hath been so emphatically expressed by the judicious Mr. Glover, "that high sounding words produce no food for the hungry, no raiment for the naked."

I am, Sir, your obliged humble servant,

BROOK WATSON.

P. V. B. Livingston, President of the Provincial Congress of New-York.

P. S. I have received the kindest treatment from Captain Fisher, Colonel Hinman, and Major Elmer.

GOVERNOUR OF RHODE-ISLAND TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 11, 1775.]

Providence, July 4, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 10th of June last came duly to hand. I wrote immediately to the Delegates from this Colony upon the contents of it, to whom I beg leave to refer you.

I have now to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 20th of the same month. Immediately after the late battle upon Bunker's Hill, the remaining forces from the Colony joined the Army near Boston; and it appears by a return from the Brigadier-General, that the Army of this Colony consists of thirteen hundred and ninety effective men. We are also equipping two armed vessels, to carry one hundred men, exclusive of officers.

Upon a most urgent application from the Provincial Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay, the General Assembly ordered six companies, of sixty men each, to be raised to join the Regiments in the service of this Colony, and have ordered one-fourth part of the Militia to be enlisted as Minute-men. They have also passed an act putting the Troops of this Colony under the command of the General of the combined Army. I will only add, that on this most important occasion, this Colony will exert itself in unremitting efforts for the common defence and safety.

I am, with great esteem and regard, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esquire.

JAMES WARREN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, July 4, 1775.

SIR: As Pomroy is now absent, and at the distance of a hundred miles from the Army, if it can be consistent with your Excellency's instructions and the service to retain his commission until you shall receive advice from the Continental Congress, and we shall be able to prevail with Heath to make a concession honourable to himself and advantageous to the publick, we humbly conceive the way would be open to do justice to Thomas.

We have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient humble servants,

JAS. WARREN,
JOSEPH HAWLEY.

To his Excellency General Washington.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM ONE OF THE VIRGINIA DELEGATES TO A GENTLEMAN IN WILLIAMSBURGH, DATED PHILADELPHIA, JULY 5, 1775.

The battle of Charlestown I expect you have heard, but perhaps not so as you may depend on. The Provincials sustained two attacks in their trenches, and twice repulsed the ministerial forces with immense slaughter. The third attack, however, being made with fixed bayonets, the Provincials gave ground, retired a little way, and rallied ready for their enemy; but they having been pretty roughly handled, did not choose to pursue. We lost between sixty and seventy killed, and about one hundred and fifty wounded. The enemy had fourteen hundred killed and wounded, of whom were about five hundred killed. Major Pitcairn was among the slain, an event at which every one rejoices; as he was the commanding officer at Lexington, first fired his own piece, and gave command to fire. On our side Dr. Warren fell, a man immensely valued to the north. The New-Englanders are fitting out privateers, with which they expect to be able to scour the seas and bays of every thing below ships-of-war, and may probably go to the European coasts, to distress the British trade there. The enterprising genius and intrepidity of these people are amazing. They are now intent on burning Boston, in order to oust the regulars; and none are more eager for it than those who have escaped out, and who have left their whole property in it; so that their rage has got the better of every interested principle.

Nobody now entertains a doubt but that we are able to cope with the whole force of Great Britain, if we are but willing to exert ourselves. It will indeed be expensive, extremely expensive; but people must lay aside views of building up fortunes during these troubles, and set apart a good proportion of their income to secure the rest. As our enemies have found we can reason like men, so now let us show them we can fight like men also. The Government of Pennsylvania have raised thirty-five thousand Pounds to put their Country in a posture of defence. There appear to be as many soldiers here as men. Powder is the great want, and towards having plenty of that nothing is wanting but saltpetre.

The Congress have directed twenty thousand men to be raised immediately, the greater part of which is already raised. Two millions of dollars also are voted. This is all I am at liberty to tell of their proceedings. As to the time of their rising, it is totally beyond conjecture; expresses after expresses daily coming from the northward, and the machinations of the people in office on other parts of the Continent, keep us from making any progress in the main business. At the same time such an impatience for home seems to possess us all, that nothing keeps the Congress together but the visible certainty that till our military proceedings are got into a good train, their separation would endanger the common cause greatly. If things cannot be got into such a state soon as they may be left, we must petition to be exchanged for fresh hands, that we may return to our families.

P. S. After folding up my letter we received an account, from an undoubted hand, that the mortality among the wounded regulars has been so great, that the killed on the spot, and those who have died of their wounds, make up one thousand. The reason of this is, that they have been long confined to salt provisions, having not so much as a vegetable, a drop of milk, or even any fresh meat.

NEW-YORK SECRET COMMITTEE.

Committee of Secrecy and Inspection, }
New-York, July 5, 1775. }

The Committee of Secrecy and Inspection do report, that being called upon by Messrs. Buchannans to attend the landing of a number of passengers from on board the snow Christy, Hugh Riley, master, from Greenock, in Scotland, bound to Georgia, they carefully inspected the chests and baggage of the said passengers; that they found in the chest of Alexander McDonald, of St. George's Parish, in Maryland, a parcel of cloths in patterns, and several other packages of goods, amounting to (by the information of the said McDonald) three hundred Pounds sterling, and upwards; which goods, with the owner, were sent down on board the said vessel to proceed to the place of her destination. They further report, that the brig Three Sisters, Captain Neck, departed from this port on Monday afternoon, with the goods which she brought into port.

JOHN IMLAY,
DANIEL PHENIX,
WILLIAM BEDLOW.

Ordered, That the said McDonald be held up in the publick Papers as a violator of the Association of the Continental Congress.

liberties of America, and will be held forth to the resentment of the publick; and if any persons privy to such measures will disclose them, they shall receive the thanks of the Committee as real friends to their Country.

Ordered, That William W. Ludlow, Hercules Mulligan, Oliver Templeton, and Anthony Van Dam, be added to the Committee of Inspection; and that the names of the said Committee be published under the Resolves of this day, and in handbills, to be given to the Pilots.

Ordered, That the stated days of meeting be altered from every Monday to Tuesday.

A Letter dated Elizabethtown, July 6th, 1775, from Jonathan Hampton, received and read, setting forth, Mr. McLeod, a native of this Province, set out yesterday from thence to join his Regiment at Boston.

Ordered, That Mr. C. P. Low, Mr. Fleming, and Mr. Bedlow, wait on the Provincial Congress with the above Letter, for their opinion thereon.

The Committee returned with the following order, viz:

" In Provincial Congress, July 7, 1775.

" Ordered, That the Committee of the City and County of New-York do take the body of William McLeod, Ensign of the Fifty-Second Regiment of Foot at Boston, and send him in safe custody to the Committee of Elizabethtown. And it is recommended to the Committee of New-York not to use unnecessary violence, but to treat him with all possible lenity, as a gentleman and a soldier."

Ordered, That Mr. Henry Remsen pay unto Mr. John Lamb the sum of eleven Pounds, seven Shillings, and six Pence, for his expenses to Philadelphia on the business of this Committee.

BURNET MILLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Southampton, July 5, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Committees of East and Southampton taking into their serious consideration the remote situation from the head-quarters at New-York, and much exposed to the ravages of our unnatural enemy at this day, with regard to our stock in our common field, at the point of Montauk, it being remote from the inhabitants, where any number may land at pleasure, take away our stock, which is large, not less than two thousand neat cattle, and three or four thousand sheep, which, if taken away, would greatly distress us, and give them support, which would by no means do.

Now, considering our situation, we request your honourable House to petition General Schuyler that a number of troops be stationed at Montauk, and that the company now raising here may be a part, until a matter of more importance shall call them away. We are of the opinion that our inhabitants would do what in them lies to give assistance, in case any attempt should be made to take off the stock, but the distance of the inhabitants is eighteen or twenty miles. And as Gardiner's Island lies adjacent, and is much exposed, also Shelter Island, Plum Island, and Oyster Pond Point, we think a number of whale-boats would be proper to employ, that assistance may be given from one part to the other. We have a number of boats that are of no use in this season that might be got for the design, if the General should think proper to order troops at this part of the Island, which we hereby petition may be done. I am, gentlemen, &c.

By order of the Committee:

BURNET MILLER, Chairman.To the Provincial Congress sitting at New-York.

JOSEPH JOHNSON (A MOHEGAN INDIAN) TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Hartford, July 5, A. D. 1775.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: With a due sense of my unworthiness as an Indian, and with a high and proper esteem of your very worthy persons, I humbly write the following, and with a sense of my indebtedness to your Honours and the benevolent inhabitants of the City of New-York, for favours past. Honourable gentlemen, since my arrival to my own native place, I have been informed that some of my New-England brethren have been very busy in spreading false reports, or in representing things in a very wrong light, not only to my disadvantage, but even to the hazard of my life; by which false representations I have been almost discouraged of undertaking to go to visit my western brethren, of which visit, if I am hindered, may be damage to my dear friends, the Americans. But duly considering the consequences of my not going, and very well sensible that the Oncidas, my western brethren, are in daily expectation of my return, I feel a disposition still to go the intended journey, let the consequences be what they will. My love to the country in which I was born and educated, and my regard for my brethren westward, animates me to step forward, though at the expense of my very life.

Honourable gentlemen, it has been represented to my Connecticut friends, the English, by some of the Indians that have been westward with me, that I have been a grand enemy to my country; or, in other words, that I have turned a high tory, the which they cannot possibly prove. All that they can allege or bring in proof is, that I was long with Colonel Johnson, some times under arms, which, if I had time, I could answer for to the satisfaction of all unprejudiced persons. But they cannot possibly say that they ever heard three words during the whole of the time that we were together in that westward country, that I said any thing against my country or the Americans, whereby I discovered any disaffection to the noble, spirited Americans, either in any private or publick conversation. No, honourable gentlemen, but quite the contrary. I have ever spoken, both in publick and private, the sentiments of my heart to my New-England brethren; and they are witnesses themselves with what warmth of heart, in our private and publick conversations, and in which conversations I have expressed my love and regard for Americans, and they know how I have often said I was willing to suffer and bleed, yea, even die, with the injured Americans. And, honourable gentlemen, my mind is the same as ever; and I can boldly say this for the truth, that I firmly believe that there has not been a truer friend to this North America than myself, of all the New-England Indians that went up to the western country in order to settle. I have embraced every opportunity to compose the minds of the western Indians, and I have repeatedly exhorted them to be peaceable. And I have had very good opportunity to converse with the western Indians from time to time, and I rejoice that I can discourse with them in their own language, and feel encouraged when I reflect how much they attended to the things that I laid before them from time to time; and I am sensible of their growing affection towards me, notwithstanding there have been many that have vainly and unlawfully endeavoured to render me despicable in their eyes.

Honourable gentlemen, I perceive that I have many very inveterate enemies of my own Indian acquaintances, more especially some that have been up with me. They envy me, as Joseph of old was envied, and they have already laid a snare for my life. They envy me for the respect that I receive from the white people every where, and more especially they envy me that I have so much influence among my western brethren. These persons, not considering the overruling hand of Providence, which makes high and makes low, which exalts and debases according to his divine pleasure, make known their folly by venting their rage against a poor, frail, and short-coming creature like myself. I acknowledge that I am a poor imperfect creature as to things of religion, and that in many things I fall short; yet the resolution of my heart is to press forward in the ways of piety and duty. And, honourable gentlemen, I rejoice greatly that we are not to be saved by works; no, but we are directed by the divine revelation to put all our hopes and ground our confidence on Jesus Christ alone for salvation. So his complete righteousness I plead before my offended God, when I find myself overtaken with some surprising sin.

The above I wrote, knowing that the persons will make use of every failure that they can possibly find or discern, in order to render me despicable both at home and abroad, and so render me useless both to my country and to my poor sinking nation; for the prosperity of both, my soul seems truly to be engaged in. But as to the affairs of this world, I believe I am as faithful as any one, and would not give the right hand to any Indian of my acquaintance to do business amongst the back nations, being very well acquainted with their manners and customs, and can speak their language considerable well.

Honourable gentlemen, I cannot see with what face these malicious persons can falsely say that I was an enemy to the country, when they consider that I have a companion here in Connecticut, whom I value as dear as my own life, and a young babe dear to me as nature can make it. Can they, with any expectation of success, go on their infernal design of ensnaring my life, when persons know that all my dearest connexions in life are and have been amongst the people in New-England, during the time that I was in the western country? I flatter myself that they will not succeed.

Honourable gentlemen, I would just inform you that yesterday the honourable Assembly was graciously pleased to appoint a Committee to hear what one of my enemies had to say or allege against me. The Indian's name is Elijah Weampy, of Farmington, a subtle, crafty person. And this very same person had spoke, in our private conversation, very improper and unkind words against the New-England people with indignation; with which he was charged yesterday, and denied not, before evidence; two of the Indians that was up to Oncida with us, being Samuel Adams and John Sock, who heard him more than once. It is very likely that your Honours will soon see the judgment formed concerning the matter by the honourable Assembly of this Colony, as it is requested that it might be made as publick as the report concerning myself has been; likely it will be in the next papers. I hope to have the honour of being more closely examined by your Honours when I shall return from the Oncida country, by which time I humbly hope I may have the pleasure of giving your Honours general satisfaction. And I humbly hope that no stories may hinder your Honours from sending the message to the back nations, which your Honours proposed when I was at New-York. And your Honours may be assured that I am, have been, and still will be a true friend to the American Colonies; and I hope that your Honours and all that know me may soon be convinced of my love to my Country, and of my real friendship to the Colonies. I am yours, to serve,

JOSEPH JOHNSON.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress of New-York.

P. S. I would just inform your Honours that I purpose, by divine leave, to set off from Mohegan, my native place, the twelfth of this instant, or before; so I humbly hope that your Honours would send ample directions to Albany for me as soon as possible. Although I leave my companion as my own self, and seemly more, and the pleasure in being among friends and acquaintances, yet duty obligates me, methinks, to take this one journey more, hoping I may be a means, by the blessing of our gracious Lord, of preventing much blood being spilt. So I go cheerfully, though I should never return.

I am, with great esteem, yours to serve,

JOSEPH JOHNSON.

N. B. Should I be deprived of my life, and never return, I humbly recommend to your mercy my beloved companion. I am, ut ante.

An Act for supplying the Troops, ordered to be raised for the special defence and safety of this Colony, with necessary Fire-Arms.

Be it enacted by the Governour, Council, and Representatives in General Court assembled, and by authority of the same, That each inhabitant who shall enlist into the Seventh and Eighth Regiments, now to be raised for the defence of this Colony, shall be furnished with good and sufficient Fire-Arms; that each enlisted inhabitant that shall provide Arms for himself, well fixed with a good Bayonet and Cartouch Box, shall be paid a premium of ten shillings; and in case such Arms are lost by inevitable casualty, such inhabitant, providing himself as aforesaid, shall be allowed and paid the just value of said Arms and Implements so lost, deducting only said sum of ten shillings allowed as aforesaid, said premium of ten shillings to be paid as soon as such inhabitants shall provide such Arms as aforesaid; and in case any householder or other person shall voluntarily furnish any enlisted inhabitant, not able to furnish Arms for himself, with a good Gun, well fixed with a Bayonet and Cartouch Box, he shall have and receive a premium of ten shillings, and in case of loss shall receive the value thereof, deducting said ten shillings as aforesaid; that where the aforesaid provision fails, sufficient Arms shall be purchased to supply said inhabitants that shall enlist as aforesaid by the Selectmen of that Town in which they dwell, or either of them, which Selectmen shall de-

And if it shall so happen that a sufficient supply of Arms cannot be procured in the several methods before directed, then sufficient Arms, to make good the deficiency, shall be impressed, completely to arm and equip said inhabitants that shall so enlist as aforesaid, the said impress to be limited only to the Arms belonging to the householders and other persons not on the military roll; and that every person from whom any Gun shall be impressed as aforesaid, shall be paid for the use of such Gun the sum of four shillings, and in case of loss shall be paid the just value of said Gun, deducting the sum of four shillings aforesaid.

And be it further enacted, That a particular account shall be taken by the Captain, or chief officer of every Company, of the Arms that may be used, distinguishing such as the Soldiers may provide for themselves, such as are lent by householders and others, such as are purchased by the Selectmen, and such as are impressed by virtue of this Act; who shall cause the same to be appraised by indifferent judges, and transmit such account, with the appraisement, to the Committee of the Pay-Table. And that if any enlisted Soldier, through negligence, shall lose or damage the Arms found for him as aforesaid, such loss or damage shall be deducted as aforesaid. And it shall be the duty of the Captain, or chief officer of every Company, when the said enlisted inhabitants shall be discharged from the service for which they are assembled, to receive from them and secure the Arms borrowed, purchased, or impressed by virtue of this Act, that the same may be returned to their proper owner, or secured for the use of this Colony.

Resolved by this Assembly, That the Committee appointed by Act of Assembly of May last, to procure Fire-Arms for the use of this Colony, be authorized, and they are hereby fully authorized and empowered to contract for and purchase such numbers (of Arms of such construction as are ordered in said Act) as are directed therein, and that they be fully authorized and empowered to draw on the Treasurer for payment for the same; and the Treasurer is hereby ordered to pay the same accordingly.

Resolved by this Assembly, That his Honour the Governor, and the Council appointed to assist him in the recess of the Assembly, be, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to direct and order the marches and stations of the inhabitants now to be enlisted and assembled, and that have or shall be enlisted or assembled for the special defence of the Colony, or any part or parts of them as they shall judge necessary for the publick service, and give all necessary orders and directions, from time to time, for the purchasing, supplying, and arming said inhabitants, or that may be enlisted, in every respect and to every purpose that may be needful, to render the defence of the Colony effectual.

Resolved by this Assembly, That Jabez Hamlin, Matthew Talcott, and Titus Hosmer, Esquires, the Committee appointed by this Assembly in May last to work the Lead Mine in Middletown, and refine the Ore for the use of the Colony, be, and they are hereby ordered and directed to proceed in the business and matters as directed by said Act; and, to enable them to carry the same into execution, that they receive out of the Colony Treasury such sum or sums of money as may be necessary to enable them to carry the same into execution, and thereof to render their account to this Assembly; and the Committee of the Pay-Table are hereby directed to draw on the Treasurer for such sums as said Committee, for managing said Mine, shall find necessary for the purpose aforesaid.

Resolved by this Assembly, That two Vessels of a suitable burden be immediately fitted out, and armed with a proper number of Cannon, Swivel Guns and Small-Arms, and furnished with necessary warlike stores, and well officered and manned, for the defence of the Sea-Coasts in this Colony, under the care and direction of his Honour the Governor, and Committee of Council appointed to assist him in the recess of the General Assembly, who are hereby authorized and directed to procure, furnish, and employ the same accordingly.

Resolved by this Assembly, That his Honour the Governor be directed and empowered to draw out of the Colony Treasury, and deliver to Walter Livingston, Esq., as soon as may be, the sum of fifteen thousand Pounds, in bills of credit of this Colony, and take his receipt for the same, agreeable to the request of General Philip Schuyler; and also that the Governor and Council be directed and empowered to furnish said General Schuyler with such quantity of Ammunition as they shall judge proper and safe, considering the state and circumstances of this Colony.

Resolved by this Assembly, That his Honour the Governor be, and he is hereby directed to make a kind and friendly answer to the Speech sent by the Oneida Indians, and that a Belt of Wampum be procured and sent to them, and that the sum of twelve Pounds, for the expense and cost of transmitting the same, be paid out of the publick Treasury of this Colony, and that his Honour the Governor be also desired to direct Colonel Hinman to assure the Indians of the peaceable disposition of the people of this Colony towards them.

This Assembly do appoint, authorize, and direct the Honourable Jabez Hamlin, Esq., to collect and receive the Saltpetre and Sulphur that may be found in the several Towns in this Colony, and to send the same, with all convenient despatch, to the Powder-Mills in Dutchess County, in the Province of New-York, to be made into Powder, and that he apply to the Pay-Table for the money that may be necessary for the service aforesaid, and account at that office for the expenditure thereof.

Resolved by this Assembly, That his Honour the Governor be, and he is hereby authorized and empowered to grant permits for the exportation out of this Colony by water, of live Cattle and Provisions, in such cases and to such ports and places as he shall judge necessary and expedient for the publick service.

Whereas, a sum of Money is necessary for payment of Interest, the charges of Government:

Be it enacted by the Governor, Council, and Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That there be forthwith imprinted the sum of fifty thousand Pounds, Bills of Credit on this Colony, equal to lawful money, of suitable denominations as the Committee herein appointed shall direct, and of the same tenour with the late emissions of Bills of Credit of this Colony, without interest, payable at or before the last day of December, Anno Domini 1779, dated the first day of July, Anno Domini 1775; and Jabez Hamlin, William Pitkin, George Wyllis, Elisha Williams, Benjamin Payne, Thomas Seymour, and Jesse Root, Esquires, or any three of them, are appointed a Committee for the purpose aforesaid, to take care said bills be imprinted with all convenient speed, and to sign and deliver the same to the Treasurer of this Colony, taking his receipt therefor. And the said Committee shall be sworn to a faithful discharge of their trust; and the Treasurer is hereby directed to pay out said bills according to the orders of Assembly.

And for providing an ample and sufficient fund, to call in, sink, and discharge the aforesaid sum, to be emitted as aforesaid,

Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That a Tax of seven Pence on the Pound be and is hereby granted and ordered to be levied on all the Polls and rateable Estate in this Colony, according to the list thereof to be brought into this Assembly in October, 1777, with the additions, which Taxes shall be collected and paid into the Treasury of this Colony by the last day of December, Anno Domini 1779; which Tax may be discharged by paying the bills of this Colony of this emission, or lawful money; and the Treasurer of this Colony is hereby ordered and directed to send forth his warrants for collecting the same accordingly.

Upon the Memorial of Captain Delaplace, Brigade-Major Andrew P. Skene, and Ensign Jos. Moland, praying that they may be kept together and not separated, as they apprehend to be intended; as per Memorial on file, dated July 6th, 1775:

Resolved by this Assembly, That the memorialists aforesaid be not at present separated. And it is further Resolved, That said memorialists be removed from the Town of Hartford, and kept and provided for in some other convenient Town or place, at the discretion of the Committee already appointed for that purpose. And it is further Resolved, That on the arrival of Major Skene the elder, who is ordered here by the Continental Congress, said Committee be and they are directed to provide him suitable lodgings and entertainment in some remote part of the Town of Hartford, and at their discretion may permit said Major Skene the younger to reside with his father, said Major Skene the elder.

"Roxbury, July 5, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: The exemplary life, good conduct, prudence, and courage of General Spencer, has endeared him to the officers and soldiers under his command. He came here the first in command of the Connecticut Forces, and has continued so, much to our satisfaction. The Continental Congress, as we hear, hath, by their appointments, degraded him from the rank he held as first in command of the Connecticut Troops on this destination. We therefore desire you to use your influence and best discretion with the members of our General Assembly, that the arrangement made by the Continental Congress may be altered so as to continue General Spencer in command as before. You are sensible it will be with great reluctance our Troops at Roxbury could see their General superseded by an officer in previous lower command. We have no objection to the appointment of Generals Washington and Lee, and shall endeavour to preserve the good order and submission to their government as hath before distinguished this part of the Connecticut Troops whilst under General Spencer's command; but the late arrangement so far removes General Spencer from his former command, that he cannot and will not continue in the service under this arrangement. We would have you signify to the Assembly that we apprehend the morals and good order and discipline of our Troops will be greatly endangered under the present arrangement. We trust to your prudence, care, and good conduct, in procuring the proposed alteration.

Your Honours' Committee appointed to take into consideration the subject of the representation of the Officers of our Army at Roxbury, in regard to the arrangement of General Officers, &c., beg leave to report:

To obviate the inconveniences that may be apprehended from the alteration made by the Continental Congress in the rank and station of Generals Wooster, Spencer, and Putnam, which gives so great uneasiness to General Spencer and the officers more immediately under his command, that his Honour the Governour be requested, in behalf of the Assembly, to write to the honourable Continental Congress, and acquaint them with the estimation in which General Wooster and General Spencer are held by this Assembly, and the Officers and Troops under their command; of their concern that they have been so far overlooked in the appointment of General Officers by them, and of the probable inconveniences that may ensue; at the same time testifying their sense of the singular merit of Gen. Putnam, and requesting them, if practicable, to devise some method of obviating the difficulties apprehended. That his Honour the Governour be desired to write to General Spencer, and acquaint him with the said application to the Continental Congress in his behalf, and conjure him, by the love to his Country, to call to mind the constant and signal affection of his Country to him so often and so lately testified, and request him not to precipitate a resolution to resign his command, and which will distress his Troops, attached to him by the warmest affection and duty, and give great anxiety and dissatisfaction to his Country, which has placed, and continues to place high confidence in his wisdom, prudence, integrity, and military skill. Which is submitted by your Honours' most obedient humble servants, MATTHEW GRISWOLD, per order.

In the Lower House the foregoing Report is accepted, with this alteration: that his Honour the Governour be desired to write to our Delegates at the Continental Congress, and not to the Continental Congress.

"To the Honourable JABEZ HAMLIN, MATTHEW TALCOTT, and TITUS HOSMER, Esquires:

"GENTLEMEN: Being appointed by you to go to New-York, or elsewhere, in quest of a suitable Smelter or Refiner of Lead Ore, with orders to make report to you on my return, now beg leave to report, that on Wednesday, the seventh day of June, instant, I set off with Mr. Hudson, and proceeded to New-York, by way of Hudson's River, to a place called Sing-Sing, where are erected very large refining works, plans of which Mr. Hudson took, and we treated largely with Mr. Stout, the Refiner, on the subject of his undertaking the business at the lead mines at Middletown, but he could not be released. We then proceeded to New-York, and viewed the large iron air furnace belonging to Mr. Peter Curtenius, and made inquiry after his cinders for fluxing, according to directions, of which we found plenty, and to be had on reasonable terms; but were at the same time informed they were not necessary, as those of blacksmiths at home would do. After this Mr. Hudson went off for home; and hearing of two skilful Refiners, named Mosengill and Ramsamen, at a place called Boundbrook, in the Jerseys, about forty miles from New-York, I repaired thither, and spent a day treating with the latter, of whose skill and ability in the premises I was well satisfied, but his demand appearing so exorbitant, I thought not prudent to agree; but proceeded to Philadelphia, where I heard of a very skilful Refiner, named Fedaband, who I found, by the best information I could get, to be the most skilful in America, but was a High German, and could not talk English; I found, by an interpreter, he was under some oath to the King not to refine metals in America but for the King, and the present dispute between the Parliament and the Colonies terrified him with an apprehension, that if he was taken in New-England he should be sacrificed immediately; he could not be prevailed on to come. When I had got his final answer, I returned by way of Boundbrook, to see if Mr. Ramsamen would not lower his price, and found that two hundred and fifty pounds sterling was the lowest he would take for overseeing and instructing one or more; I left him, and came to New-York, where I treated with Mr. Otto Parasien and Mr. Myer Myers, with both of whom I had had some conversation before I left New-York, and find Mr. Parasien will come and oversee the works at one hundred and fifty pounds, York currency, per annum, and Mr. Myers for two hundred pounds, York currency, per annum, and their charges paid up here. I also find that white sand and clay, for the bottom of the furnace, may be had at Amboy, in the Jerseys. The characters of the two last mentioned gentlemen are, that they are honest and skilful in their profession of gold and silversmiths, but Mr. Myers has much the preference in regard to refining metals, and by some gentlemen is much preferred even to Mr. Stout, the refiner employed by Colonel James.

I made all the inquiry I could with regard to setting up the works, and fitting for operations, and believe the cost to begin will not much exceed two hundred and fifty Pounds; and I am encouraged to believe, that lead may then soon be produced to answer all such cost as will be necessarily expended in carrying on the same; and the cost, after the works are thus erected, though it cannot be certainly ascertained, cannot be very great. I conversed with Doctor John Sebastian Stephaney, one of the proprietors of the lead mines in Middletown, who is willing the Colony should take his part upon the terms proposed by them. I could not see Mr. Simpson, as he was out of Town; but Mr. Myers conversed with him while I was gone to Philadelphia, and informs me Mr. Simpson will have no objection to the Assembly's proposal. All which is humbly submitted by, gentlemen, your humble servant,

"BENJAMIN HENSHAW.

"Middletown, June 30, 1775."

To the Honourable General Assembly of the Colony of CONNECTICUT, now sitting in HARTFORD, by special order of his Honour the Governour:

Your Honours' Committee appointed in your sessions, in May last, to procure lead for the use of this Colony, and to take or purchase the ore of lead from the lead mine in Middletown, and separate the lead therefrom, and erect buildings and works for that purpose, having taken some measures and gained some information, beg leave to report the same to your Honours, as follows, to wit:

Your Committee, immediately after the rising of said Assembly, in May last, employed Mr. Benjamin Henshaw to go to New-York with one Hudson, an ingenious mason, and examine Colonel James's Refinery there, and procure draughts of the necessary works, and procure a skilful refiner, and gain information of every thing necessary to set up a refinery and carry it on to the best advantage; and if no refiner could be had there, to inquire where one might be found, and procure and treat with and engage him in the service of the Colony, if practicable; who accordingly proceeded, and said Hudson soon after returned and informed us, that he had viewed said refinery, taken draughts of all parts of the works, and that he supposed he could erect the works without difficulty, and with exactness. Mr. Henshaw not being able to procure a refiner at New-York, proceeded into New-Jersey, and to Philadelphia, and is since returned, and hath given us an account, in writing, of his transactions, which we herewith submit to your Honours, and beg leave to refer to. As Mr. Henshaw is but just returned, your Committee have not proceeded to any further steps, but are informed, that besides the expenses mentioned in Mr. Henshaw's report, when works are erected, a supply of charcoal will be constantly necessary to keep the furnace in blast, and nine or ten workmen will be necessary to be kept in constant employment in digging and raising ore, besides necessary workmen to assist the refiners at the furnace; all which workmen will expect to be frequently paid, as they must depend on their labour for present subsistence. Your Honours will readily perceive that considerable expense will be incurred before any large quantity of lead can be obtained, the amount of which cannot be precisely ascertained; and whether the lead that may be obtained will not in event come to the Colony at a dearer rate than lead has usually been afforded, is very uncertain. Under these circumstances, your Committee think it their duty to lay the same before your Honours, and pray your advice and direction whether they shall proceed to erect works and employ workmen, and make experiment how lead can be procured in this way. In case your Honours shall think it best that we proceed, we would inform your Honours there is now a refiner at Middletown ready to undertake the oversight of a furnace, and that Doctor Stephaney, who is owner of part or the whole of said mines and ore, already is waiting to treat with us for the sale of the same. All which is humbly submitted by your Honours' most obedient humble servants,

In the Upper House, the consideration of this Report is referred to the next General Assembly, and one or more of said Committee, together with Daniel Sherman and Saml. Canfield, Esqs., are hereby directed to examine into the circumstances and state of the Lead Mines in Woodbury, and the buildings and preparations there erected and made for smelting and refining the ore, and consider at which of said mines, whether of Middletown or Woodbury, it may be most advisable and least expensive for the Colony to attempt the raising and refining lead ore, and make report, &c.

And to enable them to carry the same into execution, that they receive out of the Colony Treasury such sum or sums of money as may be sufficient to enable them to carry the same into effect, and thereof to render their account to this Assembly; and the Committee of the Pay-Table are hereby directed to draw on the Treasurer for such sums as said Committee for managing said mine shall find necessary for the purpose aforesaid.

Your Honours' Committee appointed to take into consideration the affairs of the Indians in this and the neighbouring Governments, beg leave to report:

That an accusation being made against Joseph Johnson, one of the Mohegan Indians, respecting some of his conduct, which gave suspicion that he is unfriendly to American liberty, upon which we carefully examined into the grounds of that accusation, and apprehend, that his conduct upon the representation made, gave reason to suspect an undue correspondence with some of the supposed enemies to American liberty. But upon hearing his defence, the Committee apprehend, that the instances in which his conduct was objected to, may be so far imputed to fear, as leaves no just reason to conclude that he then had any ill intentions, or that he is now unfriendly to the cause of American liberty. In regard to the speech of the Oneida Indians, the Committee are of the opinion, it is expedient that his Honour the Governour be desired to make a kind and friendly answer thereto, and that a belt of wampum be procured and sent to them with the Governour's answer; and that the expense of such belt, with the cost of transmitting the same, be paid out of the publick Treasury of this Colony; and that the Indians be advised that the way is open to them to enlist into the service of this Colony, for the defence of the same, upon such encouragement and wages as are allowed to the other inhabitants of this Colony, till the levies are full; and that his Honour the Governour be desired to direct Colonel Hinman to assure the Indians of the peaceable disposition of this Colony towards them; and that a proper speech be prepared and sent to the Caughnawaga Indians.

JOSEPH HAWLEY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, July 5, 1775.

SIR: You were pleased the other day to mention to Colonel Warren and me, as your opinion, that it was highly probable Gage's Troops would very shortly attack our Army in some part or other. I believe your opinion is not ill-founded; and I am sure your Excellency will be pleased with every intimation that may, in any degree, aid you in the choice of measures tending to success and victory. Therefore, that I may not be tedious, I ask your pardon when I suggest, that although in the Massachusetts part of the Army there are divers brave and intrepid officers, yet there are too many, and even several Colonels, whose characters, to say the least, are very equivocal with respect to courage. There is much more cause to fear that the officers will fail in a day of trial, than the privates. I may venture to say, that if the officers will do their duty, there is no fear of the soldiery. I therefore most humbly propose to your consideration the propriety and advantage of your making immediately a most solemn and peremptory declaration to all the officers of the Army, in general orders, or otherwise, as your wisdom shall direct, assuring them that every officer who, in the day of battle, shall fully do his duty, shall not fail of your kindest notices and highest marks of your favour; but, on the other hand, that every officer who, on such a day, shall act the poltron, dishonour his General, and by failing of his duty, betray his Country, shall infallibly meet his deserts, whatever his rank, connexions, or interest may be; and that no intercessions on his behalf will be likely to be of any avail for his pardon.

I know that your Excellency is able to form a declaration of the kind, conceived in such a style, and replete with such determined sentiments and spirit, as cannot fail of begetting a full belief and persuasion in the hearts of such to whom it shall be addressed, that the same will be infallibly executed. I am almost certain the measure will have the happiest tendency. Sed sapienti verbum sat est. Pray pardon my prolixity; I never was happy enough to be concise.

I am, with the greatest respect and deference, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

To General Washington.

DUKES COUNTY (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

July 5, 1775.

The Committee for the County of Dukes County, appointed by the late Provincial Congress, on the 12th of April last, beg leave to report, that said Committee, according to the first order of the Congress, met the first Wednesday of May last; but not having then had an opportunity to receive a state of the conduct of the several Towns, made no report; and as the order of the Congress for postponing the first meeting of the Committees of the several Counties in this Colony to the fourth Wednesday of May, was not received by him to whom it was directed, till the evening immediately preceding said fourth Wednesday, the Committee for said County did not meet. But being now on this first Wednesday of July, 1775, met, according to the order of the Congress, we have received no state of the conduct, either of the Towns of Edgarton or Chilmark, the former of which Towns having, as we perceive, no Committee of Correspondence. But as to the only other Town in this County, viz: Tisbury, the Committee of Correspondence of that Town have reported, that said Town was endeavouring that their outstanding Provincial rates be speedily paid, according to the direction of the Congress; but they were under great difficulty with respect to raising money for that purpose, as they have great occasion for money to procure a necessary supply of bread corn; and money was very scarce amongst them, through the failing of their whale voyages last year, and through their having no market for the oil they have since obtained; but since the date of the above Report, we have had certain information, that the said Town of Tisbury have sent a considerable part of their Province dues to the Receiver appointed by the Congress. And the said Committee of Correspondence for Tisbury do also report, that their Town is nearly, though not fully, according to law, furnished with arms and ammunition, and are endeavouring in this and all other respects to conform to the recommendations of the Continental and Provincial Congresses.

And with respect to the two Towns first mentioned, of whose conduct we have had no information, in the way pointed out by the Congress, we beg leave to report in brief, from information which we have otherwise had, that with regard to paying their outstanding Provincial taxes, and their furnishing themselves with arms and ammunition, they are endeavouring to conform, as soon as possible, to the recommendation of the Congress, and in other respects do conduct themselves agreeably thereto.

In the name and by order of the Committee:

JOSEPH MAYHEW, Chairman.

ADDRESS OF THE QUAKERS OF PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW-JERSEY.

To our Friends and Brethren of the several Meetings in PENNSYLVANIA and NEW-JERSEY:

DEAR FRIENDS: The afflictions and distresses attending the inhabitants of the Massachusetts and other parts of New-England, have often engaged our pity and commiseration, with a desire to be instrumental for their relief, as favourable opportunities should offer. And having received more particular information, since the yearly meeting held last month at Rhode-Island, than we had before, of the situation of our brethren and others in those parts, since which the desolations of war have greatly increased, we are incited by a spirit of sympathy and Christian tenderness to recommend to your serious and benevolent consideration the sorrowful calamities now prevailing among these people, earnestly desiring that we may encourage each other freely to contribute to the relief of the necessitous of every religious denomination; to promote which we have agreed upon, and herewith send you printed subscription papers, requesting that some suitable active Friends may be appointed in each of your monthly and preparative meetings, to apply for the donations of Friends for this charitable purpose, and that the money subscribed may be collected, and with all convenient speed paid into the hands of John Reynell, of Philadelphia, or Samuel Smith, of Burlington, Treasurers of our Yearly Meeting.

The Yearly Meeting at Rhode-Island, before mentioned, have appointed a Committee of twenty-six Friends, from the several quarterly meetings in New-England, who are to meet together at least once a month, in order to assist each other in inspecting and considering the state of those who are distressed, and they appear to us the most suitable persons to receive our contributions for their relief. With this Committee we propose to keep up a correspondence, and to unite our endeavours with theirs, that the benefactions raised may be distributed in the most seasonable and effectual manner, for the benefit of those who are or may be reduced to necessitous circumstances in this time of public calamity. We therefore desire that Friends may be liberal, according to their circumstances, and speedy in their contributions; and are your loving friends.

Signed in and on behalf of our meeting for sufferings, held in Philadelphia, for Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, the sixth day of the seventh month, 1775.

JOHN PEMBERTON, Clerk.

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 6, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We have the honour of your favour of the twenty-ninth June, accompanying your plan and proceedings respecting an accommodation with the Parent State. Nothing could be more interesting or acceptable to us, than a communication of the sentiments and wishes of our worthy constituents on this most important subject; and while we applaud the wisdom of your decisions, we beg you to be assured that they shall command our most earnest and respectful attention.

Deeply sensible of the calamities of a civil war, we have nothing more at heart than to be instrumental in compromising this unnatural quarrel between the two Countries, on the solid basis of mutual justice and constitutional liberty; and the most strenuous efforts, on our part, shall be exerted with unremitting ardour, to accomplish this salutary purpose.

We acknowledge, with the utmost gratitude, the deference you are pleased to pay to our judgment, and your delicacy in leaving us unrestrained, in a point of all others the most essential to yourselves and your posterity, to the Continent of America, and the whole British Empire; and happy shall we esteem ourselves if, in the discharge of this difficult and arduous trust, we shall merit your approbation and the confidence of our Country.

We have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants,

HENRY WISNER, PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
WM. FLOYD, JAMES DUANE,
JOHN JAY, ROBT R. LIVINGSTON.
JOHN ALSOP,

Provincial Congress of New-York.

P. S. We have unanimously agreed to be silent on that article in the Plan of Accommodation which asserts, "That no earthly legislature or tribunal ought, or can of right interfere or interpose, in any wise howsoever, in the religious and ecclesiastical concerns of the Colonies." As the inhabitants of the Continent are happily united in a political creed, we are of opinion that it would be highly imprudent to run the risk of dividing them by the introduction of disputes foreign to the present controversy, especially as the discussion of them can be attended with no one single advantage. They are points about which mankind will forever differ, and therefore should always, and at least in times like these, be kept out of sight. We are the more confirmed in these sentiments by this circumstance, that both this and the former Congress have cautiously avoided the least hint on subjects of this kind, all the members concurring in a desire of burying all disputes on ecclesiastical points, which have for ages had no other tendency than that of banishing peace and charity from the world.

ELIZABETHTOWN (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK.

Committee Chamber, Elizabethtown, July 6, 1775.

SIR: We have just received information that one William McLeod, son of Captain McLeod of this place, lately appointed an Ensign in the Fifty-Second Regiment at Boston, left this Town early this morning and went to New-York, in order to take passage from thence to join his Regiment. We have thought fit to give you this intelligence that you may do what you think proper on the occasion. As soon as we got notice of his departure for such a purpose, his baggage was detained. By order of the Committee:

JONA. HAMPTON, Chairman.

Mariner's*, in Horse and Cart-street, innholders; Captain Van Wyck, at Mr. Abraham Van Dyck's.

Volunteers, from the time of their enlistment, to enter into immediate pay, at one shilling and eleven pence per day; and also to receive one dollar per week until they are encamped, in order to enable them to support themselves in the intermediate time. And they are likewise to be provided with a suit of regimental clothes, a fire-lock, ammunition, accoutrements, and every other article necessary for the equipment of American soldiers.

God save the Congresses.

EDWARD MOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, July 6, 1775.

HONOURABLE SIR: I arrived here last night, ten o'clock, from Ticonderoga; am sent express by Colonel Hinman to acquaint the Committee at this place, and also the Provincial Congress at New-York, with the condition of the troops and garrisons at Ticonderoga, Crown Point, and Fort George; expect to set out from hence for New-York to-morrow; have not as yet waited on the Committee here, but write these lines by Captain Stevens, who will not tarry, but sets out for home this morning. When I arrived at Ticonderoga, Colonel Hinman had no command there, as Colonel Arnold refused to let him command either of the garrisons, but had given the command of Ticonderoga to Captain Herrick, from whom Colonel Hinman's men were obliged to take their orders, or were not suffered to pass to and from the garrison. The same day a Committee of three gentlemen from the Massachusetts, viz: Mr. Spooner, Colonel Foster, and Colonel Sullivan, returned to Ticonderoga from Crown Point, and informed us that they had been to Colonel Arnold, with orders from the Congress requiring him to resign the command to Colonel Hinman, and that he, with his regiment, should come under the command of said Hinman; which said Arnold positively refused; on which said Committee discharged Colonel Arnold from their service, and desired the privilege to speak with the people who had engaged under Arnold, but were refused. They further informed that Colonel Arnold and some of his people were gone on board the vessels; that they understood they threatened to go to St. John's and deliver the vessels to the Regulars, and that Arnold had disbanded all his troops but those that were on board said vessels; that they were treated very ill and threatened, and after they came away in a batteau, they were fired upon with swivel-guns and small-arms by Arnold's people; and that Colonel Arnold and his men had got both the vessels and were drawn off into the lake. On which I desired Colonel Hinman to let me, with Lieutenant Halsey and Mr. Duer, (who was Judge of the Court for the County of Charlotte, in this Colony,) with some men to row, have a batteau and proceed up the lake, and go on board the vessels. We obtained liberty, and Colonel Sullivan consented to go with us. We got on board the vessels about eleven o'clock in the morning, and he confined three of us on board each vessel; men sat over us with fixed bayonets; and so kept us till sometime in the evening, when we were dismissed and suffered to return. We reasoned with the people on board the vessels all the while we were there, and convinced some of them of their error, who declared they had been deceived by Colonel Arnold. After we returned to the fort, called up Colonel Hinman, who ordered Lieutenant Halsey, with twenty-five men, to return again to the vessels and get what people he could on board to join him, and bring one or both vessels to the fort, which was all settled the next day. Colonel Sullivan was much insulted while we were on board the vessels, chiefly by Mr. Brown, one of Colonel Arnold's Captains. Captain Stevens, who is waiting while I write these lines, will not wait longer, or you should hear more particulars. I expect you will have a full account from the gentlemen Committee after they have laid it before their Congress. Captain Elijah Babcock can give a full account of those matters; he tells me he shall be at Hartford in a few days. Shall give further accounts from New-York.

I am, Sir, at command, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,
EDWARD MOTT.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour.

ETHAN ALLEN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

July 6, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: Your letter of the eighth ultimo gave me to understand that my painful services, in behalf of my Country, were noticed by your Honour; my letters having received your patronage, were received by the honourable Continental Congress with that additional lustre they needed.

The notice your Honour, as well as Grand Continental Congress, I may add the Provincial Congress of New-York, hath taken of my zeal in the common cause, hath more confirmed and authoritatively determined me to hazard my life in the same, and exert the small abilities with which I am endowed, to the utmost, as I have received assurances from both Congresses of shortly being admitted to an honourable preferment in the Army. I am now on my passage between New-York and Albany from those Congresses, in company with Mr. Seth Warner, my companion, with directions to form a battalion of seven companies of Green Mountain Boys; they are expert in the use of fire-arms.

As to our past services, it is recommended by the Grand Continental Congress that the Government of New-York pay the same as to gratuities, mentioned in your Honour's letter; a little of that from Connecticut would be thankfully received, as we served equally in the night as in the day, in making a conquest of Lake Champlain; for which extreme service we are to be paid the same as the honourable General Assembly of Connecticut have established relative to their soldiery, and that none of our officers in that service be considered in a higher rank than Captain.

Your Honour's inviolable attachment, and unshaken and religious perseverance in support of the liberties of America, manifested from the era of the detestable Stamp Act, hath not only entitled, but gained you the love and esteem of every friend to this Country, of whatever rank or denomination.

That your Honour may long live and sway that respectable Colony in the way of virtue and liberty, and after this transitory life receive the unspeakable reward of social virtue, is the sincere desire of him who is, with the greatest respect, your Honour's devoted, most obedient and humble servant,
ETHAN ALLEN.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut.

CAPTAIN ANGUS McDONALD TO COLONEL ALEXANDER McDUGALL.

Fairfield Jail, July 6, 1775.

SIR: I wrote you a few days ago concerning my close confinement, which I think very hard and contrary to promise, as I expected to be treated more like a gentleman than a highwayman, for it really never was my intent to offer to make my escape from my confinement, till such times as I should be properly released; or if I am not released, I must only make my application to be exchanged. But at the same time I hope Colonel McDougall will be good enough to speak to the gentlemen of the Congress in regard to my having the liberty of the yard; to have the air is all I desire, and if I break through my liberty I will suffer death, or such other punishment as I shall deserve. This day my wife is come here, if she will be permitted to stay with me, as General Wooster told me to send for her, and that I should have the more liberty while she staid with me. And your goodness in this point I much depend on in this case, for I know one word from Colonel McDougall will be sufficient for my request; and in so doing I shall forever remain your ever humble and obedient servant,

ANGUS McDONALD.

To Colonel Alexander McDougall.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Hartford, July 6, 1775.

SIR: I received your favour of the thirtieth of June, enclosing a copy of the resolution of the honourable Continental Congress, and immediately laid them before the General Assembly of the Colony. They would have been happy to have found themselves in a situation to have complied fully with the request you were charged with to them; but such is the exhausted state of our Treasury, in consequence of the very vigorous efforts they have made, and are daily making in the common cause, that it was impossible for them, consistent to their previous engagements, to furnish you with more than fifteen thousand; and even this sum cannot be spared immediately, but shall be got ready and forwarded, as you shall direct, with all possible despatch, and I hope will be at Mr. Livingston's within . . . days at farthest. Our inability, with concurrence acknowledge, with respect to the other most important article is still greater. All that we can do is to deliver to Captain Douglass forty half-barrels, which he will immediately proceed with agreeable to your order. Our Engineer (Col. Mott) at Ticonderoga, has requested that a commander for one of the armed vessels upon Lake George, may be sent up from this Colony—a Captain Niles, with whom he is acquainted, and who is probably well qualified for the office. But as you can best judge of the nature of this service, and the necessity of sending up this person, you will give me leave to expect your directions upon this project, which I shall very readily conform to. I enclose you copy of a paper of intelligence I have received from Mr. Deane, which may perhaps be of some use to you.

I am, &c.

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

N. B. Mr. Deane requests that this intelligence may not be made publick.

Extract of a Narrative and Remarks made by a Gentleman who left CANADA on the fourteenth JUNE last: enclosed in Governour TRUMBULL's Letter to General SCHUYLER, dated JULY 6, 1775.

The Indians in Canada had heard of the present unhappy disputes subsisting between Great Britain and the Colonies, and took the opportunity of my being among them to inquire into the origin and reasons of the same.

I gladly improved all such opportunities to inform them of the ground of the present controversy, and carefully inculcated upon them that they themselves were nearly interested in the event of our present glorious struggles for liberty and freedom. The Indians, by what I could then learn, pretty generally determined to take no part in the quarrel. Things remained in this situation with regard to the Indians, when the Provincial Troops reduced the fortresses of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and took the King's sloop at St. John's. The Indians at Caughnawaga were then sent to, by the Commander-in-Chief at Montreal, and desired to march a number of their men in company of the Regular Troops, to oppose the Colonists, who, it was reported, were on their way from St. John's to besiege Montreal. The Indians refused to join them, or in any manner intermeddle in the affair. The chief warrior came directly to inform me that he had refused to join the Regular Troops, and that they had determined in Council, that if any of their young warriors should take up the hatchet against their brethren of the Provinces, they would banish them forever. This was the full determination of the Indians when his Excellency Governour Carleton arrived at Montreal. He directly solicited the Indians for their assistance; but on their refusal, declared that since they would not assist him, he would dispossess them, and give their lands to those who would. The Sachems had Council after Council, to determine what was to be done in that critical juncture of affairs. In short, they were under so great apprehensions of danger from the Regular Troops, that once, in particular, they lay under arms all night, set out sentries in all parts of their Town, and even sent for assistance to some of the upper Towns; but being situated within about nine miles of Montreal, and so immediately exposed to the Governour's resentment, they found themselves reduced to the disagreeable necessity either of relinquishing every thing they held dear in life, or complying in some measure with the Governour's demands. Principles of self-preservation induced them to prefer the latter. They therefore waited on the Governour, and in two speeches, one by the Sachems of the Castle, the other delivered by the Chief Warriour, promised to espouse the ministerial cause so far as to defend the Governour, to the utmost of their power, should he be besieged in Montreal by the Provincial Troops. The Indians were dismissed with presents of provision and ammunition. Shortly after, his Excellency sent to the Sachems, desiring them to send a number of their men to St. John's to continue some time with the Regulars. The Sachems refused it. He then desired them to send a small party, should it be only three; but they persisting in their refusal, he requested them to send a few, should they only carry their tobacco pouches; which request they also absolutely refused. Upon my leaving Canada, the Indians of Caughnawaga desired me to assure the commander at Crown Point, that if any Indians were known to commit hostilities upon the English frontiers, he might determine they were none of their people. When I left Montreal, the 14th of June, I met with a number of the principal Sachems belonging to St. Francois, some of whom had their children then at Dartmouth College; they gave me all the assurances of their friendship I could desire, and informed me they were going to Caughnawaga to attend on a Grand Council, which was then summoned to meet from the several adjacent Towns. The Indians also informed me that the design of the Council then to meet was, that the people of their several Towns might then jointly determine to act in the approaching war only on the defensive, and that when they had concluded on that, they should send two men from each of their Towns to the Seven United Nations, and use their utmost interest with them to do the same. Their influence upon these united Nations is considerable, for it is well known that the greater part of them originally belonged to the Seven United Nations. This, by the best information I could obtain, seems to be the present disposition of the Indians in Canada; but how far the force of menaces may drive, or large promises allure them, the event only can manifest. But as the fickle disposition of the Indians is so well known, it will doubtless be judged a prudent measure to provide against the worst. Some time before I left Canada, the Commissary at Montreal received orders to make provision for three hundred Indians, who were soon expected from the remote tribes; and as I left the City, I observed a number of Indians, (should judge about forty,) whom I supposed to be an advanced party of the three hundred. It is said they are coming down to a Congress, and conjectured by our friends that the Governour designs to arm them against our frontiers. As to the state of the Army and Fortresses at Canada, it is well known that the number of regular troops is very inconsiderable, the greatest part of whom are now drawn together at St. John's, who don't make up a body of more than three hundred, or three hundred and fifty men. At St. John's, which is a level plain, they are fortifying to the best advantage which the nature of the place and their time will admit. Chamblée, a fort which the French built a few miles down the same river, is by account strong, both by nature and art, and is defended at present only by a small garrison. The fortifications at Montreal, which were originally designed only for defence against small-arms, are much out of repair. The citadel, which is situated on an eminence at the north end of the City, though weak, seems to be the place of the greatest strength. As to the fort up the River St. Lawrence, I can speak only from information, never having travelled into those parts, but have endeavoured to avail myself of their situation, present state, and importance, by conversing with gentlemen well acquainted in that country. Am informed there are four garrisoned forts to the westward of Montreal, viz: Oswego, Niagara, Detroit, and Michilimackinack, two or more of which I understand are stockaded forts, and defended by a small garrison for the purpose of protecting the fur trade. Whoever considers the almost numberless and very extensive connexions of the River St. Lawrence, the great facility with which a plentiful supply of arms and all kinds of military stores may be sent from Canada to almost the western confines of our Continent, together with the extensive fur trade, which for several years has been carried on in that country to the great emolument of Britain; but especially whoever considers the many avenues which this river, with its several dependants, affords into almost every English Colony upon the Continent, can't but see it to be matter of very great importance to the Colonies, immediately to make themselves masters of those remote forts, which command, as it were, the whole western world of Indians. By which step they would not only secure to themselves and after generations all those advantages which are to be derived from their being in possession of a very fine extensive country, but more effectually secure their frontiers, than otherwise can be done even by many thousands of men.

REPORT OF THE CROWN POINT COMMITTEE TO THE MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS.

Cambridge, July 6, 1775.

The Committee appointed to proceed to the posts of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, &c., beg leave to report, that they proceeded through the new settlements, called the New-Hampshire Grants, and carefully observed the road through the same, and find that there is a good road from Williamstown to the place where the road crosseth the river called Paulet River, which is about fifteen miles from Skenesborough; from thence to the falls of Wood Creek, near Major Skene's house, the road is not feasible, and unfit for carriages, but cattle may be drove that way very well.

Your Committee having taken with them the copies of the commission and instruction from the Committee of Safety to Colonel Benedict Arnold, and informed themselves as fully as they were able in what manner he had executed his said commission and instructions, and find that he was with Colonel Allen and others at the time the fort was reduced, but do not find that he had any men under his command at the time of the reduction of those fortresses; but find that he did afterwards possess himself of the sloop on the lake at St. John's. We found the said Arnold claiming the command of said sloop and a schooner, which is said to be the property of Major Skene, and also all the posts and fortresses at the south end of Lake Champlain and Lake George, although Colonel Hinman was at Ticonderoga with near a thousand men under his command at the several posts.

Your Committee informed the said Arnold of their commission, and, at his request, gave him a copy of their instructions; upon reading of which he seemed greatly disconcerted, and declared he would not be second in command to any person whomsoever; and after some time contemplating upon the matter, resigned his post, and gave your Committee his resignation under his hand, dated the 24th of June, 1775, which is herewith submitted, and at the same time he ordered his men to be disbanded, which, he said, was between two and three hundred. Your Committee not finding any men regularly under said Arnold, by reason of his so disbanding them, appointed Colonel Easton, who was at Ticonderoga, to take the command, under Colonel Hinman, who was the principal commanding officer at those posts of the Connecticut forces, and endeavoured to give the officers and men who had served under said Arnold an opportunity to re-engage, of which numbers enlisted, and several of the officers agreed to hold their command under the new appointment.

Your Committee having taken a critical survey of the garrison and posts of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, found them in a very defenceless state; and, consulting with Colonel Hinman, were of opinion, upon the whole, that it is necessary to retain in the service of this Colony, for the present, the number of four hundred men.

As the Committee were informed, from intelligence from Canada, that preparations were making, and all endeavours used to bring over the Canadians and savages to be inimical to these Colonies, your Committee having found Captain Noble at the Point, with a number of men who had been under said Arnold, willing to engage in the service, we paid to said Noble one hundred Pounds, to be delivered to the men as advance pay; and appointed Mr. William Satterlee, a worthy man, to muster them and their arms, and took Captain Noble's and Satterlee's receipt for the same, and their promise to apply it for that purpose, which is herewith submitted.

Your Committee returning to Ticonderoga, and Colonel Easton being there, they paid into his hands the sum of two hundred and eighty Pounds, to be applied for the purpose aforesaid, and took his receipt and promise so to do, and appointed Mr. Jonas Fay, a respectable person, to muster the men and their arms, all except Captain Noble's Company. We also paid into the hands of one Remember Baker, said to be a good officer, who engaged a certain number of men under Colonel Easton, the sum of twenty Pounds, and took his receipt and promise to apply said money as advance pay to said men, which completes the whole of the money delivered to said Committee for the purposes aforesaid.

Your Committee have engaged to Colonel Easton that the remaining part of the advance pay should be immediately sent to him.

Your Committee found that as soon as Colonel Arnold had disbanded his men, some of them became dissatisfied and mutinous, and many of them signified to the Committee that they had been informed that they were to be defrauded out of the pay for past services. The Committee, in order to quiet them, engaged under their hands, in behalf of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, that as soon as the rolls should be made up and properly authenticated, they should be paid for their past services, and all those who should engage anew should have the same bounty and wages as is promised to those men who serve within said Colony.

Your Committee inquired of Mr. Henry Bleecker, of Albany, how the men at those posts were supplied with provisions, who informed that he acted under his brother, who was a Commissioner of Supplies from New-York; that all the men at those stations, of whatsoever Colony, were supplied by him without distinction, and that he should continue so to do until otherwise directed.

Your Committee appointed Timothy Edwards and Samuel Brown, Esquires, a Committee to supply the men under Colonel Easton's command with such necessaries as should not be supplied from New-York, and appointed Captain Elisha Phelps to act as Commissary under them, to deal out to the men whatsoever should be supplied by the said Edwards and Brown.

Your Committee being of the opinion that a Major should be appointed under Colonel Easton, and one Surgeon to the battalion, and having inquired into the disposition of the officers and men who have engaged, have appointed John Brown, Esquire, as Major, and Mr. Jonas Fay as Surgeon.

Your Committee, when they had received Colonel Arnold's resignation, directed him to return to Congress, and render an account of his proceedings, agreeable to their instructions, a copy of which order is herewith submitted.

Your Committee made an examination of the military stores at those posts, a schedule whereof is herewith delivered, excepting some leaden and iron ball and old chains, which have been dug out of the ruins of Crown Point fort.

Your Committee finding that the men at those stations had not a sufficiency of gunpowder to defend the posts, and upon a careful inquiry could not find any at Albany, have directed said Committee of Supplies to supply them with two hundred weight from some of the town stocks in the County of Berkshire, on the credit of the Colony.

Your Committee are of opinion that the maintaining of those posts is of the utmost importance to the security of the Colony of New-York and the New-England Colonies, which was a sufficient inducement to the Committee to continue in the pay of this Colony the number of men before mentioned. The fortress not being at present tenable, there must be a sufficient number of men to command the lake, and prevent the enemy from landing.

Your Committee are of opinion that the best security of those posts in their present state is, by armed vessels of various constructions to be kept constantly cruising on the lake, and small boats with swivel guns to act as scouts, which will effectually prevent the enemy from sudden surprise.

Your Committee have, agreeable to their instructions, advised the honourable American Congress, the honourable Convention of the Colony of New-York, and the Governour of Connecticut, by respectfully signifying to them their opinion of the importance of the maintaining those posts, and the measures for effectuating the same. All which is humbly submitted.

WALTER SPOONER, by order.

Copy of the Warrant to BROWN and EDWARDS.

The Committee appointed by the Congress of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay to appoint a Committee to supply the troops stationed by said Colony at Ticonderoga and Crown Point with provisions, &c., do hereby appoint you, the said Edwards and Brown, to supply said troops, on the credit of the said Colony, with blankets, if they should require them, according to the establishment for the Colony's Army, and with such provisions not supplied by the Colony of New-York as shall be necessary, according to the establishment of the Government of Connecticut for their forces at those posts; and you are hereby directed to send such provisions as you shall make for the said Colony's troops to, who is appointed a Commissary there to receive the same, and deal them out to the said troops. And for all which this shall be your sufficient warrant, until some future Congress or House of Representatives shall otherwise order.

Crown Point, June 23, 1775.

SIR: You having signified to the Committee who are appointed and directed by the Provincial Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay to inquire into the state of the fortresses at Crown Point, Ticonderoga, &c., and the appendages thereof, your resolution to resign all your command of the said fortresses, and the vessels and stores thereunto belonging, for reasons under your hand expressed:

This is to inform you, that it is the expectation of the Provincial Congress aforesaid, that the chief officer of the Connecticut forces at those stations will command the same for the present; and the Committee accordingly expect that you conform yourself to the directions of said Congress in that behalf, and deliver the same to such chief officer of the Connecticut forces, or his order, for which this shall be your authority. The Committee expect that you will, as soon as may be, lay an account of your disbursements before the Provincial Congress, agreeable to our instructions, a copy whereof is lodged with you.

By order of the Committee.

Colonel Benedict Arnold.

Colonel ARNOLD's refusal to serve any longer.

Crown Point, June 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Your instructions of the 14th instant from the Provincial Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay, in regard to my conduct here, being now before me, I will answer in course.

In the first place, I observe you are appointed to examine my conduct, and in what manner I have executed my commission. I look on this instruction at this juncture as unprecedented, and a very plain intimation that the Congress are dubious of my rectitude or abilities, which is a sufficient inducement for me to decline serving them longer.

Secondly, the Congress have authorized you to judge of my spirit, capacity, and conduct, and determine whether I shall continue in commission, and if so, that I shall be under the command of a person appointed by the Colony of Connecticut. In answer to the first part, it appears to me very extraordinary that the Congress should first appoint an officer, and afterwards, when he had executed his commission, to appoint a Committee to examine if he was fit for his post. I think the examination should have been prior to the commission, and that after executing that commission they should order a younger officer of the same rank to take the command of the fortresses, vessels, &c., conquered, plainly indicates the loss of their confidence, and is a most disgraceful reflection on him and the body of troops he commands, which is a sufficient inducement to resign, not to mention the very great hardship on the private men, who, having served well near two months, are now to be mustered, and if, by sickness or hard labour, they are reduced and not fit for service, and of course do not pass muster, they are to lose their former time and service, and reduced to the distress of begging their bread until they can get home to their friends.

The last objection I have to make is, that I have so far lost the confidence of the Congress, that they have declined sending me money, as was promised by Captain Brown, to discharge the small and unavoidable debts I have contracted for necessaries for the use of the Army, for which my own credit is at stake, and I am reduced to the necessity of leaving the place with dishonour, or waiting until I can send home and discharge those debts out of my private purse. The latter of which I am determined to do, though I have already advanced one hundred Pounds, lawful money, out of my private purse. All which reasons I believe will be thought a sufficient inducement for me to decline holding my commission longer.

I am, Gentlemen, your most humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Messrs. Spooner, Foster, and Sullivan, present.

Ticonderoga, June 28, 1775.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your motion and encouragement when present at this place, together with a view of quickening the minds of the soldiers of my Company, I herewith present you with an account of the several proportions of time each person named in the pay-roll have actually served in my Company in the present northern expedition, together with the several capacities in which they have severally served, and have endeavoured, to the utmost of my ability, to exhibit it with impartiality and exactness. And if any mistake is found in exhibiting the particular sum of the different capacity in which either has served, I hope it will be imputed solely to inadvertence, as I have not a form of the establishment of the Massachusetts-Bay at command; therefore, should you find, on examination, any mistake of the kind, beg the favour you would please to make such additions to, or subtractions from, as is equitable, agreeable to the form as established for that Province.

I have received seven Pounds and four Shillings, and my Lieutenant, Mr. Satterlee, sixteen Pounds and eight Shillings, amounting, in the whole, to twenty-three Pounds and twelve Shillings, lawful money, from Colonel Arnold, for the use of the soldiers in my Company, which you will either please to deduct from the foot of the pay-bill, and discharge me for the same from him, or send the whole contents, with directions to me to repay him, which I shall readily comply with, which I humbly submit to your wisdom.

I have sent no account in the pay-bill for extra expense in enlisting a Company, for billeting, and otherwise supplying my soldiers in a forced march, &c., nor included any allowance therein for good Mr. Satterlee's extra fatigue and faithfulness as Adjutant of the Regiment; but leave it to some future period, not doubting such ample reward will be made as is provided for others in like capacity in your Government.

Your paying the amount of the pay-bill to Lieutenant William Satterlee, the bearer, with his receipt on the back therefor, shall be your sufficient discharge for so much received for the use of my Company, and the favours shall be ever gratefully acknowledged by, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JONAS FAY,

By order and in behalf of SAMUEL HERRICK, Captain.

THEODORE ATKINSON TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.*

Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, July 6, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In answer to your request touching my delivery of the records and files belonging to, and now in the Secretary's office of this Province, I beg leave to acquaint you that I am, by His Majesty's special commission, appointed Secretary of this Province during His Majesty's pleasure and my residence in this Province; and agreeable thereto I was admitted and sworn into that office, and had the keeping the archives belonging thereto delivered to me, and put under my direction and in my keeping. You cannot but see my honour and my oath forbids my consent

* COPY OF A LETTER PREPARED FOR THE CONGRESS AT EXETER BY MR. ATKINSON, BUT NOT FORWARDED.

GENTLEMEN: I have seen your appointment and directions from the Provincial Congress to receive from me the records and files of the Secretary's office. This delivery by me would be a transaction that I dare not be a volunteer in. My appointment is by His Majesty's special commission to be Secretary of this Province, and to hold the same during His Majesty's pleasure and my residence in the same; by which appointment I execute that office in the different branches of duty, viz: as recording the transactions of the General Assembly, and of the Governor and Council when they meet on any other or special occasion; also, when they sit as a Court of Appeals from the Courts of the Common Law in this Province, or from sentences of the Courts of Probate of Wills, &c. I am also to give every vessel a certificate and passport that she is regularly cleared outwards. These are all separate branches of the Secretary's office, and I am under oath to keep the same agreeable to the directions of the law in all things whereunto that office hath relation; and thus the records, &c., are committed to my care and trust, &c.

Now, gentlemen, consider my situation. If I am active, and voluntarily deliver these archives so committed to my care without proper authority, am I not criminal? In this Province I know there is not above one single precedent of this nature, and that not a parallel. This happened in Governor Cranfield's time, or soon after he abdicated the chair of government of this Province. A number of men armed attacked the Secretary's office, (one Chamberlain then Secretary,) and forced from him all the records and files thereof, not only what is now esteemed the Secretary's office, but also what is now called the Recorder's, such as deeds and conveyances of freehold estates; also, those of the Court of Probate of Wills, &c., and the several Courts of Common Law, General Sessions of the Peace, &c., &c. What confusion this transaction occasioned is not to be conceived. All the archives of the Province thus held in the hands of the multitude, and which so remained till the glorious revolution in King William and Queen Mary's time, when a general amnesty took place, &c., &c. Notwithstanding, those records and files have never, to this day, found the way to their respective offices, but still remain (what is left of them) in that confused condition to this time; and doubtless many widows and orphans, as well as others, have met great disadvantages, and suffered much loss. If you turn your thoughts to the present distressing situation of North America—two armies of twelve or fifteen thousand men each, and both His Majesty's subjects, now encamped within cannon shot of each other, alternately spilling the blood and spreading the carnage of their fellow-subjects—these, I think, call for all our thoughts and endeavours how to extricate us without haling into action any affair not likely to contribute to the first and grand affair of peace and harmony between Great Britain and America. If you examine the transactions of the neighbouring Province for precedents, your search, I imagine, will be fruitless. General Gage has been personally at Salem, and though he disapproved the transaction of the town meetings, he never pretended to intermeddle with the records; Cambridge, whose situation is in the midst of the dispute, nor Concord, though that town has been plundered, yet the County or Town records remain unaffected.

For these reasons I cannot think any such power as taking the records from the usual places, &c., was delegated to you in your appointment. I have been thus prolix in giving the reasons why, if the records of the Secretary's office are taken out of my possession by you, they will be taken without my consent or approbation.

I am, Gentlemen, yours.

or even my connivance in such a delivery, unless accompanied with His Majesty's supersedeas, or my not being resident in this Province.

Gentlemen, the difficulties, I may say the distresses in the Province, and indeed of the whole Continent, are such that every additional cause of perplexity should be avoided. I have, gentlemen, no thoughts of attempting to maintain the security of the records in my custody by force. This I know would have no good effect. My aim is only to remove any grounds of complaint that may be against me for either neglect or malepractice in the execution of my said office.

I am, Gentlemen, with proper regard, your humble servant,
THEODORE ATKINSON.

To Major William Weeks, and the rest of the Committee.

SECRETARY ATKINSON TO GOVERNOUR WENTWORTH.

Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, July 7, 1775.

SIR: Your Excellency will give me leave to acquaint you, that on the fourth instant I had, as Secretary, a visit from a Committee appointed by the Provincial Congress of this Colony held at Exeter. They showed me their appointment, and requested the delivery of all the records and files in the Secretary's office. I told them it would be against my honour and my oath of office to be a volunteer in such delivery. After an hour's moderate conversation, and without any heat, the Committee left me, and I was in hopes I should not have any farther visit from them; but on the sixth instant they came again and urged the delivery. I still refused as before, and told them they well knew it was not in my power to defend the office by force of arms; if they took the records, &c., or any of them, they must be answerable. They then entered the office and took all the files and records belonging to the Secretary's office, except those books in which were recorded the several charter grants of land, which were with your Excellency to take some minutes from. The Committee offered me their receipt, agreeable to their orders from the Congress, but I refused, being no otherwise concerned than barely as a spectator. They then cleared the offices of all the books and papers, and transported them to Exeter, where they are (I am informed) to remain till further order. Thus I have stated the facts as they occurred; and I am, may it please your Excellency, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

THEODORE ATKINSON.

Governour Wentworth.

SECRETARY ATKINSON TO GOVERNOUR WENTWORTH.

In Provincial Congress, Exeter, July 7, 1775.

Whereas this Congress have resolved it as their opinion, that all the publick Records of the Colony were at this time unsafe in the Town of Portsmouth, and that the same should be removed to the Town of Exeter, all which Records have in consequence thereof been removed by a Committee appointed for that purpose as far as came to their knowledge, except the books of Charters of the several Townships in this Colony: Therefore, it is now Resolved, That the Honourable Theodore Atkinson, Esquire, Secretary of the Colony, is accountable to the people for said Records, and that he ought without delay to deliver the same to the Committee.

Extract from the Minutes:

Attest: NOAH EMERY, Deputy Secretary.

Monday, July 10, 1775.

SIR: The above is a copy of what I received from Major Weeks of the Committee that required the Records, &c., the other day. I made the same answer to him that I did to the Committee the other day, viz: that I could make no delivery: if they took them, they must be answerable. Major Weeks seemed sorrowful that he was appointed, &c.

To his Excellency the Governour.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL, LONDON.

Friday, July 7, 1775.

A Court of Common Council was held this day at Guildhall, when the Court re-assumed the consideration of the letter from the Committee of New-York, addressed to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of London; when a motion was made by Mr. Staveland, that an humble Address, Remonstrance, and Petition, relative to the distressed situation of the American Colonies, should be presented by the City, in their corporate capacity, to His Majesty. This caused warm debates, it being strongly opposed by several of the members. Mr. Hunt then made the following motion:

"That an humble Address and Petition be presented to His Majesty, praying that he will be pleased to cause hostilities to cease between Great Britain and America, and to adopt such measures as will restore union, confidence, and peace over the British Empire."

This motion, (leaving out the word "Remonstrance," after several debates, was carried in the affirmative.

The number for the motion were: six Aldermen, sixty-six Commoners, and two Tellers.—Total 74.

Against the motion: six Aldermen, fifty-one Commoners, and two Tellers.—Total 59.

Majority for the motion 15.

Mr. Hunt then moved, that a Committee of six Aldermen and twelve Commoners might be directly appointed to draw up the Petition and Address, which passed in the affirmative. The Committee withdrew, and in a short time returned with a most respectful Petition and Address, which met the approbation of the whole Court, except one dissenting Alderman.

The Sheriffs are directed to attend His Majesty at St. James's next Wednesday, in order to know when he will be pleased to receive the above Address, which will be presented by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, in their gowns.

On Wednesday, July 12th, the two Sheriffs and City Remembrancer, waited on His Majesty at St. James's to know when he would be graciously pleased to receive the City Petition and Address; when he was pleased to appoint Friday at two o'clock.

On Friday, July 14th, the following humble Address and Petition was presented to the King, by the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, the Aldermen Bull, Lewes, Hayley, Lee, Plomer, Hart, and several of the Common Council:

To the King's most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address and Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of LONDON, in Common Council assembled:

Most gracious Sovereign:

Your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, with all humility beg leave to lay themselves at your Royal feet, humbly imploring your benign attention towards the grievous distraction of their fellow-subjects in America.

The characteristic of the people, Sire, over whom you reign has ever been equally remarked for an unparalleled loyalty to their Sovereign, whilst the principles of the Constitution have been the rule of his Government; as well as a firm opposition, whenever their rights have been invaded.

Your American subjects, Royal Sire, descended from the same ancestors with ourselves, appear equally jealous of their prerogatives of freemen, without which they cannot deem themselves happy.

Their cheerful and unasked-for contributions, as well as willing services to the Mother Country, whilst they remained free from the clog of compulsory laws, will, we are sure, plead powerfully with the humanity of your disposition, for graciously granting them every reasonable opportunity of giving, as freemen, what they seem resolutely determined to refuse, under the injunction of laws made independent of their own consent.

The abhorrence we entertain of civil bloodshed and confusion will, we trust, Sire, if not wholly exculpate us in your Royal mind, yet plead powerfully in our favour for the warmth with which we lament those measures whose destructive principles have driven our American brethren to acts of desperation.

Convinced of the earnest disposition of the Colonists to remain firm in all dutious obedience to the constitutional authority of this Kingdom, permit us, most gracious Sovereign, to beseech you, that those operations of force, which at present distract them with the most dreadful apprehensions, may be suspended; and that, uncontrolled by a restraint incompatible with a free Government, they may possess an opportunity of tendering such terms of accommodation as we doubt not will approve them worthy of a distinguished rank amongst the firmest friends of this Country.

His Majesty's Answer.

I am always ready to listen to the dutiful Petitions of my subjects, and ever happy to comply with their reasonable requests; but while the constitutional authority of this Kingdom is resisted by part of my American subjects, I owe it to the rest of my people, of whose zeal and fidelity I have had such constant proofs, to continue and enforce those measures by which alone their rights and interests can be asserted and maintained.

London, July 22, 1775.

Yesterday was held a Court of Common Council, when a motion was made by Mr. Hurford, and seconded by Mr. Harrison, that this Court do order a letter, signed by the Town Clerk, to be sent to Isaac Low, Esq., Chairman of the New-York Committee, in order to be by him laid before the Committee, acknowledging the receipt of the Committee's letter to this Court, enclosing a copy of this Court's late Petition and Address to His Majesty, and His Majesty's Answer; upon which a previous question was moved by Mr. Deputy Leeky; the main question being read, the question was whether that be now put; for which there were two Aldermen, forty-seven Commoners, and two Tellers; total fifty-one. Against the question being put, six Aldermen, fifty-six Commoners, and two Tellers; total sixty-four. Majority against putting the main question, thirteen.

DR. FRANKLIN TO DR. JOSEPH PRIESTLEY, IN ENGLAND.

Philadelphia, July 7, 1775.

DEAR FRIEND: The Congress met at a time when all minds were so exasperated by the perfidy of General Gage, and his attack on the country people, that propositions for attempting an accommodation were not much relished; and it has been with difficulty that we have carried another humble Petition to the Crown, to give Britain one more chance, one opportunity more of recovering the friendship of the Colonies; which, however, I think she has not sense enough to embrace, and so I conclude she has lost them for ever.

She has begun to burn our seaport Towns; secure, I suppose, we shall never be able to return the outrage in kind. She may doubtless destroy them all; but if she wishes to recover our commerce, are these the probable means? She must certainly be distracted; for no tradesman out of Bedlam ever thought of increasing the number of his customers by knocking them on the head; or of enabling them to pay their debts by burning their houses.

If she wishes to have us subjects, and that we should submit to her as our compound sovereign, she is now giving us such miserable specimens of her government, that we shall ever detest and avoid it, as a complication of robbery, murder, famine, fire, and pestilence.

You will have heard, before this reaches you, of the treacherous conduct of General Gage to the remaining people in Boston, in detaining their goods, after stipulating to let them go out with their effects, on pretence that merchants' goods were not effects; the defeat of a great body of his troops by the country people at Lexington; some other small advantages gained in skirmishes with their troops; and the action at Bunker's Hill, in which they were twice repulsed, and the third time gained a dear victory. Enough has happened, one would think, to convince your Ministers that the Americans will fight, and that this is a harder nut to crack than they imagined.

We have not yet applied to any foreign Power for assistance, nor offered our commerce for their friendship. Perhaps we never may: yet it is natural to think of it, if we are pressed.

We have now an Army on the establishment, which still holds yours besieged.

My time was never more fully employed. In the morning, at six, I am at the Committee of Safety, appointed by the Assembly to put the Province in a state of defence; which Committee holds till near nine, when I am at the Congress, and that sits till after four in the afternoon. Both these bodies proceed with the greatest unanimity, and their meetings are well attended. It will scarce be credited in Britain, that men can be as diligent with us from zeal for the publick good, as with you for thousands per annum. Such is the difference between uncorrupted new States, and corrupted old ones.

Great frugality and great industry are now become fashionable here; gentlemen, who used to entertain with two or three courses, pride themselves now in treating with simple beef and pudding. By these means, and the stoppage of our consumptive trade with Britain, we shall be better able to pay our voluntary taxes for the support of our Troops. Our savings in the article of trade amount to near five million sterling per annum.

I shall communicate your letter to Mr. Winthrop, but the camp is at Cambridge, and he has as little leisure for philosophy as myself. Believe me ever, with sincere esteem, my dear friend, yours most affectionately.

B. FRANKLIN.

JOHN DICKINSON TO ARTHUR LEE.

Fairhill, July 7, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Before this comes to hand, you will have received, I presume, the Petition to the King. You will perhaps at first be surprised that we make no claim, and mention no right. But I hope, on considering all circumstances, you will be of opinion that this humility, in an address to the Throne, is at present proper.

Our rights have been already stated, our claims made; war is actually begun, and we are carrying it on vigorously. This conduct, and our other publications, will show that our spirits are not lowered. If Administration be desirous of stopping the effusion of British blood, the opportunity is now offered to them by an unexceptionable Petition, praying for an accommodation. If they reject this application with contempt, the more humble it is the more such treatment will confirm the minds of our countrymen to endure all the misfortunes that may attend the contest.

I do not know what is thought in London of the several engagements near Boston; but this you may be assured of, that every one of them has been favourable to us, and particularly that of Bunker's Hill, on the 17th of last month, when a mere carnage was made of the Royalists, though they gained the intrenchments.

I am, dear Sir, your very affectionate humble servant,
JOHN DICKINSON.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Camp near New-York, July 7, 1775.

SIR: We have among the Connecticut Troops a number of apprentices, and indented servants who ran away from their masters in this City, and have enlisted themselves, and received their pay in Connecticut. Since our arrival in this place, many of them have been detained in town by their masters. As the Governour of Connecticut has subjected me and the Troops under my command to the direction of the Continental and this Provincial Congress, I desire you, Sir, to take the opinion of your Congress, and advise me what plan of conduct I shall pursue with regard to such persons, and you will oblige, Sir, your humble servant,
DAVID WOOSTER.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress.

WESTCHESTER COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

White Plains, July 7, 1775.

SIR: The Committee of Westchester County, sensible of the great consequence, in our present struggle for liberty, of having officers of the Militia, who are sincere friends of the Country; and also that many, if not a majority of the Militia officers in this County, upon account of their oath of allegiance, or from sinister motives, endeavour to counteract the present measures, as far as possible; do request the Provincial Congress to take the same into consideration, and do what they shall think proper in so important a matter. We are, Sir, your most humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

GILBERT DRAKE, Chairman.

To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress.

KINGSTON COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Kingston, July 7, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We received with great pleasure the resolves of your honourable Board respecting the Militia of this Colony, being well persuaded that the putting it under due regulations and discipline will afford the Colony the greatest security in this time of public calamity. We are sensible of the necessity, therefore, of complying with the measures recommended in your resolve, while we are extremely sorry that for want of being a little more particular and explicit, people differ in their sentiments about the mode they are to pursue, which has already occasioned much warmth, and we fear, unless prevented by an explanatory resolve by your honourable body, may create still greater confusion and trouble, to the injury of the common cause. In order that you may understand wherein we differ in the construction of your said resolve, we beg leave to propose the following queries, the solving of which we would fain hope will give general satisfaction, and restore us to our former harmony, to wit:

1. Is it intended by the advice to the inhabitants to form themselves into companies if necessary, that they should elect their officers, or continue to serve under the officers appointed by Government, if they are well affected to the common cause?

2. If the inhabitants are to elect their officers up to a Captain, how are the Field-Officers to be appointed—at the election of the companies at large, or by the subaltern officers?

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants.

By order of the Committee of the Town of Kingston:

JOHANNES SLEGHT, Chairman.

To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress.

ELISHA PHELPS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 7, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: Received your favour, dated June 29, 1775, on the 6th day of July instant. I also received the stores of provisions in place of Mr. Bleecker, who I was in hopes might have been ordered to purchase provisions, and deliver to me to forward. Sir, flour is very scarce in this City, or cannot be purchased without money. I have been through the City with the assistance of Esquire Palmer, and could not get but twenty barrels; also, have been to Schenectady, and could not get but ten barrels there. I am much afraid the Troops will suffer if they cannot be immediately supplied. I wrote by the post to one of the gentlemen Committee for two or three hundred barrels of flour. Should be glad your Honour would see and order as you think proper. Colonel Hinman has wrote orders to me for hospital stores, and they cannot all be got in this City. Captain Mott will inform you more particularly. Sir, should be glad to know who in particular to write to for provisions, &c., at New-York, that is and will be wanted.

I am, with esteem, Sir, your most humble servant at command,

ELISHA PHELPS.

To his Honour P. V. B. Livingston, President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

COLONEL HINMAN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Ticonderoga, July 7, 1775.

SIR: Yours of 29th June I have received, by which I have the pleasure of being informed of your appointment to the command of the troops in this quarter. Agreeable to your request, I have made as minute a return of the forces, guns, ammunition, and stores, as I am capable of under our present unsettled circumstances.

As to Governour Carleton's motions, I can say but little with regard to them. It is said that there are at St. John's about three hundred and fifty Regulars, a few Canadians, and a small number of Indians at the other posts. By what intelligence I can get, there are about two hundred and fifty of the King's Troops, or thereabout, at St. John's; they are fortifying and building some water craft, by what I can learn, but with what intent we cannot yet determine. You may be assured of my taking every opportunity of informing the Canadians of our friendly intentions towards them; but they are so very cautious, and the passes are so guarded, that it is almost impossible to get any information to them. I have lately sent a Committee to Skenesborough to inquire into the state of affairs there, and find they want to be put under some new regulations. The place at present is kept by some men who Mr. Arnold put there. But as I expected you would be up in a short time, I have not given any orders respecting the management of things there; but shall wait for your orders relative thereto.

I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

BENJAMIN HINMAN.

To Major-General Schuyler.

P. S. I wait, Sir, with impatience for your arrival, as I find myself very unable to steer in this stormy situation. Sometimes we have no flour, and a constant cry for rum, and want of molasses for beer, which was engaged to our people; the failure of those who provide give great uneasiness to the men; hope for better times on your arrival.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO JOHN HANCOCK, PRESIDENT.

[Read July 17, 1775.]

Hartford, July 7, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: I have the honour of your favour of the 27th of June, acquainting me with the requisition made by the Congress upon this Colony in favour of General Schuyler, which I immediately laid before the General Assembly, and am directed to acquaint you, that it would have given them great pleasure to have found themselves able to have complied fully with the demand; but such is the exhausted state of our Treasury, in consequence of the very vigorous efforts the Colony have made and are still making in the common cause, that we could only furnish fifteen thousand Pounds, which is preparing with all possible despatch, and will be forwarded in a few days to the General at Albany. With respect to the other most important article, it is with much concern that we acknowledge that we could do but little, having already much exhausted our stock by the supplies furnished to the camp at Cambridge. However, all that we could do we have done, and sent forward to the General forty half-barrels; which we hope he will receive in a few days. We doubt not proper care will be taken as speedily as possible to reimburse the Colony these expenses, that we may be enabled to continue our exertions in the common cause of American liberty. I am also to inform you, that the Assembly have come to a resolution, at the earnest request of the Provincial Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay, to augment our troops in the publick service with two Regiments of seven hundred men each, exclusive of commissioned officers. We should have been happy, if possible, to have received the directions of the honourable Congress before we adopted this measure; but such appeared to us to be the critical situation of our affairs, great part of our troops being employed in the Province of New-York under the orders of the Congress, that it would not be prudent to delay it so long a time as would be necessary to obtain their directions upon the subject. We hope, nevertheless, it will meet with their approbation, and that the Continental currency may be in such forwardness as to be applied to the equipping and furnishing of these regiments; which will be raised with all possible despatch, and the sooner we are supplied with the Continental bills the better.

With respect to Major Skene, we could have wished that he might still have been continued at Philadelphia; and if he is not actually set out for Hartford, we beg his destination may be changed; however, if he arrives here we shall do the best we can with him.

I am, with great truth and regard, in behalf of the Governour and Company, Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED LONDON, JULY 8, 1775.

I am happy that you are settled in Philadelphia, a city that is and shall be blest. The great founder, Penn, was inspired with true wisdom, and God gave him a heart to form a City and Colony for a refuge to the persecuted asserters of the rights of human nature at this day, when it is the determination of Administration, at least part of them, with the King, to destroy such Towns as lay on the sea. But don't be frightened or deceived; they cannot accomplish their horrid schemes. Your securing Ticonderoga and Crown Point has overthrown their designs, and now in revenge they say we will destroy their Towns. You see by this what you are to expect. The heart of Pharaoh is hardened, and the chariot will be driven so fast that the wheels will fly off in a sea of blood.

Our worthy Lord Mayor has exerted himself abundantly. He has called a Common-Hall of the Livery, and held a Common Council at three different times, and sent up a Petition and Remonstrance; and this day the proceedings of the City are in the press, to be published to all the Counties in England; and our patriots, with an American bravery, are determined to protest against the doings of the Parliament, and enter into an Association. They have drawn up very spirited resolves. But as yet you must have patience; great bodies move slow. The people of England have long been inured to oppression, and are not so quick in their feelings as the Americans. They are, indeed, more moderate, but have already discovered their abhorrence to the plans of the tyrants in such a manner as to make them repent they laid them; and in a few months, should there be no submission on your side, (which God grant there may not,) they will call home Gage, and let you alone awhile, as they cannot get men to go on so horrid an errand. The officers hear that the riflemen intend killing them only, which is most excellent news, as it not only discourages the officers, but makes the soldiers think well of the Americans, as they hate their officers, and will certainly desert, if they have opportunity. It is not England, but only eight Ministers of State, with the King and his tools in Parliament, that are fighting against you, and use every unfair means to deceive the people of England. I understand Fort Ticonderoga is to be retaken by Carleton, who has one thousand Scots Highlanders sent over to him, commanded by Col. Murray, with one thousand nine hundred more, who are now enlisting in Scotland; this you may depend on.

Our wise Ministry, in order to deceive the people, circulate false reports in the papers and otherwise every day, both for and against the Americans, that men's minds may be so confounded they will not know what to depend upon; but you may depend upon it, that should it cost all the blood and treasure of Old England, they would prosecute their efforts to subdue you. Even the officers who are to execute their plans are ignorant of their ultimate designs.

They now give out that Lord Chatham is to be called in to head a new Administration, and that a new system of politics is to take place; but nothing can be further from their intentions. Lord Chatham never can come into their views, and those views being the possession of place, power, and treasure, they will never give them up as long as they can possibly hold them. They have brought the King so far into their measures that he cannot recede; so that they are now together in the place where they will remain till your wisdom and bravery shew the people of England that tyrants are to be got at by very simple means.

No statute can be made to put arms into the hands of Roman Catholics, and in consequence, if you could procure proof that General Carleton has done this, and convey that evidence to this City, you would find the great cause brought to issue here in a few months, sat verbum! Your salvation depends on your firmness and assiduity. If you submit, sixty of you are to be hanged in Philadelphia, and the same number in New-York; five hundred Pounds is offered for Captain Sears's head in particular—a secret order.*

* Mr. Holt, the printer of the New-York Journal, has also had repeated notices from persons of eminence in England, that he is among the number of the proscribed who are ordered to be sent to England.

INDEPENDENT COMPANY OF ALEXANDRIA TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Alexandria, July 8, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Your favour of the 20th ultimo, notifying your intended departure for the camp, we received, and after transmitting copies to the different officers to whom it was directed, we laid it before a full meeting of your company this day. At the same time that they deplore the unfortunate occasion that calls you, their patron, friend, and worthy citizen, from them, and your more tender connexions, they beg your acceptance of their most hearty congratulations upon your appointment to the supreme military command of the American confederated forces.

Firmly convinced, Sir, of your zealous attachment to the rights of your Country and those of mankind, and of your earnest desire that harmony and good will should again take place between us and our Parent State, we well know that your every exertion will be invariably employed to preserve the one and effect the other.

Your kind recommendation, that a strict attention be had to disciplining the company, shall be complied with, and every possible method used for procuring arms and ammunition.

We are to inform you, Sir, by desire of the company, that if at any time you shall judge it expedient for them to join the troops at Cambridge, or to march elsewhere, they will cheerfully do it.

As the success of our arms, during the unhappy contest for our liberties, will ever afford us the highest satisfaction, and as reports heretofore have been various and unauthentic, we entreat your Excellency, should there be any future engagement, and your leisure permit, to favour us with an account. Let our concerns for the cause we are embarked in claim your excuse for this freedom.

We now recommend you to the favour of Him by whom Kings reign and Princes decree justice; and wishing all your counsels and operations to be directed by his gracious providence to a happy and lasting union between us and Great Britain, we are, with great regard, for selves and the company, your Excellency's most obedient and humble servants,

JAMES HENDRICKS,
GEORGE GILPIN,
ROB. H. HARRISON.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MESSRS. BRADFORDS, OF PHILADELPHIA, TO THE PRINTER OF A PUBLICK PAPER IN LONDON, DATED PHILADELPHIA, JULY 8, 1775.

By the papers you will find that we are forced into a war with our brethren of Great Britain; you will also find that an overruling Providence covered our heads at the Lexington, Noddle Island, and Bunker's Hill actions. Our people have not in those three battles lost more than one hundred killed, and about two hundred wounded; whereas, the Ministerial Troops have at least lost fifteen hundred killed, and one thousand wounded.

In the affair at Bunker's Hill, it is asserted by many respectable people, who have, since the action, got out of Boston, that the Welsh Fusileers have only one Captain and ninety men left out of the whole Regiment; and that Gage has lost four Colonels and three Majors, among whom are Colonel Nesbit, Majors Pitcairne and Sheriff. However the ministerial account may gloss over matters, their loss has been such that a few more such victories would leave Gage but a few men, and we should joyfully put up with the disgrace of a retreat every day for a month upon the same terms. Tell Lord Sandwich that Lord Howe says, the rebels fought more like devils than men, and that if our re-enforcement had come up in time he must have been totally defeated.

Our Congress are still sitting, and likely to sit for some time. Seeing they were involved, they have taken all the necessary steps; they have an army of eighteen thousand or twenty thousand, headed by General Washington, around Boston, who are well armed, and have magazines sufficient for two years, notwithstanding the steps taken to keep warlike stores from cowards and poltrons, who had only broomsticks and rusty guns.

You may likewise tell his Lordship, that our Army is able to cope with thirty thousand such troops as Gage now commands, and that we should be glad to see his Lordship at the head of them.

No power ever armed so many men in so short a time as has been done in this Country; it is computed that we have now above three hundred thousand men well armed, two-thirds of whom will fight from principle.

This Province has raised one thousand riflemen, the worst of whom will put a ball into a man's head at the distance of one hundred and fifty or two hundred yards; therefore, advise your officers who shall hereafter come out to America to settle their affairs in England before their departure.

We are well assured that the ministerial tools in this Country have been tempting the Indians to fall on our frontiers, and in one Province it has been proved that they have endeavoured to set the negroes on their masters. Such hellish designs are carrying on by those wretches as must make any thing but the Devil, or Lord North and his tools, hide their heads.

We are, Sir, yours, &c., W. & T. BRADFORD.

NORTH-CAROLINA DELEGATES TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 8, 1775.

SIR: The Committee of this City, a few days ago, transmitted to you an original letter from Governour Martin to Henry White, Esquire, from the contents of which it is very obvious that Governour Martin has formed designs very inimical to the friends of America. From authentick information we learn, that he is to receive a supply of gunpowder from General Gage via New-York, and that he has sent from North-Carolina a cutter armed to receive it. She is a small boat, rigged like a schooner, mounts a few swivels, and is commanded by a Mr. . . . , the Lieutenant of the Famous, man-of-war; the vessel was formerly purchased in New-York by Captain Collet. We in particular desire, in case she should arrive in your port, to know what steps you may think prudent to secure her and her cargo. She is probably to receive the gunpowder from the Asia, or the other men-of-war lying in your harbour. We are, Sir, with great respect, your most obedient servants,

WILLIAM HOOPER,
JOSEPH HEWES.

NEW-YORK CONGRESS TO CHARLES THOMSON.

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 8, 1775.

SIR: The Congress received yours of July 4, enclosing Governour Martin's letter to Mr. Henry White, dated June 13th, and immediately appointed a Committee to confer with him on the subject. From the answers he gave to the Committee, and a letter received from him, (a copy of which is enclosed,) the Congress are fully satisfied that Mr. White's conduct in this matter has been unexceptionable, and such as becomes the character of a good citizen. I am, Sir, &c.

By order: P. V. B. LIVINGSTON, President.
To Charles Thomson, Esquire.

Saturday, July 8, 1775.

SIR: Three gentlemen of the Provincial Congress called upon me with an intercepted letter from Governour Martin, of North-Carolina, dated the 13th June, to send him a royal standard from hence. They desired to know if I had complied with his request, and whether I could inform them respecting the measures he was now pursuing; in answer to which I have to observe, that he some time ago wrote to me to send him such a standard, which I declined to do, lest it might be disagreeable to the people of this place, and wrote him to that purpose; which letter I apprehend miscarried, or he must have received it before the thirteenth of last month. With regard to the steps he has now taken in his Government, I am utterly unacquainted with; he has not communicated to me any particulars. Governour Martin is a gentleman I am intimately acquainted with, and have transacted business for him ever since he has been at North-Carolina; which accounts for his applying to me for the above standard. I imagine it will be believed I did not solicit the commission.

I am, Sir, &c., HENRY WHITE.
To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire.

MENDHAM (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE.

July 8, 1775.

Whereas, the Committee of Observation for the Township of Mendham, in the County of Morris, having legally notified Ezekial Beach to appear before us, to answer sundry charges exhibited against him touching his unfriendly conversation and conduct towards the Continental Association: said Beach not appearing, we do agree for ourselves, and recommend it to all others, to break off all dealings or connection with him, agreeable to the Eleventh Article of the Continental Association. Signed by order of the Committee.

DAVID THOMPSON, Chairman.

GENERAL BURGOTNE TO GENERAL LEE.

Boston, July 8, 1775.

DEAR SIR: When we were last together in service I should not have thought it within the vicissitudes of human affairs that we should meet at any time, or in any sense, as foes. The letter you have honoured me with, and my own feelings, continue to prove we are still far from being personally such.

I claim no merit from the attentions you so kindly remember in the early periods of our acquaintance, but as they manifest how much it was my pride to be known to be your friend; nor have I departed from the duties of that character, when, I will not scruple to say, it has been almost general offence to maintain it: I mean since the violent part you have taken in the commotions of the Colonies.

It would exceed the limits and the propriety of our present correspondence to argue at full the great cause in which we are engaged. But anxious to preserve a consistent and ingenuous character, and jealous, I confess, of having the part I sustain imputed to such motives as you intimate, I will state to you, as concisely as I can, the principles upon which, not voluntarily, but most conscientiously, I undertook it.

I have, like you, entertained from infancy a veneration of public liberty. I have likewise regarded the British Constitution as the best safeguard of that blessing to be found in the history of mankind.

The vital principle of the Constitution, in which it moves and has its being, is the supremacy of the King and Parliament; a compound, indefinite, indefeasible power, co-evil with the origin of the Empire, and co-extensive over all its parts.

I am no stranger to the doctrines of Mr. Locke, and other of the best advocates for the rights of mankind, upon the compacts always implied between the governing and the governed, and the right of resistance in the latter, when the compact shall be so violated as to leave no other means of redress. I look with reverence, almost amounting to idolatry, upon those immortal Whigs who adopted and applied such doctrine during part of the reign of Charles the First, and in that of James the Second.

Should corruption pervade the three estates of the Realm, so as to pervert the great ends for which they were instituted, and make the power vested in them for the good of the whole people operate, like an abuse of the prerogative of the Crown, to general oppression, I am ready to acknowledge that the same doctrine of resistance applies as forcibly against the abuses of the collective body of power, as against those of the Crown, or either of the other component branches separately: still always understood that no other means of redress can be obtained; a case, I contend, much more difficult to suppose when it relates to the whole, than when it relates to parts.

But in all cases that have existed or can be conceived, I hold that resistance, to be justifiable, must be directed against the usurpation or undue exercise of power, and that it is most criminal when directed against any power itself inherent in the Constitution.

And here you will immediately discern why I drew a line in the allusion I made above to the reign of Charles the First. Towards the close of it the true principle of resistance was changed, and a new system of Government projected accordingly. The Patriots, previous to the long Parliament, and during great part of it, as well as the glorious Revolutionists of 1688, resisted to vindicate and restore the Constitution; the Republicans resisted to subvert it.

Now, Sir, lay your hand upon your heart, as you have enjoined me to do on mine, and tell me, to which of these purposes do the proceedings of America tend?

Is it the weight of taxes imposed, and the impossibility of relief after a due representation of her burden, that has induced her to take arms? or is it a denial of the rights of British legislation to impose them, and consequently a struggle for total independency? For the idea of power that can tax externally and not internally, and all the sophistry that attends it, though it may catch the weakness and the prejudice of the multitude in a speech or pamphlet, it is too preposterous to weigh seriously with a man of your understanding; and I am confident you will admit the case to be fairly put. Is it then from a relief of taxes, or from the control of Parliament, "in all cases whatsoever," we are in war? If for the former, the quarrel is at an end; there is not a man of sense and information in America, who does not know it is in the power of the Colonies to put an end to the exercise of taxation immediately and forever. I boldly assert it, because sense and information will also suggest to every man, that it can never be the interest of Britain, after her late experience, to make another trial.

But if the other ground is taken, and it is intended to wrest from Great Britain a link of that substantial, and, I hope, perpetual chain, by which the Empire holds, think it not a ministerial mandate; think it not a mere professional ardour; think it not a prejudice against a part of our fellow-subjects, that induces men of integrity, (and among such you have done me the honour to class me,) to act with vigour; but be assured it is a conviction that the whole of our political system depends upon the preservation of its great and essential parts distinctly, and no part is so great and essential as supremacy of legislation. It is a conviction, that as a King of England never appears in so glorious a light as when he employs the executive powers of the state to maintain the laws, so, in the present exertions of that power, His Majesty is particularly entitled to our zeal and grateful obedience, not only as soldiers but as citizens.

These principles, depend upon it, actuate the Army and Fleet throughout. And let me at the same time add, there are few, if any, gentlemen among us who would have drawn his sword in the cause of slavery.

But why do I bind myself to the Navy and Army? The sentiments I have touched are those of the great bulk of the Nation. I appeal to the landed men who have so long borne burdens for America; I appeal to those trading Towns who are sufferers by the dispute, and the City of London at the head of them, notwithstanding the petitions and remonstrances which the arts of party and faction have extorted from some individuals; and last, because least in your favour, I appeal to the majorities in the Houses of Parliament upon American questions this session. The most licentious news-writers want assurance to call these majorities Ministerial, much less will you give them that name when you impartially examine the characters that compose them; men of the most independent principles and fortunes, and many of them professedly in opposition to the Court in the general line of their conduct.

Among other supporters of British rights against American claims, I will not speak positively, but I firmly believe I may name the man of whose integrity you have the highest opinion, and whose friendship is nearest your heart—I mean Lord Thames, from whom my Aid-de-Camp has a letter for you, and also one from Sir Charles Davers. I do not enclose them, because the writers, little imagining how difficult your conduct would render our intercourse, desired they might be delivered to your own hands.

For this purpose, as well as to renew "the rights of fellowship," I wish to see you; and, above all, I should find an interview happy if it should induce such explanation as might tend in their consequences to peace. I feel, in common with all around me, for the unhappy bulk of this Country; they foresee not the distress that is impending over them. I know Great Britain is ready to open her arms upon the first overture of accommodation; I know she is equally resolute to maintain her original rights; and if the war proceeds, your one hundred and fifty thousand men will not be a match for her power.

The place I would propose for our meeting is the house upon Boston Neck, just within our advanced sentries, called Brown's house. I will obtain authority to give my parole of honour for your safe return. I shall expect the same on your part, that no insult be offered to me. If this plan is agreeable to you, name your day and hour. At all events, accept a sincere return of the assurances with which you honour me, and believe me, in all personal considerations, affectionately yours.

P. S. I obeyed your commands to General Howe and Clinton. I also communicated your letter and my answer to Lord Percy. They all join me in compliments, and authorize me to assure you they do the same in principle.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, convened at WATERTOWN, JULY 8, 1775.

The Petition of the Selectmen and Committee of Safety, at the desire and in behalf of the Inhabitants of the District of HARPSWELL, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners have at all times exerted themselves in prosecuting those measures recommended by the Continental and Provincial Congresses; that it is their fixed determination to continue thus to do; that some of said inhabitants cheerfully enlisted for the publick safety, and so ward off that despotick and arbitrary power with which Administration is aiming to govern the Colonies.

That said District, on the account of the situation, being an isthmus, or neck of land, about ten miles in length, (with many adjacent islands,) navigable on each side upwards of seven miles, for ships of the Navy, and abounding with cattle, sheep, &c., is peculiarly exposed to the ravages of the British Troops. That the inhabitants of said District did, at their own cost, station guards every night at sundry places most exposed, lest the Troops should not be benefited by their provisions. That the enlisted men were, upon the twentieth of June last, put upon duty by order of their superiour officers, to guard said District from the plundering of Troops which were daily expected with cutters, &c. That the inhabitants of said District are in low circumstances, and are unable to enlist any more men unless their husbandry employment greatly suffers, which must be an additional distress to that which they already feel. That should the men already enlisted be called away to join the Army, said District is liable to fall an easy prey to the ravages of Troops which may attack it for fresh provisions. Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that this honourable Congress, in their great wisdom, would allow said District the number of men already enlisted, with such an additional number as the Congress may judge proper; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JOHN RODICK,
WM. SYLVESTER,
Selectmen of said District.
PAUL RANDALL,
WM. SYLVESTER,

Committee of Safety for said District.

Harpswell, July 8, 1775.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO DR. LANGDON.

In Committee of Safety, Exeter, July 8, 1775.

REVEREND SIR: We have sent several letters to the Committee to be forwarded to the Continental Congress; but as we have had no account from the Congress nor our Delegates of their being received, we fear, by some means or other, they have been neglected. The enclosed letter is of great consequence to us; we therefore beg the favour of you to forward it by the first safe conveyance. By your connection with the General, it is probable you will know of every opportunity, which we hope will be a sufficient apology for troubling you.

I am, in behalf of said Committee,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

Reverend Doctor Langdon.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THEIR DELEGATES AT THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress of this Colony adjourned yesterday to the twenty-second of next month, having delegated their power to this Committee during their recess, to provide for the publick safety.

In a former letter the Congress informed you that this Colony chose Deputies, who met the seventeenth of May last in Convention Congress at Exeter, and voted to raise two thousand men for the common defence of the Colonies, which men are now, and have been some time raised and put under the care of Nathaniel Folsom, Esq., who was appointed a Major-General under the Commander-in-Chief of the American Forces, and have joined the Army before Boston, except two companies for the guard of our sea-coast. At present the news from Canada, of their hostile preparations, (an account of which from Connecticut, and by Mr. Deane, Missionary from Canada, we expect will reach you before this,) have so alarmed the inland frontiers, that the Congress have ordered three companies, of sixty-six men each, to be raised and posted for their defence. The cost of raising so many men you will readily see to be a difficult task for so small a Colony, without any money to begin with. We have wrote to you and to the Congress on the situation of our affairs several times, but not receiving any directions, we have emitted ten thousand Pounds in notes of hand, on the credit of this Colony, payable with six per cent. interest, and have ordered ten thousand Pounds more to be forthwith emitted, for supplying the present exigencies of the Colony. Some conceive some resolves of the American Congress, giving such notes a currency, would be of great service. We are greatly concerned for gunpowder, as we have scarce any except what was taken out of the fort last winter, a considerable part of which we have sent to the Army before Boston, and some to our western frontiers. We hope some plan is laid for bringing it into the Southern Colonies, as New-England is so watched and guarded that there is but a little hope of getting in here. The ships-of-war and cutters, previous to the first of this month, seized all vessels laden with provisions, salt, or molasses, which have much distressed the eastern parts, but not discouraged them. They have destroyed Fort William and Mary, and carried off the cannon to Boston, except eight large pieces taken from Jersey's Point some time ago secured, and some of them are now pointed against Boston. We are anxious to know the result of your determinations, in order to conduct the affairs of this Colony, which at this time is in some confusion, the people not suffering things to proceed in their former manner. The General Court has twice met, but has not, and, we believe, will not proceed to the publick business.

We desire you, as often as opportunity will permit, to write to this Congress, or the Committee of Safety at Exeter, and to inform us, from time to time, as much of the affairs of the publick as is permitted; in particular, the directions of the Congress concerning providing for and paying the Army raised for the common defence. On the twelfth of June last, Colonel John Fenton, who was chosen a member of the General Court by virtue of the King's, or rather the Governour's writ, without the consent of the Assembly, made his appearance in the House, though he had for some time before kept on board the man-of-war in the harbour. The House took into consideration his election, and vacated his seat. Soon after, the people of the Town, greatly exasperated at his conduct, obliged him to surrender, though he had taken shelter in the Governour's house; and our Congress have since confined him. The Governour and his family went off that evening to Captain Cochran's, under the protection of the man-of-war, where they still remain. The publick records being thought unsafe in the Town of Portsmouth, have all, by order of Congress, been removed to Exeter, except the books of charters, which the Secretary says the Governour has at present in his possession. A Committee from this body has demanded and received from George Jaffrey, Esq., fifteen hundred Pounds, part of the publick money in his hands.

CONGRESS OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Exeter, July 8, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: As the state of American affairs daily appears more critical, and we are exerting ourselves in every way we conceive expedient to aid the common cause, we think it our duty to give you the earliest account of our transactions, that thereby you may be enabled to direct our future conduct.

We wrote you some time since an account of our being formed into a Congress on the seventeenth May last, and resolved to raise two thousand men, &c., which we hope you have received.

Twenty-eight of our companies, of sixty-six men each, including officers, are posted in the vicinity of Boston. We have appointed Nathaniel Folsom, Esq., a Major-General, to take the charge of them, under the command of the General of the united American Forces, and two companies of the like number each are posted as a guard on our sea-coasts; since which we have raised three companies, of the same number each, for a guard against the incursions of the Canadians into the frontiers of this and the adjoining Colonies, (who are greatly alarmed at the repeated accounts of preparations making against them in Canada,) many of the inhabitants whereof are within two days march of the French and Indian settlements.

We have but very little gunpowder in the Colony, nor have any prospect of a supply at present, as our sea-coast is strictly watched by men-of-war and cutters, but hope soon to have a sufficient number of fire-arms, of our own manufacturing, to make up our present deficiency, though we find great difficulty in procuring steel for that purpose.

The Colony is at present wholly governed by this Congress and the Committees of the respective Towns. But we greatly desire some other regulations, as our present situation is attended with many difficulties; but we shall not attempt any thing of that kind without your direction. There is great unanimity among us in what concerns the common cause; those who do not join with us are silent, and dare not openly attempt to obstruct our measures.

The Restraining Bill is strictly enforced on our sea-coast by armed vessels, and some seizures have been made by virtue thereof.

We understand Mr. Deane, a Missionary among the Canada Indians, lately from thence, is now on his journey to Philadelphia, and will give you an account of the state of affairs there; from which you will, we hope, be able to concert some plan to frustrate the designs forming against us in that quarter, in which, if required, we shall be ready to assist to the utmost of our ability.

We are, gentlemen, with the utmost respect, your most obedient humble servants. By order of the Congress of the Colony of New-Hampshire.

MESHECH WEARE, President pro tempore.

Honourable Members of the Continental Congress, Philadelphia.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LONDON, JULY 9, 1775.

Our dependance on New-York, and (under God) the preservation of that City and Colony from a very shameful defection, which has been fatal to the cause of freedom, has been greatly owing to the abilities, zeal, and assiduity of the worthy Mr. Holt. What pleasure is it for those whose chief enjoyment consists in the happiness and security of their fellow-creatures, to witness such exertions to save our Country, to annoy its insidious enemies, and carry into every corner of it the discoveries and advice of its friends.

The business is now to develop the schemes laying to deceive and divide the New-Yorkers, finding mere force like to answer no valuable end. They now talk of blocking up the ports, and thus distressing the trade, to make people quarrel with each other, which quarrels some are employed to foment. They have given out word that they will call Lord Chatham into office, but it is false; Chatham is old and very feeble, not able to bear the fatigues of business. Besides, he will not accept it without a total change of the Ministry, a dissolution of the present Parliament, and the calling of a new one by the free choice of the people.

The true state of the matter is, that the Ministry still intend to drive on, in hopes that you will in time submit, and all will be theirs. They use every means in their power to deceive the people, both here and in America, that they may get their plan established of keeping up a Standing Army in the Colonies, increased by degrees till they become masters of the Colonists and all their property, as they have done here.

The Lord Mayor is assiduous to the last. The Livery of London are now all alarmed, and have sent petitions and remonstrances one after another. They have taken up the affair in such good earnest as will very probably excite a civil war in England. The ferment in the City is certainly prodigious. The land-holders also begin to be moved and aid the merchants, and the common people are all entering into associations, and consulting what is best to be done.

RECEPTION OF GENERAL SCHUYLER AT ALBANY.

Albany, Sunday, July 9, 1775.

About one o'clock, P. M., Major-General Schuyler arrived here from New-York. He was received, upon his landing, by the members of the General Committee for the City and County, and by the City Troops of Horse, under the command of Captain Ten Broeck, and the Association Company, commanded by Captain Bleecker, and by the principal inhabitants of the City. After paying the General the honours due to his rank, they escorted him and the gentlemen of the Committee to the City-Hall, where the Committee presented an Address, and received a polite answer from the General. They afterwards proceeded to the King's-Arms Tavern, where an elegant entertainment was provided.

"The Address of the Committee of Safety, Correspondence, and Protection, of the City and County of ALBANY, to PHILIP SCHUYLER, Esq., Major-General and Commander of the Forces in the Colony of NEW-YORK:

"Permit us, Sir, to express our fullest approbation upon the appointment by which your Country has raised you to the chief military command in this Colony. While we deplore, as the greatest misfortune, the necessity of such an appointment, we have the utmost confidence that you have accepted of power for the glorious purpose of exercising it for the re-establishment of the liberties of America, at present unnaturally invaded by a deluded and despotick Ministry.

"Born and educated amongst us, in a Country which freedom has raised to a state of opulence and envy, you, whose principles are known, whose sentiments have been invariably opposed to power, afford us the pleasing prospect of the unremitted exertion of your knowledge, prudence, and experience, for the restoration of harmony and peace upon constitutional principles. When the sword shall be rendered useless, except against our natural enemies; when we shall see you restored to the peaceful state of a private citizen; when this happy period shall arrive, then, and not till then, will Americans enjoy the glorious blessings of freedom.

"By order of the Committee.

"SAMUEL STRINGER, Chairman pro tempore."

The General's Answer.

"GENTLEMEN: I feel myself so sensibly affected by this publick and friendly address, that whilst my heart overflows with sentiments of gratitude, I want words properly to convey my thanks.

"The honour you do me in the approbation which you are pleased to express of my appointment to a military command, confirms me in the pleasing reflection, that I shall experience your assistance in a continuance of those generous exertions, by which you have already so conspicuously manifested your love for your Country, and your zeal for its cause.

"I most sincerely and unfeignedly deplore with you the unhappy occasion which has forced America to have recourse to arms for her safety and defence. Ambitious only to aid in restoring her violated rights, I shall most cheerfully return my sword to the scabbard, and, with alacrity, resume the employment of civil life, whenever my constituents shall direct, or whenever a happy reconciliation with the Parent State shall take place.

"That indulgent Heaven may guide us through this tempestuous scene, and speedily restore peace, harmony, and mutual confidence to every part of the British Empire, is the warmest wish of my heart.

"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"Albany, July 9, 1775."

CONGRESS OF MASSACHUSETTS TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 20, 1775]

In Provincial Congress, Watertown, July 9, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: With hearts deeply affected by the sufferings of our friends in the Town and harbour of Boston under the cruel hand of tyrannick power, we think it incumbent on us to take every measure which may tend to their release. To that end we now beg leave humbly to suggest to your Honours, whether it would not be expedient immediately to seize every Crown Officer within the united Colonies, and them in safe custody retain, until this purpose be effected, and full compensation made them for the insult and perfidious treatment they have received from General Gage.

We have only once more to express our wishes, that if the general service will permit, you might adjourn to some convenient place nearer the seat of action, that we might more speedily obtain the aid and advice of the Grand Council of the Continent in those important matters which, though of general concern, do more immediately affect us.

We are, with great respect, your Honours' most obedient humble servant. In behalf and by order of Congress.

JAMES WARREN, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esquire.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, FROM THE CAMP AT CAMBRIDGE, DATED JULY 9, 1775.

Yesterday morning, at half past two o'clock, we were called up, and were informed the enemy had attacked our lines at Roxbury Neck, and soon discovered a great fire in that quarter; but two hours elapsed before we knew the cause, which was as follows:

Two hundred volunteers, from the Rhode-Island and Massachusetts forces, undertook to burn a guard-house of the Regulars, on the neck, within three hundred yards of the enemy's principal works. They detached six men, about ten o'clock in the evening, with orders to cross on a marsh up to the rear of the guard-house, and there to watch an opportunity to fire it. The remainder of the volunteers secreted themselves in the marsh, on each side of the neck, about two hundred yards from the house. Two pieces of brass artillery were drawn softly on the marsh, within three hundred yards, and, upon a signal from the advanced party of six men, two rounds of cannon shot were fired through the guard-house; immediately the Regulars, who formed a guard of forty-five or fifty men, quitted the house, and were then fired upon by the musketry, who drove them with precipitation into their lines; the six men posted near the house set fire to it, and burnt it to the ground; after this they burnt another house nearer the enemy, without losing a man. They took two muskets and accoutrements, a halbert, &c., all of which were bloody, and shewed evident marks of loss on the part of the Regulars as an advanced post, and gave them an opportunity of discovering our operations at Roxbury.

Yesterday afternoon some barges were sounding the river of Cambridge, near its mouth, but were soon obliged to row off by our Indians, (fifty in number,) who are encamped near that place.

The enemy lost a great number of officers and soldiers in the affair of the 19th of June. From several persons who are to be credited, it exceeds nine hundred killed and mortally wounded, besides a great number disabled from future service. It is said almost all the officers of the Army, as well as sergeants and corporals, were in the engagement, leading and forcing the soldiers to mount the hill. This may account for so many officers being killed as ninety-two. Some accounts mention a general destruction of sergeants and corporals. We have frequent interviews with the regular officers in a valley between the two fortified hills.

Our sentries are not more than one hundred yards off each other. Both sides are still busy in securing themselves. There is scarcely a house in the lower part of Roxbury that is not much injured by shot and bombs; our people have lost only one man by them, which is very remarkable, as one hundred at least were fired into Roxbury last week.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON TO HIS FRIEND IN NEW-YORK, DATED JULY 10, 1775.

The present struggle between this Country and North America, I have heard old people, fifty years ago, predict. It is in the nature of things that the greater will not longer obey the lesser than when an opportunity presents to exert itself, which period seems now to be come. I have always been of opinion, that the measures pursued here since 1763, were mistaken and unjust. This Country should have been content to take the wealth of America by trade, and not by revenue acts imposed on a people unrepresented. The Assemblies of the Colonies only have a right to give and grant when they think proper to the Crown, and not an assembly of people here. This reasoning, I think, is in the law of nature and this Constitution; and so says Mr. Locke.

But the last reasoning of Kings has now taken place, and the Americans have appealed to Heaven, that is, their sword. I hope you will do your duty to your Country, and always remember your allegiance and constitutional duty to your King; no other can or ought to be required.

The men that I think are the evil counsellors in the present mistaken measures are, Lords Bute, Mansfield, Rochford, Sandwich, North, and many of inferior rank. The greatest part of the Nation wish well to America, and detest the present politicks; so that it is a war of Administration only. As to Parliament, that House is very civil and polite to the Minister; a very few members there sometimes oppose him, only because they are out of place, or have no pension; but when a question is put, he carries it as he pleases, and often ten or twenty to one. However, the Ministry, I think, are sick of the war in America; yet I see not the least trace of their relaxing, except that I hear of no preparation to send more Troops, but probably they will cover the coast with ships-of-war, and suffer no trade; and truly I think that would be a blessing to America instead of a curse.

The eyes of Government are fixed on the Congress and their resolutions, and perhaps on their proposals; for it is said that Administration cannot yield, as being contrary to the dignity of the Crown. I answer, then change the Ministers; another set could with a good grace withdraw the present measures. But, in short, I think the rupture will be much greater before the wound is healed. Some more blood must be drawn, and then they, when cooled, will hear, and perhaps agree for some time; but whenever settled, I imagine America will carry some points towards the establishment of their liberties.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LONDON TO A GENTLEMAN
IN MARYLAND, DATED JULY 10, 1775.

I need not tell you that the account of the Lexington skirmish alarmed the people on this side the water extremely. They did not imagine the Provincials would fight, and they had certainly entertained a notion, that a handful of Regulars might overcome the whole Country, and frighten the Americans into compliance. They have been most miserably mistaken; and the authors of this mischief are now execrated by every friend to his Country. On the other hand, the bravery, moderation, as well as determined firmness of the Americans, have gained them many friends here, even among those who were originally their enemies. I believe the Ministry wish they were well rid of this business; however, it is not certainly known what they intend to do.

SOUTH-CAROLINA ASSEMBLY.

The Speech of his Excellency the Right Honourable Lord WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Captain-General, Governour-in-Chief, &c., &c., in and over his Majesty's Province of SOUTH-CAROLINA, to the General Assembly of the said Province, at CHARLESTOWN, on MONDAY, JULY 10, 1775.

*Honourable Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council,
Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Assembly:*

His Majesty's instructions, my own inclination, and the very alarming and critical situation of the Province, have induced me to meet you in General Assembly, as soon as was consistent with that attention necessary to be paid to your own private affairs at this season.

My appointment to the Government of this Province, entitled, on every account, to my warmest wishes and endeavours for its welfare and happiness, was to me a most pleasing mark of his Majesty's favour, as I flattered myself that, with your assistance and advice, I should have been able to prosecute such schemes, and concur in such measures, as would have contributed to increase that prosperity to which I saw it so rapidly advancing when I was last in the Province.

Filled with these sentiments, and elated by these hopes, it is not easy to conceive my grief and disappointment at finding the Province in the distracted state it is now in: the legal administration of justice obstructed; Government in a manner annihilated; the most dangerous measures adopted; and acts of the most outrageous and illegal nature committed publicly with impunity.

It is by no means either my duty or inclination to enter into a discussion of the disputes that at present unhappily subsist between Great Britain and her Colonies in America; but I think myself indispensably bound to warn you of the danger you are in, and inform you that if there are any grievances that you apprehend the people of this Province now labour under, the measures at present adopted are by no means calculated to remove them; but, on the contrary, cannot fail of drawing down inevitable ruin on this flourishing Colony. Let me, therefore, gentlemen, most earnestly entreat you, as the only legal representatives of the people in this Province, the only constitutional guardians of its welfare, and who are so deeply interested in the event of the measures now carrying on, to deliberate and resolve with that coolness, temper, and moderation, the important instant demands; and to reflect that the happiness or misery of generations yet unborn, will depend on your determinations.

These sentiments flow from a heart filled with a fervent zeal for the real interest and happiness of this Province. You may be assured, if ever it is in my power to be in any degree instrumental to restoring that harmony, cordiality, confidence, and affection, which ought to subsist between Great Britain and her Colonies, I shall esteem those moments the happiest and most fortunate of my life.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL.

Council Chamber, July 10, 1775.

Address of the Upper House of Assembly to his Excellency the Right Honourable Lord WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Captain-General, Governour and Commander-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's Province of SOUTH-CAROLINA:

*The humble Address of the Upper House of Assembly:
May it please your Excellency:*

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Council of this Province, met in general Assembly, beg leave humbly to address your Excellency, and most cordially to congratulate you on your safe arrival in this Colony.

Satisfied that this Province is entitled to your Excellency's warmest wishes and endeavours for its welfare and happiness, we felt the sincerest pleasure on your appointment to the government of it.

Strongly attached to the interests of this Country, and filled with the warmest wishes for its prosperity and happiness, we most heartily join with your Excellency in lamenting the distracted and unhappy state in which you now find it.

Your Excellency having, as we conceive, with great propriety declined entering into a discussion of the disputes that at present unhappily subsist between Great Britain and her Colonies, it would be highly unbecoming us to take up a subject of so delicate a nature; but we entirely coincide with your Excellency in opinion, that the violent measures at present adopted do not seem well calculated to remove any real grievances, but may, we fear, produce contrary effects.

We, however, have the happiness to reflect, that this House had no share in the measures your Excellency so pathetically describes: and we beg leave to assure your Excellency, that with hearts overflowing with loyalty and duty to the King, and perfectly devoted to the interests of this Province, we will deliberate and resolve upon every measure that may come before us, with that temper, coolness, and moderation, which the important instant demands.

With pleasure we acknowledge our gratitude to your Excellency for the generous sentiments you express for the peace and prosperity of this Colony; and your Excellency may rest assured, that the utmost efforts of this House shall upon every occasion be exerted to second your Excellency's humane endeavours to restore that harmony, cordiality, confidence, and affection, which ought to subsist between Great Britain and her Colonies.

By order of the House:

THOMAS KNOX GORDON.

In the Upper House of Assembly, July 11, 1775.

His Excellency's Answer.

GENTLEMEN: I thank you most sincerely for this very kind and affectionate address. Your warm declarations of loyalty and duty to His Majesty on the present trying occasion, cannot fail of being particularly agreeable to me, as it is a convincing proof of your regard for the real interests of this Province.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL.

July 12, 1775.

To his Excellency the Right Honourable Lord WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Captain-General, Governour, and Commander-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's Colony of SOUTH-CAROLINA:

The humble Address of the Commons House of Assembly of the said Colony:

May it please your Excellency:

We, His Majesty's loyal subjects, the Representatives of the inhabitants of this Colony, met in General Assembly at this very alarming and critical period, beg leave to assure your Excellency that we are willing to postpone the consideration of our private affairs whenever the publick exigences demand our attention; fully convinced that the safety of private property entirely depends upon the security of publick rights.

We most sincerely lament that His Majesty's Councils, and the conduct of his Ministers, have incapacitated us from meeting your Excellency, whose zealous endeavours in Great Britain for the welfare of this Colony claim our grateful acknowledgements, with those effects of joyful congratulation, the effects of real sentiments upon your arrival and assumption of the reins of Government, with which, in happier times, we have ever been accustomed to meet His Majesty's Representatives; but the calamities of America, our present dangerous and dreadful situation, occupy all our thoughts, and banish from us every idea of joy and pleasure.

Although we will not doubt the fervent zeal of your Excellency's heart for the real interest and happiness of this Colony, nor the sincerity of your Excellency's professions to be instrumental in restoring that harmony, cordiality, confidence, and affection, which ought to subsist between Great Britain and her Colonies; yet we cannot but express our surprise at the severe censures which your Excellency has thought proper to pass on "measures" which have been "adopted" by the good people of this Colony, in confederacy with all the Colonies on this Continent, from Nova-Scotia to Georgia, for their own safety, and for the preservation of their liberties, and the liberties of generations yet unborn.

In times when the spirit of the Constitution has full operation, and, animating all the members of the State, gives security to civil liberty, then we claim to be "the only legal Representatives of the People in this Province, the only constitutional guardians of its welfare;" but in the present unhappy situation of affairs, though our constituents might have thought us competent, yet as our meeting depended upon the pleasure of the Crown, they would not trust to so precarious a contingency, but wisely appointed another representative body, for necessary, for special, and important purposes.

We want words to give an idea of our feelings at your Excellency's expression, "If there are any grievances that we apprehend the people of this Province labour under," as if you doubted their existence. The world resounds with a catalogue of them. Your Excellency surely cannot be unacquainted with them. We should have esteemed it a high obligation, if your Excellency had pointed out to us what effectual mode for the redress of those grievances could have been pursued, or what steps we have omitted which we ought to have taken, in order to avert the inevitable ruin of this once flourishing Colony. Every pacifick measure which human wisdom could devise has been used; the most humble and dutiful Petitions to the Throne, Petitions to the House of Lords and House of Commons of Great Britain, have been repeatedly presented, and as often treated, not only with slight, but with rigour and resentment: we, therefore, with all due deference to your Excellency's judgment, beg leave to observe, that the present are the only measures which seem best calculated for our preservation, and the removal of our intolerable grievances. However, not confiding in them alone, we wait the event, and leave the justice of our cause to the great Sovereign of the Universe, upon whom the fate of Kingdoms and Empires depends.

By order of the House:

RAWLINS LOWNDES, Speaker.

In the Commons House of Assembly, July 12, 1775.

His Excellency's Answer.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen:

Immediately after my arrival in this Province, it was intimated to me by your Speaker, and some others of your Members, that it would be convenient for your private affairs, if I delayed meeting the General Assembly for about three weeks; on that account alone I consented to it, and therefore little expected the tacit reflection contained in the beginning of your Address.

As I have already declined entering into any discussion of the present unhappy disputes, I shall not undertake the disagreeable task of replying particularly to your Address. It was my duty to lay before you the fatal consequences that I apprehended must ensue from the measures lately adopted, and I have faithfully and conscientiously discharged it; but as they appear to you in so very different a point of view, as even to meet with your disapprobation, I most sincerely lament that I cannot prevent the ruin I foresee, and shall only add my fervent wishes, that the great Sovereign of the Universe, to whom you appeal, will in his goodness avert those evils with which this Country is so imminently threatened.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL.

July 12, 1775.

A Message from the Commons House to his Excellency the Governour.

May it please your Excellency:

We beg leave to assure your Excellency that this House, in their Address, was far from intending any, the least, reflection on your Excellency's conduct, in not meeting us sooner in General Assembly, and are sorry your Excellency should view it in that light. All we meant was, to assure you how ready we shall ever be to sacrifice our private interest to the publick service; at the same acknowledging your Excellency's goodness in so readily consenting, on the application of our Speaker, to postpone the calling of the General Assembly to the time you fixed for their meeting, of which this House had been duly informed by their Speaker.

By order of the House:

RAWLINS LOWNDES, Speaker.

In the Commons House of Assembly, July 12, 1775.

FINCASTLE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Fincastle County, July 10, 1775.

WILLIAM CHRISTIAN, Esq., Chairman.

The Committee, taking into their consideration the clandestine removal of the Gunpowder from the Magazine of this Colony by order of our Governour, are clearly and unanimously of opinion, that his Lordship's conduct reflects much dishonour on himself, and that he very justly deserves the censure so universally bestowed on him.

Resolved, That the spirited and meritorious conduct of Patrick Henry, Esquire, and the rest of the gentlemen volunteers attending him on the occasion of the removal of the Powder out of the Magazine in Williamsburgh, very justly merits the hearty approbation of this Committee; for which we return them our thanks, with an assurance, that we will, at the risk of our lives and fortunes, support and justify them with regard to the reprisal they made.

Resolved, That the Council of this Colony, in advising and co-operating with Lord Dunmore in issuing a Proclamation of the 3d of May last, charging the people of this Colony with an ungovernable spirit, and licentious practices, is contrary to many known matters of fact, and but too justly intimates to us that those who ought to be mediators and guardians of our liberties, are become the abject tools of a detested Administration.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the late sanguinary attempt and preparations of the King's Troops in the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay is truly alarming and irritating, and loudly calls upon all, even the most distant and interior parts of the Colonies, to prepare and be ready for the extreme event, by a fixed resolution, and a firm and manly opposition, to avert Ministerial cruelty, in defence of our just and reasonable rights and liberties.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM PHILADELPHIA TO A GENTLEMAN IN ENGLAND, DATED JULY 10, 1775.

Travel through whatever part of this Country you will, you see the inhabitants training, making firelocks, casting mortars, shells and shot, and making saltpetre, in order to keep the gunpowder mills at work during the next autumn and winter. Nothing, indeed, is attended to but preparing to make a defence that will astonish the whole world, and hurl destruction on those who, to preserve themselves in office, have advised measures so fatal both to Britain and America. At least two hundred thousand men are now in arms, and well trained, ready to march whenever wanted for the support of American freedom and property. In short, a spirit of enthusiasm for war is gone forth, that has driven away the fear of death; and magazines of provisions and ammunition, by order of the States General of America, (or the twelve United Colonies,) are directed to be made in all proper places, against the next campaign.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the Province of NEW-YORK:

The humble Petition of SAMUEL FALKENHAN and DAVID WOLHAUPTER, Instrument Makers, of the City of NEW-YORK, humbly sheweth:

That whereas the honourable Congress in their wisdom have thought it expedient to raise a number of Troops, in the just defence of the rights and liberties of the American subjects; and as those Troops may want a number of drums and fifes, your petitioners most humbly offer their best services in furnishing said Troops with said drums and fifes, on the most reasonable terms; of which they now have fifty of the best sort already by them made in this City. Your petitioners humbly pray that they may have the honour of supplying said Troops with said drums and fifes, or such part as to the honourable Congress shall seem meet. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

SAMUEL FALKENHAN,
DAVID WOLHAUPTER.

New-York, July 10, 1775.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, July 10, 1775.

SIR: I do myself the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 6th instant, with the paper enclosed. I am happy to learn I shall soon be furnished with that necessary article, without which every kind of business goes on not only tardily, but disadvantageously.

I lament it was not in your power to afford me a larger supply of the still more necessary article in military operations. I am confident the Colony of Connecticut, which has so conspicuously exerted itself in this unhappy contest, has sent all it can spare.

I shall do myself the honour to write you from Ticonde- roga relative to Colonel Mott's request. Mr. Deane may be sure that his will be complied with.

I am, with much respect, your Honour's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, &c., &c.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MONTREAL TO A GENTLEMAN
IN ENGLAND, DATED JULY 10, 1775.

The martial law is now in force; the Canadians are enrolled as militia, and officers appointed them by the Governour. The merchants here have formed themselves into a company, commanded by Major Roberston, Captain Porteus Gray, and Lieutenant Todd. The Canadians are in general averse to be commanded by their nobles; but say, give them British officers, and they will go any where. This Town has been full of Indians for some time past, who are come to offer service to the Governour.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS,

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 10, 1775.

SIR: After much difficulty and delay, I have procured such returns of the state of the Army as will enable us to form a judgment of its strength. It is with great concern I find it far inadequate to our general expectations, and the duties which may be required of it. The number of men fit for duty in the forces raised in this Province, including all the outposts and artillery, does not amount to nine thousand. The Troops raised in the other Colonies are more complete, but yet fall short of their establishment; so that, upon the whole, I cannot estimate the present Army at more than fourteen thousand five hundred men capable of duty.

I have the satisfaction to find the Troops, both in camp and in quarters, very healthy; so that the deficiency must arise from the Regiments never having been filled up to the establishment, and the number of men on furlough. But the former is much the most considerable. Under all these circumstances, I yesterday called a council of war, and enclosed I send you an extract of our determinations, so far as they respect the Province of Massachusetts-Bay. Your own prudence will suggest the necessity of secrecy on this subject, as we have the utmost reason to believe the enemy suppose our numbers much greater than they are; an error which it is not our interest to remove.

The great extent of our lines, and the uncertainty which may be the point of attack, added to the necessity of immediate support, have induced me to order that horses, ready saddled, should be kept at several posts, in order to bring the most speedy intelligence of any movement of the enemy. For this purpose I should be glad that ten horses might be provided as soon as possible.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable James Warren, President of the Provincial Congress.

P. S. I am informed the Congress proposes to rise immediately. I should be glad to know what Committees are left, or upon whom the executive business devolves.

G. W.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, July 10, 1775.

SIR: I received your favour of the 1st instant, by express, from New-York; but as I am exceedingly hurried in making out my despatches for the honourable Congress at Philadelphia, it is not in my power to answer it in so full a manner as I wish.

Notwithstanding Governour Tryon's plausible behaviour, I recommend it to you to watch him narrowly. And as any unlucky change of affairs on our part may produce a change in him of his present unexceptionable conduct, I expect you will, on the first appearance of such a change, pursue the advice given in my last letter. The like advice I give you respecting General Haldimand, who is supposed by some to have gone to New-York with a design to counteract us in that Province.

The commissions which have been forwarded to me are not sufficient to answer the demand I have for them, there being at least one thousand officers in this department, and not more than five hundred commissions in my possession. As you are so much nearer to Philadelphia than I am, I request you to apply to Congress for as many as you are like to want.

The dispersing handbills amongst the Troops at New-York has my most hearty approbation, and may have a good effect here. Our enemies have attempted nothing against us since my arrival here. They are strongly posted on Bunker's Hill, and are still busy in throwing up additional works. We have thrown up several lines and redoubts between Mistick River and Dorchester Point, to prevent their making way into the country, and in a few days shall be well prepared to receive them in case a sortie is attempted.

I sincerely thank you for your attention to the directions of Congress, and for your kind wishes, and am, with much regard, Sir, your most obedient friend, and very humble servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

Major-General Schuyler.

P. S. I herewith enclose a report this minute received from the camp at Dorchester. The design of this manœuvre I am at a loss to know, but suppose it may be intended as a diversion to our forces here. It, however, behooves you to keep a good look out, to prevent any surprise your way.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp at Cambridge, July 10, 1775.

SIR: I arrived safe at this place on the 3d instant, after a journey attended with a good deal of fatigue, and retarded by necessary attentions to the successive civilities which accompanied me on my whole route. Upon my arrival, I immediately visited the several posts occupied by our Troops, and as soon as the weather permitted, reconnoitred those of the enemy. I found the latter strongly intrenched on Bunker's Hill, about a mile from Charlestown, and advanced about half a mile from the place of the late action, with their sentries extended about one hundred and fifty yards on this side of the narrowest part of the neck leading from this place to Charlestown. Three floating batteries lay in Mistick River, near their camp, and one twenty-gun ship below the ferry place, between Boston and Charlestown. They have also a battery on Copp's Hill, on the Boston side, which much annoyed our Troops in the late attack. Upon the neck they are also deeply intrenched and strongly fortified. Their advanced guards, till last Saturday morning, occupied Brown's houses, about a mile from Roxbury meeting-house, and twenty rods from their lines; but at that time a party from General Thomas's camp surprised the guard, drove them in, and burnt the houses.

The bulk of their Army, commanded by General Howe, lays on Bunker's Hill, and the remainder on Roxbury Neck, except the Light-horse, and a few men in the Town of Boston.

On our side, we have thrown up intrenchments on Winter and Prospect Hills, the enemy's camp in full view at the distance of little more than a mile. Such intermediate points as would admit a landing, I have since my arrival taken care to strengthen, down to Sewall's farm, where a strong intrenchment has been thrown up. At Roxbury General Thomas has thrown up a strong work on the hill, about two hundred yards above the meeting-house, which, with the brokenness of the ground, and great number of rocks, has made that pass very secure. The Troops raised in New-Hampshire, with a Regiment from Rhode-Island, occupy Winter Hill. A part of those from Connecticut, under General Putnam, are on Prospect Hill. The Troops in this Town are entirely of the Massachusetts; the remainder of the Rhode-Island men are at Sewall's farm. Two Regiments of Connecticut, and nine of the Massachusetts, are at Roxbury. The residue of the Army, to the number of about seven hundred, are posted in several small Towns along the coast, to prevent the depredations of the enemy.

Upon the whole, I think myself authorized to say, that, considering the great extent of line, and the nature of the ground, we are as well secured as could be expected in so short a time, and under the disadvantages we labour; these consist in a want of Engineers to construct proper works and direct the men, a want of tools, and a sufficient number of men to man the works in case of an attack.

You will observe, by the proceedings of the council-of-war which I have the honour to enclose, that it is our unanimous opinion to hold and defend these works as long as possible. The discouragement it would give the men, and its contrary effects on the Ministerial Troops, thus to abandon our encampment in their face, formed with so much labour, added to the certain destruction of a considerable and valuable extent of country, and our uncertainty of finding a place in all respects so capable of making a stand, are leading reasons for this determination; at the same time we are very sensible of the difficulties which attend the defence of lines of so great extent, and the dangers which may ensue from such a division of the Army.

My earnest wishes to comply with the instructions of the Congress, in making an early and complete return of the state of the Army, has led into an involuntary delay of addressing you, which has given me much concern. Having given orders for this purpose immediately on my arrival, and unapprized of the imperfect obedience which had been paid to those of the like nature from General Ward, I was led from day to day to expect they would come in, and therefore detained the messenger. They are not now so complete as I could wish, but much allowance is to be made for inexperience in forms, and a liberty which had been taken (not given) on this subject. These reasons, I flatter myself, will no longer exist, and of consequence more regularity and exactness in future prevail; this, with a necessary attention to the lines, the movements of the Ministerial Troops, and our immediate security, must be my apology, which I beg you to lay before the Congress with the utmost duty and respect.

We labour under great disadvantages for want of tents; for though we have been helped out by a collection of now useless sails, from the seaport Towns, the number is far short of our necessities. The colleges and houses of this Town are necessarily occupied by the Troops, which afford another reason for keeping our present situation. But I most sincerely wish the whole Army was properly provided to take the field, as I am well assured, that besides greater expedition and activity in case of alarm, it would highly conduce to health and discipline. As materials are not to be had here, I would beg leave to recommend the procuring a farther supply from Philadelphia as soon as possible.

I should be extremely deficient in gratitude, as well as justice, if I did not take the first opportunity to acknowledge the readiness and attention which the Provincial Congress, and different Committees, have shewn to make every thing as convenient and agreeable as possible; but there is a vital and inherent principle of delay, incompatible with military service, in transacting business through such numerous and different channels. I esteem it, therefore, my duty to represent the inconvenience which must unavoidably ensue from a dependance on a number of persons for supplies, and submit it to the consideration of the Congress, whether the publick service will not be best promoted by appointing a Commissary-General for these purposes. We have a striking instance of the preference of such a mode in the establishment of Connecticut, as their Troops are extremely well furnished under the direction of Mr. Trumbull, and he has at different times assisted others with various articles. Should my sentiments happily coincide with those of your Honours on this subject, I beg leave to recommend Mr. Trumbull as a very proper person for this department.

In the arrangement of Troops collected under such circumstances, and upon the spur of immediate necessity, several appointments are omitted, which appear to be indispensably necessary for the good government of the Army, particularly a Quartermaster-General, a Commissary of Musters, and a Commissary of Artillery. These I must earnestly recommend to the notice and provision of the Congress.

I find myself already much embarrassed for want of a military chest. These embarrassments will increase every day. I must, therefore, request that money may be forwarded as soon as possible. The want of this most necessary article will, I fear, produce great inconveniences, if not prevented by an early attention.

I find the Army in general, and the Troops raised in Massachusetts in particular, very deficient in necessary clothing. Upon inquiry, there appears no probability of obtaining any supplies in this quarter. And on the best consideration of this matter I am able to form, I am of opinion that a number of hunting shirts, not less than ten thousand, would in a great degree remove this difficulty in the cheapest and quickest manner. I know nothing, in a speculative view, more trivial; yet, if put in practice, would have a happier tendency to unite the men, and abolish those provincial distinctions which lead to jealousy and dissatisfaction.

In a former part of this letter I mentioned the want of Engineers; I can hardly express the disappointment I have experienced on this subject, the skill of those we have being very imperfect, and confined to the mere manual exercise of cannon; whereas, the war in which we are engaged requires a knowledge comprehending the duties of the field and fortification. If any persons thus qualified are to be found in the Southern Colonies, it would be of great publick service to forward them with all expedition.

Upon the article of ammunition I must re-echo the former complaints on this subject. We are so exceedingly destitute, that our artillery will be of little use, without a supply both large and seasonable. What we have must be reserved for the small-arms, and that managed with the utmost frugality.

I am sorry to observe that the appointments of the General Officers in the Province of Massachusetts-Bay have by no means corresponded with the judgment and wishes of either the civil or military. The great dissatisfaction expressed on this subject, and the apparent danger of throwing the Army into the utmost disorder, together with the strong representations of the Provincial Congress, have induced me to retain the commissions in my hands, until the pleasure of the Congress should be further known, except General Putnam's, which was given the day I came into camp, and before I was apprized of these uneasinesses. In such a step, I must beg the Congress will do me the justice to believe, that I have been actuated solely by a regard to the publick good. I have not, nor could have any private attachments; every gentleman in appointment was an entire stranger to me, but from character; I must, therefore, rely upon the candour of the Congress for their favourable construction of my conduct in this particular. General Spencer was so much disgusted at the preference given to General Putnam, that he left the Army without visiting me, or making known his intentions in any respect. General Pomeroy had also retired before my arrival, occasioned, as is said, by some disappointment from the Provincial Congress. General Thomas is much esteemed, and earnestly desired to continue in the service; and as far as my opportunities have enabled me to judge, I must join in the general opinion that he is an able, good officer, and his resignation would be a publick loss. The postponing him to Pomeroy and Heath, whom he has commanded, would make his continuance very difficult, and probably operate on his mind, as the like circumstance has done on that of Spencer.

The state of the Army you will find ascertained with tolerable precision in the returns which accompany this letter. Upon finding the number of men to fall so far short of the establishment, and below all expectation, I immediately called a council of the General Officers, whose opinion as to the mode of filling up the Regiments, and providing for the present exigency, I have the honour of enclosing, together with the best judgment we are able to form of the Ministerial Troops. From the number of boys, deserters, and negroes which have been listed in the Troops of this Province, I entertain some doubts whether the number required can be raised here; and all the General Officers agree that no dependance can be put in the Militia for a continuance in camp, or regularity and discipline during the short time they may stay. This unhappy and devoted Province has been so long in a state of anarchy, and the yoke of Ministerial oppression been laid so heavily on it, that great allowances are to be made for troops raised under such circumstances. The deficiency of numbers, discipline, and stores, can only lead to this conclusion, that their spirit has exceeded their strength. But at the same time, I would humbly submit to the consideration of the Congress, the propriety of making some farther provision of men from the other Colonies. If these Regiments should be completed to their establishment, the dismissal of those unfit for duty, on account of their age and character, would occasion a considerable reduction, and at all events they have been enlisted upon such terms that they may be disbanded when other Troops arrive. But should my apprehensions be realized, and the Regiments here not filled up, the publick cause would suffer by an absolute dependance upon so doubtful an event, unless some provision is made against such a disappointment. It requires no military skill to judge of the difficulty of introducing proper discipline and subordination into an Army while we have the enemy in view; and are in daily expectation of an attack, but it is of so much importance that every effort will be made which time and circumstance will admit. In the mean time I have a sincere pleasure in observing, that there are materials for a good Army—a great number of able-bodied men, active, zealous in the cause, and of unquestionable courage.

I am now, Sir, to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 28th ultimo, enclosing the resolutions of the Congress of the 27th ultimo, and a copy of a letter from the Committee of Albany; to all which I shall pay due attention.

Generals Gates and Sullivan have both arrived in good health. My best abilities are at all times devoted to the service of my Country; but I feel the weight, importance, and variety of my present duties too sensibly not to wish a more immediate and frequent communication with the Congress. I fear it may often happen in the course of our present operations, that I shall need that assistance and direction from them, which time and distance will not allow me to receive.

Since writing the above, I have also to acknowledge your favour of the 4th instant, by Fessenden, and the receipt of the commissions and articles of war. The former are yet eight hundred short of the number required. This deficiency you will please to supply as soon as you conveniently can.

Among the other returns, I have also sent one, of our killed, wounded and missing in the late action; but have been able to procure no certain account of the loss of the Ministerial Troops. My best intelligence fixes it at about five hundred killed, and six or seven hundred wounded; but it is no more than conjecture, the utmost pains being taken on their side to conceal it.

I have the honour to be, with the most respectful regard, Sir, your obedient humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President, &c.

P. S. Having ordered the commanding officer to give me the earliest intelligence of every motion of the enemy, by land or water, discernable from the heights of his camp, I this instant, as I was closing my letter, received the enclosed from the Brigade-Major. The design of this manœuvre I know not; perhaps it may be to make a descent some where along the coast, it may be for New-York, or it may be practised as a deception on us. I thought it not improper, however, to mention the matter to you; I have done the same to the commanding officer at New-York, and I shall let it be known to the Committee of Safety here, so that intelligence may be communicated as they shall think best along the sea-coast of this Government.

Copy of a Report this moment received from the Camp at Roxbury, two o'clock, P. M., July 11, 1775.

Camp at Roxbury, July 11, 1775.

SIR: Since I sent the report by the Adjutant this morning, five large ships have sailed from Boston; we are not able to determine how many of them are men-of-war, or how many were transports, as they were behind Dorchester Hill. There appeared to be a number of people on board. I am, Sir, your humble servant.

By order of General Thomas:

THOS. CHASE, Major of Brigade.

To Horatio Gates, Esq., Adjutant-General.

The number of those Killed, Wounded, and Missing, in the Engagement on BUNKER HILL.

Colonel Frye's Regiment, 10 killed, 38 wounded, 4 missing; Colonel Little's Regiment, 7 killed, 23 wounded; Colonel Brewer's Regiment, 12 killed, 22 wounded; Colonel Gridley's Regiment, 4 wounded; Colonel Stark's Regiment, 15 killed, 45 wounded; Colonel Woodbridge's Regiment, 5 wounded; Colonel Scammon's Regiment, 2 wounded; Colonel Bridge's Regiment, 17 killed, 25 wounded; Colonel Whitcomb's Regiment, 5 killed, 8 wounded, 2 missing; General Ward's Regiment, 1 killed, 6 wounded; Colonel Gerrish's Regiment, 3 killed, 5 wounded; Colonel Reed's Regiment, 3 killed, 29 wounded, 1 missing; Colonel Prescott's Regiment, 43 killed and missing, 46 wounded; Colonel Doolittle's Regiment, 6 killed and missing, 9 wounded; Colonel Gardner's Regiment, 7 wounded; Col. Patterson's Regiment, 1 wounded; Colonel Nixon's Regiment, 3 killed and missing; Connecticut, 13 killed, 26 wounded.—Total, 145 killed and missing, 304 wounded.

At a Council of War held at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 9, 1775. Present:

His Excellency General Washington; Generals Ward, Lee, Putnam, Thomas, Heath, Greene, and Gates.

The General laid before the Council a Letter from Mr. Warren, President of the Congress of Massachusetts-Bay, enclosing a Letter from Mr. Gerry, at Marblehead, dated July 8, 1775.

1. A question was then proposed and considered, viz: What is the supposed number of the enemy near and in Boston, including the Troops formerly and lately arrived, and those expected hourly, the forces who may take arms, the sailors who may be spared from the fleet, and the negroes?

Upon which it was agreed, that from the best intelligence, the force on the side of the enemy now amounts to eleven thousand five hundred men.

2. It was then proposed and considered, whether it is expedient to keep and defend the posts at present occupied, or to retire farther back in the country?

Upon which it was unanimously determined, that the publick service requires the defence of the present posts.

3. His Excellency then proposed to the consideration of the Council, what number of troops may be necessary for the present service in and near Boston, to defend the posts already occupied against the force supposed to be employed against us?

Upon which it was agreed, that the Army for the above purpose ought to consist of at least twenty-two thousand men.

4. As it appears by the returns now made that the number of effective men is far short of the above estimate, a question was proposed, viz:

In what manner this deficiency should be supplied?

And it was unanimously agreed, that it ought to be done by sending an officer from each company in the forces raised in the Massachusetts-Bay to recruit the Regiments to which they respectively belong to the establishment fixed by the Provincial Congress, (the Colonies of Rhode-Island and Connecticut being already engaged in recruiting.) And that in the mean time his Excellency the General do apply to the Provincial Congress of this Province for their assistance in procuring a temporary re-enforcement, subject to the same military rules as the Army now raised, inasmuch as the present extent of lines, and the great probability of an early attack, renders such re-enforcement indispensably necessary.

5. As the events of war are uncertain, and a want of a proper rendezvous might, in case of any misfortune, occasion a dissolution of the Army, it was proposed to appoint a proper place for this purpose, in case our present situation should not be tenable.

N. C. agreed, That the Welsh Mountains, near Cambridge, and in the rear of Roxbury lines, was a suitable place.

6. A question was proposed, whether it is expedient to take possession of Dorchester Point, or to oppose the enemy, if they should attempt to possess it?

Unanimously agreed in the negative as to both.

General Return of the Army of the United Colonies, commanded by his Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, General and Commander-in-Chief, Head-Quarters at CAMBRIDGE, JULY, 1775.

HORATIO GATES, Adjutant-General.

Instructions for the Officers of the several Regiments of the MASSACHUSETTS-BAY Forces, who are immediately to go upon the Recruiting Service.

You are not to enlist any deserter from the Ministerial Army, nor any stroller, negro, or vagabond, or person suspected of being an enemy to the liberty of America, nor any under eighteen years of age.

As the cause is the best that can engage men of courage and principle to take up arms, so it is expected that none but such will be accepted by the recruiting officers. The pay, provisions, &c., being so ample, it is not doubted but the officers sent upon this service will, without delay, complete their respective corps, and march the men forthwith to camp.

You are not to enlist any person who is not an American born, unless such person has a wife and family, and is a settled resident in this Country;

The persons you enlist must be provided with good and complete arms.

Given at the Head-Quarters at Cambridge, this 10th day of July, 1775.

HORATIO GATES, Adj. Gen.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 3, 1775.

(Parole, Lookout.)

(Countersign, Sharp.)

The Colonels or commanding officers of each Regiment are ordered forthwith to make two returns of the number of men in their respective Regiments, distinguishing such as are sick, wounded, or absent on furlough, and also the quantity of ammunition each Regiment now has.

It appearing by the report of Henry Woods, the officer of the main guard, that one William Alfred is confined for taking two horses belonging to some persons in Connecticut, but that he has made satisfaction to the injured parties, who request that they may not longer be detained as witnesses, it is ordered that he be discharged, and, after receiving a severe reprimand, be turned out of Camp.

(AFTER ORDERS.)

Four o'clock, P. M.

It is ordered, that Colonel Glover's Regiment be ready this evening, with all their accoutrements, to march at a minute's warning to support General Folsom, of the New-Hampshire forces, in case his line should be attacked.

It is also ordered, that Colonel Prescott's Regiment equip themselves, march this evening, and take possession of the woods leading to Lechmere's Point, and in case of an attack, then Colonel Glover's Regiment to march immediately to their support.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 4, 1775.

(Parole, Abington.)

(Countersign, Bedford.)

Exact returns to be made by the proper officers of all Provisions, Ordnance, Ordnance Stores, Powder, Lead, working tools of all kinds, Tents, Camp Kettles, and all other Stores under their respective care, belonging to the Armies at Roxbury and Cambridge. The Commanding Officer of each Regiment to make a return of the number of Blankets wanted to complete every man with one at least.

The Hon. Artemas Ward, Charles Lee, Philip Schuyler, and Israel Putnam, Esquires, are appointed Major-Generals of the American Army, and due obedience is to be paid to them as such. The Continental Congress not having completed the appointments of the other officers in said Army, nor had sufficient time to prepare and forward their commissions, every officer is to continue to do duty in the rank and station he at present holds, until further orders.

Thomas Mifflin, Esquire, is appointed by the General one of his Aids-de-Camp; Joseph Reed, Esquire, is in like manner appointed Secretary to the General; and they are in future to be considered and regarded as such.

The Continental Congress having now taken all the Troops of the several Colonies which have been raised, or which may hereafter be raised, for the support and defence of the liberties of America, into their pay and service, they are now the Troops of the United Provinces of North America; and it is hoped that all distinctions of Colonies will be laid aside, so that one and the same spirit may animate the whole, and the only contest be, who shall render, on this great and trying occasion, the most essential service to the great and common cause in which we are all engaged.

It is required and expected that exact discipline be observed, and due subordination prevail through the whole Army, as a failure in these most essential points must necessarily produce extreme hazard, disorder, and confusion, and end in shameful disappointment and disgrace.

The General most earnestly requires and expects a due observance of those Articles of War, established for the government of the Army, which forbid profane cursing, swearing, and drunkenness; and in like manner requires and expects of all officers and soldiers, not engaged on actual duty, a punctual attendance on divine service, to implore the blessings of Heaven upon the means used for our safety and defence.

All officers are required and expected to pay diligent attention to keep their men neat and clean, to visit them often at their quarters, and inculcate upon them the necessity of cleanliness, as essential to their health and service. They are particularly to see that they have straw to lay on, if to be had, and to make it known, if they are destitute of this article; they are also to take care that necessaries be provided in the camps, and frequently filled up, to prevent their being offensive and unhealthy. Proper notice will be taken of such officers and men as distinguish themselves by their attention to these necessary duties.

The Commanding Officer of each Regiment is to take particular care that not more than two men of a Company be absent on furlough at the same time, unless in very extraordinary cases.

At the same time they are to hear and determine the case of Edward Dunley, a stroller, accused of "theft." Notice to be given to the prisoners to-day.

(Parole, Dorchester.)

(Countersign, Exeter.)

It is with inexpressible concern that the General, upon his first arrival in the Army, should find an officer sentenced by a General Court-Martial to be cashiered for cowardice—a crime of all others the most infamous in a soldier, the most injurious to an Army, and the last to be forgiven; inasmuch as it may, and often does happen, that the cowardice of a single officer may prove a destruction of the whole Army; the General, therefore, (though with great concern, and more especially as the transaction happened before he had the command of the Troops,) thinks himself obliged, for the good of the service, to approve the judgment of the Court-Martial, with respect to Captain John Callender, who is hereby sentenced to be cashiered. Captain John Callender is accordingly cashiered, and dismissed from all further service in the Continental Army as an officer.

The General having made all due inquiries and maturely considered this matter, is led to the above determination, not only from the particular guilt of Captain Callender, but the fatal consequences of such conduct to the Army and to the cause of America.

He now, therefore, most earnestly exhorts officers of all ranks to shew an example of bravery and courage to their men, assuring them, that such as do their duty in the day of battle, as brave and good officers, shall be honoured with every mark of distinction and regard, their names and merits made known to the General Congress, and all America; while, on the other hand, he positively declares, that every officer, be his rank what it may, who shall betray his Country, dishonour the Army and his General, by basely keeping back and shrinking from his duty in any engagement, shall be held up as an infamous coward, and punished as such with the utmost martial severity; and no connections, interest, or intercessions, in his behalf, will avail to prevent the strict execution of justice.

Captain Scott's and Captain Styler's Companies, from New-Hampshire, are to be incorporated, or added to Col. Surgeant's Regiment, agreeable to the application made for that purpose. No officer or soldier, posted in the lines for the defence of them, on Prospect Hill, or Winter Hill, or elsewhere, are, upon any account, to sleep out of their encampment, or leave it at night. The Troops from New-Hampshire are particularly required to attend to this order, from their particular circumstances of situation.

No soldier belonging to these posts, or elsewhere, to be suffered to straggle at a distance from their respective parade, on any pretence, without leave from his officers, as an unguarded hour may prove fatal to the whole Army, and to the noble cause in which we are engaged; the importance of which, to every man of common understanding, must inspire every good officer and soldier with the noblest ardour and strictest attention, lest he should prove the fatal instrument of our ruin.

The Adjutant-General is required to make a Return as quick as possible of the Troops in Cambridge, their number, and the duty they do.

Complaints having been made with respect to the bread, as being sour and unwholesome, the Quartermaster-General is hereby directed to inquire into the matter, and report upon it; at the same time to inform the bakers, that if any complaints are made, and they shall be found just, they will be most severely punished.

The guards on the roads leading to Bunker's Hill, are ordered not to suffer any person to pass them, unless an officer is sent down from the lines to order it, or they will be severely punished.

The General has great reason, and is highly displeased with the negligence and inattention of those officers who have placed as sentries at the outposts men with whose characters they are not acquainted. He therefore orders, that for the future no man shall be appointed to those important stations who is not a native of this Country, or has a wife or family in it, to whom he is known to be attached. This order is to be considered as a standing one, and the officers are to pay obedience to it, at their peril.

A complaint of the most extraordinary kind having been made to the General, that soldiers enlisted in one Regiment have been seduced to re-enlist into others, by agents employed for that purpose, under the specious promises of money, or leave of absence from the Army. A procedure so subversive of all order, discipline, and of the very existence of the Army, cannot be forgiven; the strictest orders are therefore given against such practices; and the General most earnestly declares, that if any agent or soldier shall hereafter be found so offending, he will punish them with the utmost severity.

A General Court-Martial having sat upon William Patin, and reported, that no evidence appeared against him to support the charge, the General defers his decision upon the report until farther consideration. In the mean time the Adjutant-General is ordered to wait on Col. Ward, by whom the prisoner was confined, and learn from him upon whose complaint, and what witnesses there are to support it.

A Regimental Court-Martial is ordered to sit to-morrow, ten o'clock, on Samuel Bartlett, of the Company late Captain Callender's, and Colonel Gridley's Regiment, confined for "abusive behaviour."

A General Court-Martial to sit to-morrow, ten o'clock, A. M., for the trial of Thomas Dantely, charged with "stealing." Each of the above prisoners to have notice to-day, and the witnesses in like manner ordered to attend.

In order that all the sick and wounded in the Army may be provided for, and taken care of, in the best way and manner possible, it is ordered, that when any officer or soldier is so ill, either by a wound or otherwise, that the Surgeon of the Regiment, to which he belongs, finds he cannot be properly taken care of in such Regiment, such Surgeon shall send him to the Camp Hospital to which they belong, with a certificate of the man's name, and the Company to which he belongs, and in that case the Surgeon of the Hospital shall receive said sick and wounded; and in case such Hospital shall be too full, in that case the Surgeon of said Hospital shall send such of his patients as may be removed with safety to the Hospital at Watertown, with the like certificate as above, on which the Surgeon of Watertown Hospital is to receive and take care of him.

(Countersign, Falkland.)

Ordered, that the main guard, on no account whatever, be without a drum, which is to beat to arms on any alarm, and be followed by all the drums in the Camp; on which every officer and soldier is immediately to repair to the alarm post.

The Commanding Officer of each Regiment or Corps in Cambridge, as soon as the men are paraded after an alarm, to send an officer to Head-Quarters for orders.

The Commanding Officers at Roxbury, Prospect Hill, Winter Hill, and Sewall's Point, to send expresses in case of alarm to Head-Quarters, with an account of the situation and the movements of the enemy. If they are not each provided with a horse for that purpose, the Adjutant-General to apply to the Committee of Supplies.

Colonel Gridley, of the Artillery, or the next in command, to give in a return of his men, stores, and ammunition, agreeable to the order of the fourth instant, and to distinguish the posts to which his Regiment is assigned, in case of alarm. The same order as to a return of the men, ammunition, and blankets, is given to the commanding officers of the Regiments late Colonel Gardner's, Colonel Glover's, and Colonel Gerrish's, who have omitted complying with the above orders hitherto.

The commanding officers at Winter Hill, Prospect Hill, and Roxbury, are to make particular inquiry into the ammunition of the men in those lines, and if there is any deficiency, immediately to report it to the General at Head-Quarters.

A General Court-Martial is ordered to sit on Monday next, ten o'clock, A. M., for the trial of Lieutenant Brigham, charged with "rescuing a prisoner when in lawful custody."

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 9, 1775.

(Parole, Effingham.)

(Countersign, Watertown.)

The Continental Congress having been pleased to appoint Horatio Gates, Esq., Brigadier-General and Adjutant-General of the Army, he is to be obeyed as such, and all orders transmitted through him from the Commander-in-Chief, whether written or verbal, are to be punctually and immediately obeyed.

All soldiers, more than two to a company, who are at present absent on furlough, and all officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, who have not joined their respective corps, to be ordered forthwith to camp. The commanding officers of corps to be answerable to the General for an immediate obedience to this order.

The General, or in his absence, the commanding officer at Roxbury, to send a report every day, in writing, sealed up, to the Commander-in-Chief, at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, of all the material occurrences of the preceding day, mentioning particularly all arrivals of ships and vessels in the bay, and what changes and alterations are made in the stations of the men-of-war, transports, and floating batteries, &c.

The General Court-Martial, of which Colonel William Prescott was President, having tried William Patten, of Colonel Gridley's Regiment, and found him guilty of "threatening and abusing a number of persons, when prisoner in the quarter-guard," the Court sentence the prisoner to ride the wooden horse fifteen minutes.

The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be put in execution at the head of the Regiment.

David Wells, soldier in Col. Gridley's Regiment, tried by the above-mentioned General Court-Martial, for "sleeping upon his post when sentry," is acquitted by the Court.

No non-commissioned officer or soldier, but such as are guilty of capital offences, to be confined in the main guard; all those guilty of crimes triable by a Regimental Court-Martial, to be sent to the quarter-guards of their respective corps, to be tried by Regimental Court-Martial.

The General Court-Martial, whereof Col. William Prescott is President, to sit again this day, at the usual hour. All evidences, and persons concerned, to attend the Court. Whenever a General Court-Martial is ordered, it is expected that the evidences and persons by whom the prisoners are confined, do punctually attend to support the accusation, as they will answer the contrary at their peril.

The Colonels of the Massachusetts Regiments to order one Subaltern from each Company in their respective Corps forthwith upon the recruiting service. Proper instructions will be given by the Adjutant-General to the officers ordered upon that service; they will, therefore, call at Head-Quarters as soon as possible, to receive their instructions. The General recommends it to the Colonels to send active and vigilant officers upon this service, and those who are most in esteem with people in the District they are sent to recruit in.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO RICHARD HENRY LEE, ESQ.

Camp at Cambridge, July 10, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I was exceedingly glad to receive a letter from you, as I always shall be whenever it is convenient, though perhaps my hurry, till such time as matters are drawn a little out of the chaos they appear in at present, will not suffer me to write you such full and satisfactory answers, or give such clear and precise accounts of our situation and views as I could wish, or you might expect. After a journey a good deal retarded, principally by the desire of the different townships through which I travelled, of showing respect to the General of your Armies, I arrived here on this day week; since which I have been labouring with as much assiduity, by fair and threatening means, to obtain returns of our strength in this camp and Roxbury, and their dependencies, as a man could do, and never have been able to accomplish the matter till this day; now, I will not answer for the correctness of them, although I have sent several of the regimental returns back more than once, to have mistakes rectified. I do not doubt but the Congress will think me very remiss in not writing to them sooner, but you may rely on it yourself, and I beg you to assure them that it has never been in my power till this day to comply with their orders. Could I have conceived, that that which ought, and in a regular army, which would have been done in an hour, would employ eight days, I should have sent an express on the second morning after I arrived, with a general account of things; but expecting in the morning to receive the returns in the evening, and in the evening surely to find them in the morning, (and at last getting them full of imperfections,) I have been drilled on, from day to day, till I am ashamed to look back at the time which has elapsed since my arrival here. You will perceive, by the returns, that we have but about sixteen thousand effective men in all this department, whereas, by the accounts which I received from even the first officers in command, I had no doubt of finding between eighteen and twenty thousand; out of these there are only fourteen thousand fit for duty. So soon as I was able to get this state of the Army, and came to the knowledge of our weakness, I immediately summoned a council of war, the result of which you will see, as it is enclosed to the Congress. Between you and me, I think we are in an exceeding dangerous situation, as our numbers are not much larger than we suppose, from the best accounts we are able to get, those of the enemy to be; theirs situated in such a manner as to be drawn to any point of attack, without our having an hour's previous notice of it, (if the General will keep his own counsel,) whereas we are obliged to be guarded at all points, and know not where, with precision, to look for them. I should not, I think, have made choice of the present posts in the first instance, although I believe the communication between the town and country could not have been so well cut off without; but as much labour has been bestowed in throwing up lines, making redoubts, &c.; as Cambridge, Roxbury, and Watertown, must be immediately exposed to the mercy of the enemy, were we to retreat a little further in the country; as it would give a general dissatisfaction to this Colony, dispirit our own people, and encourage the enemy to remove at this time to another place, we have, for these reasons, resolved in council to maintain our ground if we can. Our lines on Winter and Prospect Hills, and those of the enemy on Bunker Hill, are in full view of each other, a mile distant, our advance guards much nearer, and the sentries almost near enough to converse; at Roxbury and Boston Neck it is the same. Between these we are obliged to guard several of the places at which the enemy may land. The enemy have strongly fortified, or will in a few days, their camps and Bunker Hill; after which, and when their new-landed troops have got a little refreshed, we shall look for a visit, if they mean, as we are told they do, to come out of their lines. Their great command of artillery, and adequate stores of powder, &c., give them advantages which we have only to lament the want of. The abuses in this Army, I fear, are considerable, and the new modelling of it, in the face of an enemy, from whom we every hour expect an attack, exceedingly difficult and dangerous. If things, therefore, should not turn out as the Congress would wish, I hope they will make proper allowances. I can only promise and assure them, that my whole time is devoted to their service, and that, as far as my judgment goes, they shall have no cause to complain. I need not tell you that this letter is written in much haste; the fact will sufficiently appear from the face of it. I thought a hasty letter would please you better than no letter, and therefore I shall offer no further apology, but assure you that, with sincere regard for my fellow-labourers with you, Doctor Shippen's family, &c., I am, dear Sir, your most affectionate servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

P. S. We want an hospital, upon a proper establishment, much, and a proper director, with good surgeons, to take care and charge of it. I cannot learn that these are to be provided here; it therefore rests with the Congress to consider of this matter. A Mr. Bass, of Philadelphia, who, I am told, was in this way last war, can give you the proper establishment of one. I would not wish to see an expensive one set on foot, and I have no doubt of Doctor Shippen's recommending such gentlemen for surgeons as he can answer for the abilities of. Whether there is no news stirring, or whether we live out of the way of receiving it, I cannot tell, but so it is, that I have heard nothing of what the Parliament or Ministry are about since I left Philadelphia.

I am, as before, your servant,

G. W.

GENERAL THOMAS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Roxbury Camp, July 10, 1775.

SIR: I have arrested a master of a vessel that came out of Boston (Saturday night) in order to take charge of a vessel at Stonington, in Connecticut, loaded with molasses, to proceed to New-York as he saith. His acquaintance in the country inform that he has been a suspected person, and I think it my duty to forward him to your Excellency for your examination.

I am, Sir, with respect, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS.

To his Excellency Gen. George Washington, Cambridge.

Watertown, July 10, 1775.

In compliance with an order of the honourable the Provincial Congress, passed the fifth of July instant, the Freeholders and others, who were inhabitants of the Town of Boston, and were qualified, according to law, to vote for Representatives in May, 1774, and are now dispersed, are hereby notified and warned to assemble at the Meeting-House in Concord, on Tuesday, the eighteenth of July instant, at three o'clock in the afternoon, then and there to elect and depute one or more freeholders in said Town, according to the numbers limited by a law of this Colony, to serve for and represent them in a Great and General Court or Assembly, to be convened, held, and kept for the service of said Colony, until the day next preceding the last Wednesday of May next, if necessary, and no longer, at the Meeting-House in Watertown, upon Wednesday, the nineteenth instant, nine o'clock in the forenoon, and so from day to day during their session or sessions.

WILLIAM COOPER, Town Clerk of Boston.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE CAMP AT CAMBRIDGE,
JULY 10, 1775.

The General's express, that ought to have left this four days ago, is not yet gone. I therefore sit down to give you some description of our situation here, and that of the enemy.

The enemy are situated on Bunker and Breed's Hills, both on the peninsula where the late Town of Charlestown stood, and within reach, and under the cover of the guns from the batteries in the Town of Boston, and the ships in the harbour, and of a number of floating batteries which they have built, that carry two guns in their bows, two in their sterns, and one on each side. Our people are situated from Charles River, about two hundred rods below the college, where we have a redoubt, which begins the line; then about sixty rods from that another redoubt, and lines continued near a hundred rods; then at Charlestown road, on the west side of the road, at the foot of Prospect Hill, another redoubt and strong fortification; then on Prospect Hill is Putnam's Post, a very strong fortification; then, between that and Winter Hill, a strong citadel and lines over Charlestown road to Mistick; then in Mr. Temple's pasture, a strong redoubt that commands to Mistick River; so that we have a complete line of circumvallation from Charles River to Mistick River. Our main fortress on Prospect Hill, and the enemy's main fortress on Bunker's Hill, are within cannon shot of each other. A hill between these two posts, a little to the eastward of Prospect Hill, called Cobble Hill, I expect will soon cost us a squabble who shall have it, our people or theirs; nor do I expect it will be many days before the contest begins, which will probably bring on a general engagement. If they let us alone four or five days more, we shall be well prepared, and shan't care how soon they come, the sooner the better. On Roxbury side the enemy have dug across the neck and let the water through; and our people in turn have intrenched across the outer end of the neck, and are strongly fortified there, and on the hill by the meeting-house, so strong, that I believe every man in Boston, and at Bunker's Hill and Breed's Hill, must fall before they could force a passage that way into the country.

General Burgoyne sent a trumpeter yesterday with a letter to General Lee, wishing a composition of the unhappy differences, &c., and says the Parliament will certainly give up all right or pretence of taxation, if that will do, and wishes a conference. This letter is sent to the Congress for their opinion, and for them to appoint a person whom they can confide in, to attend the conference, and hear what passes, if they judge it best to have a conference. Major Gates is arrived, and we are getting into order and regularity very fast. Last night our people at Roxbury fired the remainder of Brown's buildings on Boston Neck, and have drove the enemy's guards back to their lines.

GENERAL LEE TO MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, July 10, 1775.

General Lee presents his respects to the President and Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts, and submits to their perusal a letter which he yesterday received from General Burgoyne, in answer to one which was read and approved of by the Delegates of this Province, and other members of the Continental Congress. He begs leave to request their commands with respect to the proposed interview. If they approve of it, he shall be glad to accept of it; if they disapprove, he shall reject it; but if they approve of it, he must request that they will depute some one gentleman of their body to accompany General Lee, and be witness of the conversation. He desires their answer immediately, as he has engaged to inform General Burgoyne by four o'clock this afternoon, whether the interview is to take place. He shall likewise be much obliged to the gentlemen if they will return the letter; but if they choose to take a copy, he can have no objection.

MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS TO GENERAL LEE.

In Provincial Congress, Watertown, July 10, 1775.

SIR: Congress have perused the letter from General Burgoyne, which you was kind enough to submit to their inspection. They can have no objection to the proposed interview from a want of the highest confidence in the wisdom, discretion, and integrity of General Lee, but would beg leave to suggest, that as the confidence of the people in their General is so essentially necessary to the well conducting the enterprise in which we are engaged, and as a people contending for their liberties are naturally disposed to jealousy, and not inclined to make the most favourable constructions of the motives of conduct which they are not fully acquainted with, whether such an interview might not have a tendency to lessen the influence which the Congress would wish to extend to the utmost of their power, to facilitate and succeed the operations of war.

To prevent, as far as we are able, any disagreeable consequences which may arise from the jealousy of the people on such an occasion, the Congress, agreeable to your request, have appointed Mr. Elbridge Gerry to attend you at the proposed interview, if you shall think proper to proceed in it; and as they do not think themselves authorized to counteract the General's inclination, they would submit it to his opinion whether the advice of the council of war might not be taken in a matter of such apparent delicacy.

To the Honourable General Lee.

GENERAL LEE'S LETTER DECLINING THE INTERVIEW PROPOSED BY GENERAL BURGUYNE.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 11, 1775.

Gen. Lee's compliments to Gen. Burgoyne. Would be extremely happy in the interview he so kindly proposed; but as he perceives that General Burgoyne has already made up his mind on this great subject, and as it is impossible that he (General Lee) should ever alter his opinion, he is apprehensive that the interview might create those jealousies and suspicions so natural to a people struggling in the dearest of all causes, that of their liberty, property, wives, children, and their future generation. He must, therefore, defer the happiness of embracing a man whom he most sincerely loves, until the subversion of the present tyrannical Ministry and system, which he is persuaded must be in a few months, as he knows Great Britain cannot stand the contest. He begs General Burgoyne will send the letters which his Aid-de-Camp has for him. If Gardiner is his Aid-de-Camp, he desires his love to him.

REMARKS ON THE LETTER FROM GENERAL BURGOTNE TO GENERAL LEE.

As General Burgoyne's letter, dated the eighth of July, 1775, in answer to one from General Lee, is permitted to be published, it becomes of course a subject of general speculation.

General Lee, by taking no further notice of the letter than to decline the proposed interview with General Burgoyne, plainly intimates that the sword, and not the quill, is now to decide the controversy. But as the bulk of mankind are apt to be deluded by sounds, without examining whether they are derived from good sense, or only the appearance of it, there is reason to fear many weak minds have been artfully misled to believe, from General Lee's returning only a card, and not a formal answer, that the letter carries to him conviction, and is therefore unanswerable. Indeed, was the force of the General's arguments as irresistible as the politeness of his style is engaging, we should have more reason to tremble at the point of his pen, than at the point of his sword. But as the patriot and hero to whom he addresses himself, will doubtless prevent the latter from doing any harm, if he pleases, it shall be the object of our present inquiry, whether we are in any danger from the former.

General Burgoyne introduces the vindication of his conduct by saying, that "the vital principle of the Constitution, in which it moves and has its being, is the supremacy of the King in Parliament." Now, if he means that the power of the King in Parliament is absolute, or that the two Houses of Parliament, with his concurrence, can make him so, over all or any part of his dominions, (for the sentence under review involves that conclusion,) as well acquainted as he is "with the doctrines of Mr. Locke, and other of the advocates for the rights of mankind," he can find nothing in their writings to support such an unlimited power in the Crown. Or if he means that the Parliament, as the supreme legislative, "have, and ought to have a power to make laws binding upon the King's American subjects "in all cases whatsoever," he will find it equally difficult to produce any authority for such an absolute power, till it can be proved that America is within the realm of England, or that the Americans have consented to the laws by which it is expected they should be bound. If, therefore, America is not within the limits of the realm; if there are acts of Parliament grievous and oppressively binding upon Americans, to which they have never consented, or even acquiesced in, and no authority can be produced from the labours of those great advocates for the rights of mankind, which the General appeals to, for such an uncontrollable power over three millions of his unrepresented fellow-subjects, it follows, upon his own principles, that he must either sheathe his sword, or own that "he draws it in the cause of slavery." If the General should require further evidence that no such unlimited power is vested by the Constitution in the King and Parliament, I beg leave to recommend to his perusal the masterly productions of Novanglus, and a writer from the County of Hampshire. In them he will find the subject treated at large, and our right of exemption placed beyond the reach of cavil.

The General goes on to say, "that towards the close of the reign of Charles the First, the true principle of resistance was changed, and a new system of Government projected accordingly. The Patriots previous to the long Parliament, and during great part of it, as well as the glorious Revolution of 1638, resisted to vindicate and restore the Constitution; the Republicans resisted to subvert it." He then says, "now, Sir, lay your hand upon your heart, as you have enjoined me to do on mine, and tell me to which of these purposes do the proceedings of America tend."

As General Lee is silent, I beg leave to answer: that their proceedings do not tend to the subversion of the Constitution, but the preservation of it. It is for the recovery of that "liberty, peace, and safety" which we and our forefathers have dearly purchased and uninterruptedly enjoyed "till within these ten years past, that we are contending." Since that period, we have been, and still are suffering unparalleled injuries, and more than savage cruelty, from the Parent State, under colour of law! And although we have humbly and repeatedly implored our Sovereign to extend his protection; to interpose in our behalf, and redress our grievances; our petitions have been treated with contempt, and our burdens increased: it is not, therefore, as the General suggests, a struggle "for total independency," but the weight of taxes imposed, and to be imposed to an unlimited amount, and an impossibility of procuring relief "in any other way," that has induced America to take up arms.

We have ever cheerfully submitted to the control of Parliament, in all cases whatsoever, relative to our commerce; not from a consciousness of the Parliament's right, but as a limited power, exercised for the mutual benefit of both Countries.

In no case whatsoever have we been, or shall we be willing to submit to the control of Parliament relative to our taxes, or internal police; because, it is an unlimited power, which extends to all we have; and therefore cannot be consented to without incurring perpetual bondage. What, then, does the General mean by saying, "it is in the power of the Colonies to put an end to the exercise of taxation immediately and for ever?" If he means, that the right of Parliament should remain, but never be exercised, it is an instance of chicanery beneath the dignity of his exalted station: for a right to exercise a power, which implies the exertion of it, and yet is never to be exercised, is a solecism in common sense; and, indeed, is no power. If Great Britain, therefore, "is ready to open her arms to an accommodation," let her cease hostilities, recall her forces, and renounce her claim of right to tax us; since "it can never be her interest, (as the General boldly asserts,) after her late experience, to make another trial;" and especially, since these are preliminaries, which, whilst ungranted, renders any other overture inadmissible.

The history of mankind will support me when I affirm, there never was a state which employed a Standing Army as an executive power to maintain its laws, which did not sooner or later become the sole legislative power of that state, and ultimately the destruction of civil liberty.

The General, therefore, may be as sanguine as he pleases about "the principles which actuate the Fleet and Army throughout." No principles but such as are founded in despotism, can justify their inhuman treatment of their innocent American fellow-subjects; no, not the mandate of their Sovereign, much less of a profligate Ministry.

I have Lord Chatham's authority to affirm, that "the value of the landed estates in England has doubled within these fifty years in consequence of their exclusive commerce with America; that the profits arising from it carried the Nation triumphantly through the last war:" it is therefore false to say, as the General does, that "the landed men have long borne burdens for America:" we, and not they, have borne the burden; and the time is now come when, I trust in God, we shall be exonerated.

But the General says, "Great Britain is resolute to maintain her rights; and if the war proceeds, one hundred and fifty thousand men will not be a match for her power."

It ill becomes a brave and generous soldier to be the echo of such a shameful Ministerial puff!

In the name of wonder! what was the power of Great Britain before her connection with America? What will it be when fraud, oppression, and every species of injustice shall force Americans to an everlasting separation?

Is there the least probability arising from the progress of her arms hitherto, of their becoming victorious? It is true, General Gage, by an infamous breach of faith, has made some unhappy people in Boston his prisoners, and their property his spoil; the Troops under his command have committed many robberies, burnt many houses, and murdered some of the inhabitants; but it is equally true, they have paid excessively dear for all they have got, and every inch of ground they possess.

What say you, my countrymen! Does Colonel Leslie's disappointment, the retreat from Lexington, the destruction of the King's Troops there and at Charlestown, and the other trials of our skill at arms excite any fearful apprehensions that we shall finally be vanquished? Are not all of them proofs of valour and intrepidity sufficient to convince our enemies that we are invincible?

May we not, therefore, with approbation, conclude, that whilst we admit General Burgoyne to be an elegant writer, we cannot help considering him as a very bad reasoner? God grant that his sword may prove as harmless as his pen.

AN OLD MAN.

From my Cottage near Boston, August, 1775.

TO GENERAL BURGOWNE.

Although the intercourse between yourself and General Lee is closed, you will permit an American, who is a stranger to you both, and has never seen either of the Armies in which you command, to address you, Sir, on the interesting subject of your late correspondence.

From the time of the conquest to the Revolution, the history of England affords innumerable instances of the People struggling for their rights, and the Sovereigns tenacious of assumed prerogatives; but the power of taxing themselves was the privilege of which our common ancestors were particularly jealous.

The present controversy between Great Britain and the Colonies originated from the question, whether the British Commons have a right to give and grant our moneys without our consent. For the question, you have urged as a principle of the Constitution, the supremacy of the King in Parliament. Against it, the Colonies have adduced another principle, which, in the words of Sir Edward Coke, is this: "It is against the franchises of the land, for freemen to be taxed but by their own consent." Modern Parliaments, with a kingly fondness for prerogative, have winked the latter principle out of sight, though their predecessors, the Commons of England, resolutely contended for it in the beginning of the reign of Charles the First, when, as you allow, they resisted to vindicate and restore the Constitution. In opposition to the unjust claim of the Crown to impose taxes, the House of Commons, in the third year of that Prince, voted, "that every freeman has, by ancient and indubitable right, the absolute and entire property of his own estate;" and both Houses, by the Petition of Right presented to His Majesty in the same year, "pray that no man hereafter be compelled to make it yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax, or such like charge, without common consent by act of Parliament."

These immortal Whigs, as you call them, thought the consent of those who were to pay the money indispensably necessary to a legal tax; and upon this principle, the speeches of their leaders, and the petition itself, prove they grounded their demand.

In the first year of the long Parliament (at which time you extol their patriotism and resistance) the Commons, Mr. Hume informs us, revived the pretensions with regard to tonnage and poundage; and adds, "the levying these duties, as formerly, without consent of Parliament, and even increasing them at pleasure, was such an incongruity in a free Constitution, when the people, by their fundamental privileges, cannot be taxed but by their own consent, as could no longer be endured by these jealous patrons of liberty." If their resistance was justifiable and virtuous, is not ours so? Are the claims of the British Parliament less dangerous to the Americans than those of Charles I. were to the people of England? He was under no temptation to lay heavier burdens on one part of his subjects than another; you have self-interest held up as a motive to oppress us.

But we are denied the right of resistance if other means of redress can be obtained. We have often presented petitions, which (because they called in question the right of Parliament to tax us) were styled undutiful, and were rejected, or if received were treated with neglect. If you can tell of any other peaceable means of redress, in the name of humanity let us know it. Certainly you cannot wish us to apply to Parliament, and say, We indeed have no voice in your appointment, and no influence in your counsels, nevertheless you have a right to dispose of us and all we have at pleasure, but we implore your mercy to continue to us the enjoyments of life. This, Sir, is not the language of freemen, and the Americans, therefore, have never learnt to speak it. Could we be base enough to act so slavish a part, your resentment might cease, but must be succeeded by contempt.

The landed men in England, who have long borne burdens for America, you say, are against us. The last war indeed began on this Continent; but are we on that account to bear any more than our proportion of its expense? As well might the logwood cutters in the Bay of Campeachy be charged with the burdens of the war before it, because a dispute between those logwood cutters and the Spanish guarda costas gave birth to that war.

Before the last rupture with the French, the conduct of that people, both in the East-Indies and America, evinced their design to disturb the trade of Britain. Their line of forts from Canada to the Mississippi was calculated to monopolize the fur trade. Your interest was struck at. The views of both Crowns were the extension and security of their Fishery and Commerce. Great Britain prevailed, and then recognized, in the most honourable terms, the zeal and efforts of the Colonies, however mean-spirited she may think them now. She had not then in contemplation the design to protect our property from the French, that she might afterwards seize it herself, without our consent. Such a design would have been inconsistent with the spirit of magnanimity which inspired her councils, and repugnant to every principle of honour and justice.

You say we deny the right of British legislation to impose taxes, and consequently struggle for total independency. This argument is unkind and fallacious; unkind, as every Assembly and Congress on the Continent has disavowed the intention; and fallacious, because the proposition is particular, and the consequence general. May not one person or community be dependant on another without being totally dependant? If in Great Britain the Constitution is free and limited, and the Colonies are entitled to equal freedom, is it not impossible that their dependance ought to be absolute and without limitation. Ireland has long felt her dependance without owning the power in question, and the Americans have been affectionate and loyal in such a situation, more than one hundred and thirty years. When you first made and they opposed your claim of right to taxation, they thought no more of independency than the Parliament in 1628 thought of beheading King Charles; they would now esteem it a most unfortunate event; and nothing but a settled habit of cruelty in the mother can make the child forget its filial duty.

King Charles at first denied to the people their ancient rights; the high sense he entertained of his own dignity would not readily permit him to correct mistakes. The passions of the people were inflamed. They afterwards denied to him his just prerogatives, and even abolished the regal power. In civil contests there is a keenness of animosity unfelt in foreign wars. The voice of reason is less regarded, and the tenderest feelings of the soul change to envenomed hate.

That some attempt to bring about an accommodation of the present dispute, may be attended with success equal to the benevolence of the design, is the most ardent wish of

A COUNTRYMAN.

DECLARATION OF ADAM MCCULLOCH.

Arundel, July 10, 1775

Whereas I, the subscriber, have, by some inadvertences, been so unhappy as to fall under the displeasure of the good people of this place; and many things have been laid to my charge of an inimical nature to the just rights and liberties of the good people of this Country, some of which I am not guilty of. I do now publicly declare, that so far as I have been guilty, either in words or actions, of offending the same, in matters of a civil nature, more especially in regard to the unhappy contest now prevailing between Great Britain and these Colonies, that I am heartily sorry, and do now humbly ask the forgiveness of all the friends of America for the same; and do promise that I will not offend in like manner again, but will do all that lays in power for the defence of the rights and privileges of this Country; and shall ever esteem it my greatest happiness of a temporal nature to enjoy the favour and friendship of the people with whom I now dwell; and will for the future pay due obedience to the lawful authority and advices of this Province, and determine to stand or fall with the fate of the same; heartily wishing that every resolution and determination for the good of the publick may have its desired effect.

ADAM McCULLOCH.

TO THE PEOPLE.

London, July 11, 1775.

Awake, my countrymen! appeal to your own understandings, and value, as you ought, your excellent form of Government. What man amongst us, when his private rights are invaded, does not immediately seek redress for the injury he has sustained? What wretch is there, then, so shamefully degenerated, as to be an unconcerned spectator of his Country's ruin? As Government was instituted for our good, we are to know whether our governours have our interest at heart. Actions must speak for themselves; we are not to be deluded by empty professions. It is our duty to prolong the life of liberty, and not to let the shackles of slavery be imposed upon this; or any future generation. While our Country remains, all good men, I am sure, will unite in this purpose, to deem nothing too hard to be endured or done for its interest, provided it be consistent with the laws of that more ancient and sacred association of mankind, of which God is the parent and governour. Let us look back to the beginning of the present reign, and see in what manner our most sacred rights and liberties have been infringed, and daringly violated. We patiently, to our great shame, endure innumerable oppressions, when our noble ancestors, at the expense of their lives, would have had ample redress for a single grievance.

The first stride of despotism and arbitrary power, was in arresting English subjects, and even a member of the British Legislature, by virtue of a general warrant, issued by a Secretary of State, contrary to the laws of the land.

We have seen their houses rifled and plundered, their papers seized, and used as evidence upon trial.

Their bodies committed to close imprisonment.

The Habeas Corpus eluded.

Trial by Jury discountenanced, and the first law officer of the Crown publickly insinuating that Juries are not to be trusted.

Printers punished by the Ministry in the Supreme Court, without a trial by their equals—without any trial at all.

The remedy of the law for false imprisonment barred and defeated.

The plaintiff and his attorney, for their appeal to the law of the land, punished by expenses and imprisonment, and made, by forced engagement, to desist from their legal claim.

A writing determined to be a libel by a Court, where it was not cognizable in the first instance, contrary to law, because all appeal is thereby cut off; and inferiour Courts and Juries influenced by such predetermination.

A person condemned in the said Court, as the author of the supposed libel, unheard, without defence or trial.

Unjust treatment of Petitions, in selecting parts to criminate the petitioner, and refusing to hear those which might procure him redress.

Perpetual imprisonment of an Englishman without trial, conviction, or sentence, by the same mode of attachment, wherein the same person is at once party, accuser, judge, and jury.

Instead of the ancient legal civil police, the military introduced at every opportunity, unnecessarily and unlawfully patrolling the streets, to the alarm and terror of the inhabitants.

The lives of many of our fellow subjects destroyed by military execution.

Such military execution solemnly adjudged to be legal.

Murder abetted, encouraged, and rewarded.

A large Standing Army kept in times of profound peace, contrary to an express article of the Bill of Rights.

The Civil Magistracy rendered contemptible, by the appointment of improper persons.

Civil Magistrates tampered with by Administration, and neglecting and refusing to do their duty.

Mobs and rioters hired and raised by the Ministry, to justify and recommend their illegal proceedings.

The freedom of Election violated by corrupt and undue influence, by unpunished violence and murder.

The verdicts of Juries and opinion of Judges overruled, and determinations of law set aside by new, unprecedented, and dangerous means, thereby leaving the guilty without restraint, and the innocent without redress, and the lives of fellow-subjects at the mercy of every ruffian protected by Administration.

Obsolete and vexatious claims of the Crown set on foot, for partial and election purposes.

Partial attacks on the liberty of the Press; pernicious libels against the Constitution allowed to pass unnoticed, when the slightest libel against a Minister is punished with the utmost rigour.

Wicked attempts to increase and establish an enormous Standing Army, by endeavouring to vest in the Crown an unlimited power over the Militia.

Resolutions of one branch of the Legislature set up as the law of the land.

Publick Money shamefully squandered and unaccounted for; all inquiry into the Civil List prevented.

Inquiry into a Paymaster's publick accounts stopped, though the sums unaccounted for amount to above forty millions sterling.

Publick loans perverted to private Ministerial purposes.

Prostitution of publick honours and rewards to men who can neither plead publick virtue nor services.

Irreligion and immorality encouraged by Administration, both by example and precept.

Right of taxation assumed without any representation, in direct violation of the law of the land.

Our fellow subjects in America plundered and butchered by an Army, their complaints unheard, and their oppression hourly increasing.

Lastly, our right of Petition denied, contrary to an express article of Magna Charta.

These, with many other infringements of our rights, demand our earliest exertions in the true cause of liberty and our Country. Our children are dear to us, so are our wives, our parents, our kinsmen, our friends and acquaintance. But our Country contains within it all those objects of endearment; and therefore it is the duty of every good man to be ready to lay down his life for it, if he can thus do it service. Rouse up, for shame! and revenge your wrongs. A voice from our fellow subjects on the Continent, animated with a true love of liberty, calls aloud to action. Great Sidney's shade complains that we are slow, and Allen's ghost stalks unrevengeed amongst us.

BRUTUS.

JOHN GRENNELL TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Huntington, Long-Island, July 11, 1775.

SIR: Agreeable to instructions received from the respectable the Provincial Congress for enlisting men, I now report my proceedings therein to you. Have served the subalterns with their instructions, and received their answer, that it is inconvenient for them to accept, by reason of business, which alone prevents their serving the Country at this time. In consequence thereof, I now enclose their warrants, and humbly crave the liberty to recommend to the notice of the Committee of Safety two other gentlemen, who will serve, and be acceptable to the people that I expect to enlist.

The refusal of those gentlemen has prevented my progress in that matter, as other officers in their stead may perhaps be appointed under whom they would not so readily serve, and therefore postpone the business until it is known. The gentlemen I have in view are, Mr. Samuel Smith, of Smithtown, first Lieutenant, and Mr. Alexander Ketchum, of this place, second Lieutenant. Harvesting, which is at the height, has greatly impeded the enlisting. Some have offered, but I thought prudent not to enroll them until that business was over, when a prospect appears of filling up the company at once, which will be a saving of expenses for the intermediate time. Some who stand ready to enlist have arms, ammunition, and blankets. Shall be obliged by orders how to act in that case, and what encouragement I should give them for such necessities.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient, humble servant,
JOHN GRENNELL.

To Peter V. Brugh Livingston, Esq., to the care of Col. Alexander McDougall, New-York.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Camp near New-York, July 11, 1775.

SIR: Peter Herring, the man who last night assisted in conveying on board the Asia, man-of-war, one of the prisoners sent here by the Continental Congress, is now under guard at our camp. I would beg the immediate advice of the Committee of Safety concerning what is best to be done with him. His brother is willing, and desirous that he should be sent away some where, that he may be out of the way of the enraged people. Some have proposed that he be sent on board the Asia; others think it best to have him sent to Connecticut, with Governour Skene, who will go off as soon as this matter can be determined. I hope, therefore, to be assisted with your advice as speedily as possible; and am, Sir, your humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To Peter V. B. Livingston.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 17, 1775.]

Albany, July 11, 1775.

SIR: I have the honour to advise you that I arrived here on Sunday at noon; since which time I have been closely employed in the duties of my office.

It is with pleasure I remark, that intelligence from various quarters indicate a friendly disposition in the Indians towards us. No efforts are, however, wanting on the part of our enemies to change these sentiments in the savages to resentment and hostility, an evil highly incumbent on us to guard against, and of which the Committee of this place have so just a sense that they pay it the closest attention, whilst they look up to that respectable body which represents the Continent of America for the line of their future conduct in this delicate and important matter.

The unhappy controversy which has subsisted between the officers at Ticonderoga, relative to the command, has, I am informed, thrown every thing into vast confusion. Troops have been dismissed, others refuse to serve, if this or that man commands. The sloop is without either captain or pilot, both of which are dismissed or come away: I shall hurry up there much sooner than the necessary preparations here would otherwise permit, that I may attempt to introduce some kind of order and discipline amongst them.

I am this moment favoured with a letter from Col. Hinman, and sundry returns, copies of which enclose. You will perceive by the return No. 1, that on the 7th instant they had only one barrel of flour at Ticonderoga, twenty at Crown Point, and twenty at Fort George. By No. 2 and 3, it appears that about four hundred and seventy-seven barrels of flour have been sent up, amounting to about ninety-five thousand four hundred rations, and that about twenty thousand remain; so that seventy-five thousand are expended. From the same returns it appears, that about sixty-five thousand rations of pork have been also expended, exclusive of thirty-five fat oxen; hence a very considerable waste or embezzlement has taken place.

Permit me here, Sir, to urge the necessity of the appointments I recommended in my letter of the 28th June, as indispensably necessary to carry on the service with propriety, economy, and certainty, to which I must add another, that of a Muster-Master and Deputies; without which such a scene of confusion and controversy must unavoidably take place in the payment of the Troops, as will be beyond the power of the most able accountant to rectify. These offices are so necessary, that I should not have hesitated one moment to have made the appointments, had I not received your orders to the contrary.

Give me leave, Sir, to request a copy of such Articles of War as the Congress may have adopted. The scandalous want of subordination, and the low treatment which I am informed some officers give, and others receive, merit exemplary punishments, as they are ruinous to the Army, destructive to the service, and disgraceful to those in command.

Governour Trumbull has honored me with a letter, in which he advises me, that no more than forty half barrels of powder can be sent me from the Colony of Connecticut. That from Pennsylvania is not yet arrived, and you will perceive that there is very little with the Troops. Should Governour Carleton know our true situation, with respect to this article, it would be very easy for him to use it to our disadvantage. Governour Trumbull will send me fifteen thousand Pounds in money, which is so much wanted here that the spirited Committee of this place have been under the necessity of emitting one thousand Pounds in small bills, as a circulating medium, to pay troops and others employed in the service; which, although it passes as currently as bank bills in the best of times, I shall order it to be called in as soon as I am enabled to do it, lest it should open a door to fraud and confusion.

As the transportation of salted meat is attended with the very heavy expense of a sixty-five mile land carriage to Fort George, before I left New-York I ordered one hundred head of fat cattle to be purchased in Connecticut, and to be drove up to Ticonderoga, where there is a sufficiency of pasture for them.

Enclose you, Sir, an extract of a paper received from Governour Trumbull, relative to the temper of the Caughnawaga Indians, marked No. 4.

The paper No. 5, will show you how very weak we are with respect to vessels for transporting troops across the lake, or even with those necessary to keep the command of the lake, in case Mr. Carleton should provide himself with a naval force. I hope, however, soon after my arrival at Ticonderoga to be in a better condition for maintaining the advantage we have acquired.

I hope to be at Ticonderoga on Friday or Saturday, from whence I shall do myself the honour to transmit you a full account of the state of the troops, and of every other matter which may be necessary for your information.

I am, Sir, respectfully, your most obedient, and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c.

COLONEL BENEDICT ARNOLD TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 17, 1775.]

Albany, July 11, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: General Schuyler has desired me to acquaint you of the state and situation of the Army in the Northern Department. Six days since, when I left Crown Point, there were at that post near three hundred men, without employ, having received no orders to fortify; at Ticonderoga about six hundred, in the same state; at Fort George, upwards of three hundred men; some few employed in building batteaus, and on scouting parties. Very little provision at any of the places; none made for the sick, which are daily increasing; only five hundred weight of gunpowder at all the places, and no Engineer or Gunner at either. Great want of discipline and regularity among the troops. On the other hand, the enemy at St. John's indefatigable in fortifying, and collecting timber (supposed) for building a vessel. The disposition of the Canadians and Indians, from the latest accounts, very favourable. A promise has, however, been extorted from the latter to defend Gouverneur Carleton if attacked, in Montreal; this of course.

By giving up the command, I have been prevented receiving regular intelligence as heretofore; the latest near twenty days since.

I have received no answer to my letter of the 13th June, by Captain Oswald. Can only add, I am, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

P. S. I had forgot to inform you my Regiment is disbanded.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 11, 1775.

SIR: The person that commanded the sloop on Lake Champlain has left her. It is more than probable that I shall not be able to procure at Ticonderoga such a person as I should wish to command her. I entreat you, therefore, to send me with all possible despatch, a person fit to confer such an important command upon. You will please to transmit me an account of the agreement you may enter into with him.

You will please to observe that I have ordered one hundred fat cattle from Connecticut, and five hundred barrels of flour to be purchased here, as part of the estimate I gave in to you at New-York.

The powder from Pennsylvania is not yet arrived: please to forward it by the first opportunity. I am, Sir, your most humble, obedient servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire, President of the New-York Provincial Congress.

P. S. Please to forward the packet that will be delivered you to Mr. Hancock, by a safe hand.

ELISHA PHELPS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 11, 1775.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: Before your favour of the 29th June last came to hand, I was possessed of the little stores Mr. Bleecker had on hand, which was pork principally; and as it did not in any wise answer, agreeable to the act of our Assembly I thought it my duty to apply immediately to the Committee here. They informed they had no orders to purchase, though some of the gentlemen gave it as their private opinion that I should provide agreeable to act of Assembly; whose advice I have followed as far as lay in my power, as I was informed the Army suffered to that degree as threatened mutiny, if flour, &c., could not be forwarded. It was with difficulty I procured ten barrels at that time, and ten more at Schenectady. I have forwarded with all possible despatch all the provisions I could obtain.

Since my return to the General, of the 10th instant, I have sent forward sixty-two barrels flour, and Mr. French about thirty barrels more. The General has, to my great satisfaction, ordered the Committee to purchase flour for me.

I am desired by Colonel Hinman to send up rum and hospital stores, agreeable to act of our Assembly; but these articles are not to be had here, and the Army thinks me in the fault, and I cannot conceive that I am authorized by my commission to purchase stores, though I have presumed it on myself on this emergency, as I am expressly ordered to receive and forward, &c., from the Provincial Convention of New-York to the Fourth Regiment, &c.

I have likewise, a few days ago, received a commission, as Commissary for the Boston forces on this station, to receive and forward &c., &c. I hope you, gentlemen, in your wisdom, will point out ways and means that those necessities may be purchased and forwarded agreeable to what those soldiers may reasonably expect from the acts of the New-England Provinces; and you may rely on my doing my utmost in the execution of my office and trust; while I am, gentlemen, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

ELISHA PHELPS.

To the Hon. Provincial Convention at New-York.

N. B. I have thought proper to transmit a copy of the above to his Honour the Governor of Connecticut.

COMMITTEE OF CORRESPONDENCE OF BRADFORD TO MASSACHUSETTS COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Correspondence, Bradford, July 4, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your address to us directed, respecting Captain Gages's Company deserting the cause of their Country, which has given us and the Town great uneasiness, and before we received your letter, as well as since, we have exerted ourselves to the utmost of our power to make them that you call deserters return to their duty; and can assure your Honours, that almost all those persons have re-enlisted themselves, or provided persons that have enlisted in their room; for, upon our receipt of your letter, we called the Town together, and proposed to them, according to the nota bene in your letter, that they would undoubtedly be entitled to and receive pay for their whole services; they were encouraged, and we expect they will march to join the Army, if the weather permits, to-morrow, the fifth instant. Many are the reasons the men give for their coming home; but the greatest is, that the field-officers of the Regiment kept them in ignorance with respect to the validity of the old enlistments; and being informed they were not valid, they left on a sudden, without consideration of what effect it might have on the grand cause we are engaged in. But, gentlemen, they are almost all returning to their duty, except a few who were disaffected with the service, and were the chief instruments of their coming away, preferring their own interest to that of the publick, (which we will endeavour they shall be made a publick example of,) and as the others are returning to their duty, and we doubt not will do it cheerfully, we hope you will receive them into favour, as if this had never happened.

We are, gentlemen, with great respect, your very humble servants,

THOMAS KIMBALL, Chairman.

To the Committee of Safety in Cambridge.

EDMUND BRIDGE TO MASSACHUSETTS CONGRESS.

Watertown, July 11, 1775.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: Plunged into the deepest distress, and in danger of perishing by famine from the want of provisions, we cannot support the clamours of our wives and children for bread. To you, gentlemen, next to Heaven, we address our prayers for support. The inhabitants of Pownalborough, in the midst of calamity, have been applied to by General Gage; he offers to supply us with provisions, if we will send his troops a supply of fuel. We cannot comply with his demands; we would not contribute to the support of the enemies of our Country. Pray direct us what course to pursue; give us bread, and we will cheerfully sacrifice our lives, our all, in the common cause. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

EDMUND BRIDGE.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the Massachusetts-Bay.

PHILADELPHIA MILITARY ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the Officers of the Military Association for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, held at Carpenter's Hall, July 12, 1775:

Resolved, That this body invite the Committees of the City and Liberties and County of Philadelphia, and the Officers of the several Battalions in the said County, to meet together, with this body, at the College-Hall in this City, on next Saturday week, at nine o'clock in the morning, to take under consideration the late Resolves of the honourable House of Assembly of this Province, relative to the appointment of Minute-men. And that the Secretary be directed to publish this Resolve in the English and German newspapers. Published by order:

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

Philadelphia, July 13, 1775.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 12, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The troops to the northward are so few and under so little discipline, that I begin to be apprehensive of consequences should Governour Carleton make an attempt. I must, therefore, entreat you to send up all such as may be raised in this Colony, without delay, with such camp equipages as may be ready; the remainder must follow. If the intrenching and other tools, which I desired might be sent up, have not yet left New-York, pray let them be forwarded by the very first opportunity, as we stand in great need of them. I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., President of the New-York Provincial Congress.

ETHAN ALLEN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Bennington, July 12, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: The notice your Honour hath taken of the letters I have already sent to you emboldens me to trouble your Honour with this; more especially on account of the intelligence which Mr. Bennett, the post, hath this day communicated to me: he will communicate the same to your Honour. This intelligence corresponds with the predictions of which I have formerly wrote you. I was apprised of the necessary consequences that are about to take place, except we support our friends in Canada. I lay my honour on it, that the Indians in general, (I might almost have said the same of the Canadians.) are disposed to be either neuter or assistants to the United Colonies; my former letters have given the reasons, and also the reasons why they will be necessitated to join against us, except we advance an army into Canada: shall, therefore, not enlarge here.

Were it not that the Grand Continental Congress had lately incorporated the Green Mountain Boys into a battalion, under certain regulations and command, I would forthwith advance them into Canada, and invest Montreal, exclusive of any help from the Colonies; though, under present circumstances, I would not, for my right arm, act without or contrary to order. If my fond zeal for reducing the King's fortresses, and destroying or imprisoning his troops in Canada, be the result of enthusiasm, I hope and expect the wisdom of the Continent will treat it as such; and, on the other hand, if it proceed from sound policy, that the plan will be adopted.

Provided the enterprise be attempted, (inasmuch as in our Northern Department we are scarce of the article of powder, and as the Regulars are well intrenched at St. John's, with a good artillery,) it will be requisite to land and march out of shot of their intrenchments to Montreal, which may easily be done. Commanding the country defeats the grand purpose of the enemy's fortifications. 'Tis a pity such a handful of Regulars should command Canada, in spite of the United Colonies, and against the will of the Canadians and Indians.

I am, Sir, with the greatest respect, your Honour's most devoted, most obedient, and most humble servant,

ETHAN ALLEN.

To Governour Trumbull.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, July 12, 1775.

SIR: I beg leave to congratulate your Excellency upon your being appointed General of the United Colonies, which hath given sincere pleasure to every friend to America, and will, I hope, prove glorious to yourself, and be attended with essential advantages to your Country.

The General Assembly of this Colony have the deepest sense of the necessity of a strict union, and the most vigorous efforts of the Colonies to preserve them from unlimited servitude; and their utmost exertions in the common cause may be depended upon.

I also assure your Excellency, that I shall give you every assistance in my power, and that I am, with very great regard, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To his Excellency General Washington.

By the Honourable NICHOLAS COOKE, Esquire, Deputy-Governour and Lieutenant-General of and over the ENGLISH Colony of RHODE-ISLAND and PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS in NEW-ENGLAND, in AMERICA:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, the General Assembly of the Colony aforesaid, at their session held at Providence, on Wednesday, the 28th of June last, taking into consideration the present alarming situation of the Colonies, and the necessity of putting this Colony into a posture of defence, passed an Act requesting me to issue a Proclamation, commanding every man in the Colony, able to bear arms, to equip himself with Arms and Ammunition, according to law: I have, therefore, thought fit to issue this Proclamation, hereby commanding every man in the Colony, able to bear arms, immediately to equip himself with Arms and Ammunition, according to law, upon the penalties of the law in such cases provided.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Colony, at Providence, the twelfth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and fifteenth of the reign of His Majesty George the Third, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, &c.

NICHOLAS COOKE.

By his Honour's command:

HENRY WARD, Secretary.

God save the King.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAMBRIDGE, DATED JULY 12, 1775.

The day before yesterday we went to Chelsea, famous for the battle of Noddle Island near to it. While we were on Powderhorn Hill, back of Chelsea, we saw a skirmish between a party of our people, (one hundred and ten in number,) who went in whale boats to an island about twelve miles from Boston, and burnt a large quantity of hay, which was put up into bundles by the Regulars, and intended to be sent to Boston for their horses. A great number of Marines, in schooners, men-of-war boats, and two ships-of-war, kept up a constant fire on our men, while they remained on the island; but this did not prevent them from destroying the hay. The schooners and boats endeavoured to cut off their retreat, which brought on a very warm engagement, in which we had one killed and one wounded. The loss of the Regulars is not known, but supposed to be considerable, as they were drove off several times, and finally obliged to retire; which would not have been the case, if they had not lost some men.

Yesterday we spent in Roxbury; while there we were amused with a heavy fire of cannon and mortars from the lines of the Regulars on the neck, and from one of their floating batteries, against two hundred of our men, who were throwing up a breastwork in front of the George Tavern, on the same neck, and within a few rods of the Regulars' advanced guard; our people kept on their work, and never returned a shot. Three bombs burst near our men, without injuring one of them; most of the cannon-shot were taken up and brought to the General. It is diverting to see our people contending for the balls as they roll along.

One circumstance, much to their reputation, I must mention: During a severe cannonade at Roxbury last week, a bomb, thirteen inches in diameter, fell within our line, and burnt furiously; four of our artillery-men ran up, and one kicked out the fuse and saved the bomb, and probably some lives—a stroke of heroism worthy of record. I heard the man's name yesterday, but now forget it. The Regulars have so hardened our people with their repeated firing, that a cannonading is just as much minded there as a common thunder shower. All things look well; we are now strongly posted, so are the Regulars. I believe neither side are willing to attack each other in their lines.

We have just got overland from Cape Cod a large fleet of whale-boats; in a day or two we shall man them in Cambridge and Mistick Rivers, and try to keep our enemy's boats from insulting us. The Regulars do not seem willing to come out, but our people are perpetually provoking them.

A gentleman who got out of Boston Monday, July 10, says, that the inhabitants were numbered, and amounted to 6,573; the soldiers numbered, women and children, to 13,600. Three hundred Tories are chosen to patrol the streets, forty-nine of a night. Very sickly; from ten to thirty die in a day, and no bells allowed to toll. Master Lovell taken up and put in jail, which is in consequence of some letters found in Dr. Warren's pocket; and Master Leech also. Released out of jail four. Mr. Hunt saying, that he wished the Americans might kill them all, was confined in jail. Eleven dead of the wounded prisoners at Charlestown; Colonel Parker dead, he having declared, at his last hour, if he got well he would do the same.

The officers say, damn the rebels, that they would not flinch. A great number of floating batteries are building, and five transports and three sloops are sailed for hay and wood to the eastward.

This gentleman also says, that the officers and soldiers triumph very much at the death of Doctor Warren, saying it is better to them than five hundred men.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL LEE.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 12, 1775.

SIR: I am commanded by the General-in-Chief to acquaint you, that he is exceedingly desirous to draw the body of the troops posted at Roxbury as near and as completely together, for the defence of the several works, as the nature of the ground and the conveniency of covering them will admit; and to that end, the General wishes you would inform him what tents, sails, or boards, may be wanted to cover the men, and they shall be forthwith supplied from hence. I have it also in command from the General to recommend it to you to have the houses removed out of the street at Roxbury, as they may cover and facilitate the approach of the enemy. The General further directs me to desire that you will exert your utmost vigilance to get your several works finished and completed, your lines closed, and particularly the abattis, and the platforms immediately laid. As we are much in want of boats for Mistick and Cambridge Rivers, you will, as soon as possible, send two for each of these rivers to the Head-Quarters at Cambridge.

With great regard, Sir, I am, your most humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To General Lee.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLIES TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Chamber of Supplies, Watertown, July 12, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: General Washington has sent a memorandum for four hundred rounds of thirty-two pound shot, and we have ordered the same from the furnace which we employ. But lest we should be disappointed in point of time, we think it necessary to apply for the same to be sent from Portsmouth, if to be procured.

We are, truly, gentlemen, your very humble servants,

DAVID CHEEVER, per order.

FRANCESTOWN (NEW-HAMPSHIRE) COMMITTEE.

Whereas, it has been falsely reported that the Committee of Safety for Francestown were not fairly and legally chosen, and by reason of said report the publick were dissatisfied with the proceedings of said Committee: whereupon, we, the Selectmen of said Francestown, judged it our duty to call in some disinterested persons to determine the matter, and thereupon sent to the Committees of Safety for two neighbouring Towns, who, when convened, unanimously voted and agreed that said Committee were fairly and legally chosen, and had good right to act in all cases for the safety of said Francestown, and that their proceedings and determinations are and ought to be as valid as the proceedings and determinations of any Committee of Safety in any Town whatsoever.

Signed by order of the Selectmen:

WILLIAM MCMMASTER, Town Clerk.

Francestown, July 12, 1775.

HILLSBOROUGH (NEW-HAMPSHIRE) COMMITTEE.

Amherst, July 13, 1775.

Whereas, the Delegates for the County of Hillsborough, in the Province of New-Hampshire, in Congress, appointed a Committee from several Towns to hear, examine, and try John Quigly, Esq., a person lately confined in the Jail at Amherst, on suspicion of being an enemy to the liberties of America, and lately liberated from said Jail, but still behaves as an open and avowed enemy to the liberties of America: Said Quigly being notified of time and place of trial did not appear. Ordered, That his contempt be recorded. And upon a full and fair examination of sundry evidences, we find him guilty of the several crimes laid to his charge, and we look upon him as a dangerous person to be suffered to go at large: and we do hereby caution all persons from all connections with him.

DAVID BADGER, per order of Committee.

In Committee of Safety, Exeter, July 19, 1775.

SIR: The bearer hereof, John Quigly, Esq., has met with difficulty, and thinks it unsafe for him to tarry at the place of his usual abode, by reason of a disaffection in some persons against him. We would recommend it to you, to take him into your company in the common service.

Captain Timothy Bedel, Esq.

JOHN QUIGLY'S DECLARATION.

Whereas, there has been wickedly and maliciously raised and propagated against me, the subscriber, certain scandalous falsehoods, with an intent, as must be supposed, to cause the publick to view me in the odious light of an enemy to my Country; whereupon I declare that I never said or did any thing with an intent to destroy the liberties of America, or to hurt the publick good, and am now ready to risk my life and fortune in the defence of my Country's just rights, when properly called, as it always has been and still is my sincere wish to live in peace and harmony with my Country, and serious determination to promote to the utmost of my power the publick weal and tranquillity of the same, whose glory I view as closely connected with my own interest; and I hope my future conduct will fully prove the sincerity of my present declaration.

JOHN QUIGLY.

Francestown, July 26, 1775.

In Committee of Safety, Francestown, July 26, 1775.

Resolved, That the foregoing declaration of John Quigly, Esq., now laid before the Committee, is fully satisfactory to us, and we hope will remove any ill impressions that may have been made on the minds of the good people of this Continent, in consequence of his being committed to jail, or confined there; as we put up an advertisement, desiring all persons that had any thing to offer against said Quigly to bring it in to us, and no proper evidence appearing to oppose the said Quigly, and it appearing to us that many false reports has been made and spread against said Quigly, and this being the second trial, we, upon examination, not finding just cause to deem him an enemy to this Country: therefore, it is our opinion that the said Quigly ought to be received and treated as a friend to his Country.

Signed by order of the Committee:

WILLIAM MCMMASTER, Clerk.

BALTIMORE (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

At a special meeting of the Committee of Baltimore Town, held on Thursday the 13th July, 1775, at 4 o'clock, P. M. Present: Mr. William Smith, Chairman, and twenty-eight Members.

A Letter from James Christie, Jun., Merchant of this Town, directed to Lieutenant-Colonel Gabriel Christie, of His Majesty's Sixtieth Regiment, at Antigua, having been intercepted, was laid before the Committee, and ordered to be read, which was accordingly done, and the following paragraphs are part of the contents:

"Baltimore, February 22, 1775.

"We are in such terrible confusion here with our politicks, there is no depending on any thing; and that, added to other things, makes me wish myself out of the Province. We are little behind the New-Englanders—mustering, purchasing arms, ammunition, &c. We have some violent fanatical spirits among us, who do every thing in their power to run things to the utmost extremity, and they are gone so far, that we moderate people are under the necessity of uniting for our own defence, after being threatened with expulsion, loss of life, &c., for not acceding to what we deem treason and rebellion. The Provost and family are very well; our publick affairs vex him, and he wishes himself away, but I know not when or if ever that will happen. A part of yours, or any other Regiment, I believe, would keep us very quiet."

The Committee then summoned Mr. Christie to attend them, but being confined to his bed he was unable to do it; they then sent Messrs. James Calhoun, William Buchanan, Thomas Harrison, Thomas Jones, William Goodwin, and Isaac Vanbibber, to wait on him at his house, and to inquire whether the said Letter was wrote by him.

The gentlemen returned, and report, that Mr. Christie had been shown the Letter, and acknowledged that it was wrote by him; but requested that any further proceedings thereon might be postponed until his health would permit his personal attendance. The Committee not thinking it proper to comply with his request, as Mr. Christie had confessed he wrote the Letter, immediately gave him notice thereof; upon which Mr. Robert Christie attended on his behalf; but it growing late, and many of the members being withdrawn, the Committee directed a guard of nine men, under the command of an officer, to be placed round Mr. Christie's house, and then adjourned till to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock.

Friday, July 14, 1775.

The Committee met according to adjournment. Present: Mr. William Smith, Chairman, and thirty-three Members.

They resumed the business of yesterday. Mr. Robert Christie attended, and declared, that Mr. James Christie was very sorry for the Letter he had wrote Lieut. Colonel Christie; that he did not mean any harm by it, and that he was very willing to acquiesce in the determination of the Committee.

On motion, Resolved, That Doctor John Boyd, and Mr. John McLure, members of this Committee, do wait on Mr. James Christie, and inquire of him who those moderate people were, that united for their defence, as mentioned in his Letter, and that they take his answer in writing.

The gentlemen returned, and report: that Mr. Christie declared there never was any association between him and his friends for the purpose alluded to, or for any other purpose; and all that he remembers to have passed on the occasion was, that some time last winter he was informed, that he, with some of his friends, were to be made a publick example of, for not uniting with the Town in the present opposition, and this being spoken of accidentally among two or three of his friends, it was proposed, whether an association for mutual defence would be advisable; but no determination being then made, and they soon after being convinced that no threats worth notice had been thrown out against them, the matter dropped, and was never afterwards thought of, or attempted; and that it was at this time of doubt and apprehension, that he had wrote the letter in question, which accounts for that part of it alluded to in this inquiry.

The Committee proceeded to take Mr. Christie's conduct with respect to said Letter into further and deliberate consideration, and were unanimously of opinion, that by representing in said Letter the people of this Town to be concerned in treasonable and rebellious practices, and that a number of soldiers would keep them quiet, he has manifested a spirit and principle altogether inimical to the rights, privileges, and liberties of America: they do, therefore, think it their duty to advertise the said James Christie, Jun., as an enemy to this Country, and all persons are desired to break off all connection and intercourse with him.

The Committee do further resolve, that as the crime of which the said James Christie is guilty, is of so dangerous and atrocious a nature, they will lay the same before their Delegates at the Continental Congress for their advice; and in the mean time it is ordered, that as Mr. Christie is confined to his bed, and cannot be removed with safety to a place of security, the same guard be continued at his house to prevent any escape attempted either by himself or the assistance of his friends, and that Mr. Christie pay each man five shillings for each twenty-four hours, and the officers seven shillings and six pence.

A report having been circulated that a number of Arms and a quantity of Ammunition were secretly lodged in the house of Mr. James Christie, and the same being mentioned in the Committee, they directed two of their members (Captain Clopper and Mr. James Cox) to go immediately and search Mr. Christie's house; which they accordingly did, and reported that they had examined the house attentively in every part, attended by Mr. Robert Christie, Jun., and that they only found two Guns and a pair of Pistols, and no Ammunition, and were convinced no others were in the house.

Extract from the Minutes of the 14th July:

WILLIAM LUX, Secretary.

Resolved, That these proceedings be published in the Maryland Papers.

Copy from the Minutes of the proceedings:

WILLIAM LUX, Secretary.

The following is a copy of Mr. Christie's Letter:

Baltimore, February 22, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I duly received your favours of the 13th and 22d November, and should probably have wrote you before now, had I not met with the greatest misfortune in the power of fate to inflict on me, in the loss of the wife of my soul, on the 15th December last, that has almost put it out of my power to mind any thing for some time past, and all my fortitude is scarce sufficient to bear me up; however, I must submit. She had been brought to bed of a girl about twenty days; the dear little infant died a few days after its mother.

I some time since remitted twenty-two pounds and eight shillings sterling, to be paid your mother for the boy's passage, (being twenty pounds and interest on it at six per cent. since I received the money,) and which, on the whole, leaves them about seven pounds currency in my debt, which I shall soon receive for rent. Charles's expense for clothing, schooling, &c., when ashore runs high. But I think he may now pay for it himself. Gabriel hath been with me three or four months, and so far hath behaved to my satisfaction; and I would flatter myself he may easily be broke of the idle, indolent habit he had been acquiring; he applies well to any thing I put him to, and after a while I hope may do.

As your brother's correspondence and mine has been suspended since a letter I wrote him about the boys, soon after the receipt of yours, I wrote my sister about John Græme's mandamus, and to get me the preference of it. I have thought nothing more about it, and am yet quite undetermined. At present I think of going to Britain, so soon as my affairs will admit of it, and leave my little boy at Stirling; and if things turn out to my liking, perhaps I may remain, and set myself down either in London or Glasgow. When I may get away is wholly uncertain—I would hope some time next fall. We are in such terrible confusion with our politicks, there is no depending on any thing; and that, added to other things, makes me wish myself out of the Province. We are little behind the New-Englanders—mustering, purchasing arms, ammunition, &c. We have some violent fanatical spirits among us, who do every thing in their power to run things to the utmost extremity, and they are gone so far, that we moderate people are under a necessity of uniting for our defence, after being threatened with expulsion, loss of life, &c., for not acceding to what we deem treason and rebellion.

The Provost and family are very well; I believe he has nothing lately from James. He has made inquiry about negotiating bills on him in Bengal, and finds it may be done at a disadvantage of twenty per cent., and thirty per cent. more, if the bills are protested; on the whole, fifty per cent. in case of protest. Whether he will attempt it or not, I know not. Our publick affairs vex him, and he wishes himself away, but I know not when, or if ever that will happen. A part of your or any other Regiment I believe would keep us very quiet. Do you expect to remain long in the West-Indies? I shall hope to hear from you soon, and am, very truly, dear Sir, yours,

JAMES CHRISTIE, JUN.

Lieut. Col. Gab. Christie, of the 60th Reg't, Antigua.

A CALM ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW-YORK.

New-York, July 13, 1775.

Human nature never affords a more disagreeable spectacle, than during those political ferments and convulsions which are incident to civil society, sometimes from the ambitious and encroaching spirit of those in authority, sometimes from the factious and turbulent disposition of subjects, and sometimes from a complication of both. These occasions set all the various and secret springs of the human mind in motion; and by throwing men off their guard, disclose their real temper and characters, divested of that disguise of which they are susceptible in the calms of life. The native deformity of the heart is exposed to full view, heightened by all the incitements of ambition, interest, faction, and resentment. While contending parties scruple not to practise any arts, however unjustifiable, to attain their respective ends, we behold one continual scene of treachery, falsehood, dissimulation, calumny, injustice, violence, and every other vice that is disgraceful and pernicious. The zeal of each, inflamed by opposition, blazes into extravagance, begets the most unreasonable animosities, and leads at last into the most fatal extremes. All regard to candour and decency is laid aside; every opportunity is seized with the utmost avidity, to misrepresent the designs of opponents, and every step they take, however well-meant and innoxious, is decried as totally insidious and destructive. It seems to be far less the aim of either to arrive at truth and promote the interests of society, than to contradict, vilify, and supplant each other, so that we generally find, when publick disputes draw towards a crisis, the opposite factions are at a much greater distance than at their commencement. One side has made new advances in a favourite track, and has embraced opinions which it did not think of at first; and the other has receded from that post which it once held in common with its adversaries, and has abandoned those tenets which were, in the beginning, judged essential by itself.

Pride, and a latent belief of the infallibility of our own judgments, are both extremely natural. These render us obstinately attached to our own opinions, and impatient of the least contradiction or control; and by these, we are brought to suspect every man of ignorance, hypocrisy, or dishonesty, who is so unfortunate, or so presumptuous, as to differ from us in sentiment. We cannot admit the supposition of ourselves being in an error; nor can we entertain any ingenuous charitable indulgence for the frailties of others. We do not consider the delicate texture of the human understanding, and how liable it is to be warped by prejudice and passion; but, intoxicated as we are with fond notions of our own sagacity and penetration, and, perhaps, at the same time, conscious of the integrity and goodness of our own intentions, we cannot forbear wondering how any can be so blind and stupid as not to discern the reality of those truths, which to us appear incontestable; or so base and devoid of every large, noble, and liberal sentiment, as, from further motives, to shut their eyes to conviction, and to act in opposition to self-evidence and demonstration. Hence proceed disgust, aversion, antipathy; and from these, defamation, insult, persecution; which, instead of remedying the evil, only tend to radicate and make it incurable.

The same pride and self-conceit that operate in this manner, are also frequently productive of other effects, if possible, still more culpable and prejudicial. Incidents, new and unlooked-for, oft-times fall out in the course of controversies, which place them upon a foundation different from that on which they began; and, by ascertaining some standard in which there is, or has been, a common agreement, seem naturally to require a cessation of hostilities between the parties, and a cordial coalition and reconciliation. But as this seldom happens without giving some advantage, real or apparent, to one party over the other, we too often find the fever of opposition still unabated, to the great detriment and perhaps irretrievable injury of the community. On the one hand, we perceive a reluctance to submit to the humiliating task of acknowledging an error, and an aversion to concurring in the measures of those against whom the most violent enmities have been contracted; and, on the other hand, a preposterous spirit of triumph and exultation, which breaks out upon every occasion, accompanied with inevitable jealousies and suspicions of the friendly pretensions of those who were formerly antagonists.

This summary delineation of the usual operations and progress of party spirit, is intended to inspire sentiments of moderation in the different parties, which have divided this Province during the present contest with Great Britain; and, by warning against excesses, to cherish and increase that disposition towards a united exertion, in defence of our common rights, which begins to prevail among all orders of men. Nothing can be more desirable in itself, or more necessary towards our mutual security, than universal harmony and good-will, which can only be effected by abolishing all odious party distinctions, by indulging no recollections of past feuds and animosities, by making the most candid allowances for each other's failings, and by entertaining the most favourable opinions of each other's designs. Could we once be persuaded mutually to discard the lofty ideas we have of our own self sufficiency, it would be easy to bring both sides to a compromise and accommodation; by showing that neither has been entirely in the right; that both have erred in some particular; that the whole quantum of praise or blame is not due to either; and that the dispute with Britain, though fundamentally the same, has been attended with some new and important circumstances, which remove all the considerations, and obviate all the objections that have heretofore supported the opposition of one side to the proceedings of the other.

It is an ungrateful, and, for the most part, an unsuccessful attempt, to convince men of their errors and misconduct; neither is the present temper of the times, overheated by passion, and blinded by prejudice, at all suited to such an undertaking. The remedies that may be drawn from the fountain of cool and dispassionate reasoning, by being ill-timed, instead of effectuating a cure, may only serve to irritate and augment the disease, and, on that account, it is most prudent to defer the discussion to some future period; when the causes which now inflame the passions having ceased, they will, of course, grow more calm and serene, and truth will find an easier access to the tribunal of reason and judgment. I shall close these reflections with a few observations, in order to show that a change of conduct is incumbent upon those who have formerly dissented from the general measures of the Continent.

The only sources of opposition avowed by them have been these: They conceived that the subject of dispute did not properly relate to the right of taxation, of which they always professed an absolute disavowal, but to the right of regulating trade, which we all acknowledge to reside in Parliament. The duty upon tea (said they) is an external regulation of commerce, not an internal tax. The tea of itself is an article of luxury, confessed on all hands to be extremely pernicious to health; if we disapprove of the imposition laid upon it, we ought to evade it, by ceasing to use the obnoxious herb, and not for so inconsiderable an object combine in a violent and furious resistance to that country, from whence we derive our origin; by whose maternal hand we have been gently led on from helpless infancy to a state of maturity and robust manhood; under whose fostering protection we have enjoyed such a rich variety of blessings, and from whose vindictive frowns we have reason to apprehend the most desolating mischiefs. If we are aggrieved, it is our duty and interest to make a fair experiment in the regular legal mode of obtaining redress, before we proceed to those extraordinary expedients which are without the bounds of the law, and which ought not to be employed but in cases of necessity. We have reason to hope that our reasonable complaints will meet with due attention, and the causes of them be removed; some constitutional arrangement take place, and our privileges be established upon a solid unprecarious basis: such as by fixing proper and known boundaries to the claims of either, will serve to prevent all future altercations, and secure us from those inconveniences which are ever attendant upon disputed claims.

These views were moderate and plausible. It is a pity they were not better founded than the event has clearly manifested.

Without a gross departure from their own principles, these advocates for moderation and regularity must now heartily unite with the rest of their countrymen, in the most strenuous opposition to Parliament. The controversy has put on a different aspect, and is now come to an issue that must either induce them to relinquish their former scruples, or to renounce all pretensions to consistency, fidelity, or patriotism. Lord North has openly declared in the House of Commons, that the dispute is no longer about a mere phantom, or point of honour, but about a solid substantial benefit to the state—an American revenue. His conciliatory proposition is conformable to this declaration. We are required to contribute our proportion towards the support of Government, in a manner that destroys all freedom of contribution. The Parliament is ultimately to determine concerning the sufficiency of our offers, which is obviously the same as if it were at first to fix the sums it might expect us to pay; and withal, this requisition is enforced by every compulsory method that could be devised; oppressive restrictions on our trade; a menacing Navy in our ports; and a formidable Army carrying on a bloody war in our country. Here is taxation in its most unequivocal sense, and clothed in its most hateful tyrannical form.

The decent constitutional Remonstrance of our Assembly has been rejected, without the least ceremony or regard even to appearances, as being highly derogatory to the rights of Parliament, because it contained a denial of the right of taxation. This incident must carry a mournful conviction to the breast of every honest man, that Administration is resolute to persist in all its exorbitant claims, and to prosecute them to the most deplorable extremity. Had it entertained the least inclination to come to a composition of the differences subsisting between us, an honourable ground was here presented; for though we should suppose the Remonstrance to have exhibited claims rather too extensive, it at least opened an unexceptionable door for negotiation, and by that means an amicable termination of the unhappy contest might have ensued. These considerations loudly call upon every American, of whatsoever party, cheerfully to consign over all past animosities to oblivion, and to join, with heart and hand, in the defence of his country and freedom.

ELISHA PHELPS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 13, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: If you have any provisions or hospital stores, beg you will take this safe and convenient opportunity to forward them by Mr. Benjamin French's sloop, as these articles are much wanted.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,
ELISHA PHELPS.
To the Provincial Convention at New-York.

EGBERT BENSON TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Dutchess County, July 13, 1775.

SIR: Having been informed that the Congress was adjourned, and not knowing whether any of the gentlemen from this County would be in New-York during the recess, I have taken the liberty of transmitting to you the enclosed warrants.

Mr. Adriance and Mr. Wilcox have both declined, and our County Committee have, agreeable to the directions of the Congress, recommended, in the stead of the former, Mr. James Betts, and of the latter, Mr. Isaac Paddock.

If the Congress should think proper to appoint these gentlemen, you will please to direct new warrants to be issued, and sent up immediately.

We have some reason to suppose other persons have already applied for the commission of Mr. Adriance; should that be the case, the Committee do not expect their recommendation will interfere with a prior application.

I remain (by order of the Committee) with the utmost respect, your very humble servant,

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq.

Albany Committee Chamber, July 13, 1775.

The Committee of this City and County having heretofore appointed Messrs. Abraham Yates, Junior, Robert Yates, Abraham Ten Broeck, Jacob Cuyler, Henry Glen, Francis Nicoll, Peter Silvester, Dirck Swart, Walter Livingston, Volkert P. Douw, and Robert Van Rensselaer, the Deputies of this City and County, to attend the Provincial Congress, with general powers to represent this City and County; but by reason of the inconvenience attending the attendance of all the Deputies in the said Provincial Congress,

It is therefore Resolved, That for the future the said Deputies attend the said Congress, or any four or more of their number, for the purposes aforesaid, with the same power and authority as if all the said Deputies were present.

ABRAHAM YATES, JR., Chairman.

JOHN BAY, Secretary pro tem.

COMMITTEE OF SAFETY FOR CONNECTICUT.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council, &c., Thursday, 13th July, 1775. Present:

His Honour the Governour; Jabez Huntington, Esq., Samuel Huntington, William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Jedediah Elderkin, Joshua West, and Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

The Governour laid before the Council, &c., sundry Letters and papers. Also a Letter he had prepared to General Washington, congratulating him on his appointment, &c.; and another to the same gentleman, hinting at General Spencer's uneasiness, &c., at being overlooked, &c., and that it was beside our expectations, &c., and proposing, &c., that said General Spencer may remain stationed at Roxbury with the body of Connecticut Troops now there, &c.; which are approved, though a small alteration was made in the Letter to gratify Gen. Spencer after he came in, &c.

Samuel Huntington and William Williams were desired to wait on General Spencer, at Gray's, the tavern where he was just arrived, and confer with him on the subject-matter of his dissatisfaction, &c., and endeavour to remove, &c., and reconcile him cheerfully to pursue the service; which they did accordingly. And having adjourned, &c.

P. M. Met again at the Governour's, where General Spencer attended, and had a long conference with him on the subject-matter of his being superseded by the General Congress, in putting General Putnam above him, &c., which he thinks very hard of and resents, &c., and is at length persuaded to return to the Army, and not at present quit the service as he proposed. And General Spencer set out on his return to camp with the Letters to General Washington.

Indian Cognahue, who brought despatches from the Indian country to the Governour, and desirous to return with answer, the Governour had sent for Captain Jer. Mason, who came, to inquire of him the character of said Cognahue, &c.

On Mr. Potter, from Norwich in Cohoss, with a written request from his Town earnestly moving for Powder, on consideration, this Committee think they cannot furnish him with any.

On motion, ordered the two Companies of General Wooster's Regiment, who were stationed at New-London, (though one is yet at New-Haven,) to march directly to camp near Boston; and the Governour gave orders accordingly.

Doctor Turner, principal Surgeon to the Eighth Regiment now raising, moves to be resolved, whether the Medicine Chests, as ordered by the General Assembly, to amount to the value of thirty Pounds, i. e. whether the Instruments are to be included in that sum; and it is the opinion of the Committee that said sum is exclusive of the necessary Instruments.

Adjourned to Monday, the twenty-fourth July instant, at nine o'clock, A. M., then to consider relating to the armed Vessels, &c., ordered by the General Assembly, &c.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, July 13, 1775.

SIR: Suffer me to join in congratulating you on your appointment to be General and Commander-in-Chief of the Troops raised, or to be raised, for the defence of American liberty.

Men who have tasted of freedom, and who have felt their personal rights, are not easily taught to bear with encroachments on either, or brought to submit to oppression. Virtue ought always to be made the object of government; justice is firm and permanent.

His Majesty's Ministers have artfully induced the Parliament to join in their measures, to prosecute the dangerous and increasing differences between Great Britain and these Colonies with rigour and military force, whereby the latter are driven to an absolute necessity to defend their rights and properties by raising forces for their security.

The honourable Congress have proclaimed a Fast to be observed by the inhabitants of all the English Colonies on this Continent, to stand before the Lord in one day with publick humiliation, fasting, and prayer, to deplore our many sins, to offer up our joint supplications to God for forgiveness, and for his merciful interposition for us in this day of unnatural darkness and distress.

They have with one united voice appointed you to the high station you possess. The Supreme Director of all events hath caused a wonderful union of hearts and counsels to subsist amongst us. Now, therefore, be strong and very courageous. May the God of the Armies of Israel shower down the blessing of his divine providence on you; give you wisdom and fortitude; cover your head in the day of battle and danger; add success; convince our enemies of their mistaken measures; and that all their attempts to deprive these Colonies of their inestimable constitutional rights and liberties are injurious and vain.

I am, with great esteem and regard, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

His Excellency George Washington, Esquire.

Newburgh, Ulster County, New-York, July 14, 1775.

Whereas we, the subscribers, have refused to sign the Association within the time limited by the Provincial Congress; and whereas our troubles with the Mother Country continue to increase, and we are now convinced that we have no other alternative left but to repel force by force, or submit to be slaves: Sensible that this is our deplorable situation, and in order to continue to link our chain of friendship still more firm, and to convince our friends and the friends of American liberty in general, we do hereby solemnly and sincerely swear on the holy evangelists, that we will, from henceforth, heartily agree and consent to whatsoever our Continental and Provincial Congresses have, or may do, direct, ordain, and appoint, for the preservation of our constitutional liberties; and that we will, as much as in us lies, discourage the spirit of opposition that has too unhappily prevailed in some parts of this Country. That we will, from time to time, bear and pay our quota of all expenses with the rest of our brethren in America, that has already or hereafter may accrue, in defending our liberties aforesaid. And we do hereby further swear, that we make this declaration and oath of our own free will and voluntary consent; and in testimony whereof, we have hereunto set our hands this 14th day of July, Anno Domini, 1775.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS,

Camp Cambridge, July 14, 1775.

SIR: Since I did myself the honour of addressing you on the tenth instant, nothing material has happened in the camp. From some authentick and later advices of the state of the Ministerial Troops, and the great inconvenience of calling in the Militia in the midst of harvest, I have been induced, for the present, to waive it; but in the mean time recruiting parties have been sent throughout this Province, to fill up the Regiments to the establishment of the Provincial Congress. At the same time that I received these advices, I also obtained a list of the officers of the enemy killed and wounded in the late battle at Charlestown, which I take this opportunity to enclose. The great scarcity of fresh provisions in their Army, has led me to take every precaution to prevent a supply; for this purpose I have ordered all the cattle and sheep to be drove from the low grounds and farms within their reach. A detachment from General Thomas's camp on Wednesday night went over to Long-Island, and brought from thence twenty cattle and a number of sheep, with about fifteen labourers, who had been put on by a Mr. Ray Thomas to cut the hay, &c. By some accident they omitted burning the hay, and returned the next day at noon to complete it; which they effected, amidst the firing of the shipping, with the loss of one man killed and another wounded.

Last evening also a party of the Connecticut men strolled down on the marsh at Roxbury and fired upon a sentry, which drew on a heavy fire from the enemy's lines and floating batteries, but attended with no other effect than the loss of one killed by a shot from the enemy's lines. In the mean time we are on both sides continuing our works, but there has been no other movement than what I have noticed above. I shall endeavour to give a regular and particular account of all transactions as they occur, which you will please to lay before the honourable Congress.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

The Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 11, 1775.

(Parole, Guilford.)

(Countersign, Hartford.)

The Court-Martial, of which Colonel Prescott was President, is dissolved. A General Court-Martial to be assembled at Cambridge as soon as possible, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them. All evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

The General understanding there is a bad custom prevailing, of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers absenting themselves from guard, under pretence of going for provisions; it is therefore ordered, that all officers and soldiers bring their provision to the guard they mount, and on no pretence quit their guard until it is regularly dismissed.

Notwithstanding the orders of the Provincial Congress, some persons are so daring as to supply the soldiers with immoderate quantities of rum, and other spirituous liquors: any sutler, tavern-keeper, or licensed innholder, who shall presume, after the date of this order, to sell any non-commissioned officer or soldier any spirituous liquor whatsoever, without an order in writing from the Captain of the company to which such non-commissioned officer and soldier belongs, he or they so offending, may expect to be severely punished.

Lieut. Colonel Ward, President of the Court-Martial.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 12, 1775.

(Parole, Falmouth.)

(Countersign, Worcester.)

The Adjutant-General will deliver, at orderly time, a certain number of printed returns to the Adjutant of each Regiment, so that no excuse for the future can be admitted for not making regular and exact returns when demanded, as it is only filling up the blanks with the numbers proper to be placed in them. The Commander-in-Chief will not, for the future, admit of any palliative for making a false return, and is resolved to bring any officer, of what rank soever, to a Court-Martial, who is found delinquent.

When any trumpeter or flag of truce is sent from Boston, or any post occupied by the enemy, they are to be stopped by the first sentry they are permitted to approach, who is to call for the sergeant of the guard, who will conduct them to the officer of his guard, and such trumpeter or flag of truce is not to be allowed to stir one step beyond that guard. The officer commanding the guard will send any letters or messages, brought from the enemy, immediately to the commander-in-chief, and no other person.

A General Court-Martial of the line to sit at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, to try Colonel Scammon, of the Massachusetts Forces, accused of "backwardness in the execution of his duty in the late action upon Bunker's Hill." The Adjutant of Col. Scammon's Regiment to warn all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

Colonel Nixon, President of above Court.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 13, 1775.

(Parole, Georgia.)

(Countersign, Huntingdon.)

As the Army will be forthwith formed into brigades, the Adjutant-General will, at orderly time this day, deliver to the Adjutant of each Regiment a number of printed returns, one of which must be immediately filled up and signed by the commanding officer of each Regiment, and sent as soon as possible to the Adjutant-General, by the Adjutant of each Regiment; on the back of the return it will be necessary to mention where and in what manner the Regiment is at present posted.

The commanding officer at Chelsea is, as soon as possible after the receipt of this order, to direct all the cattle upon Pullein Point, Shirley Point, and the intermediate space between Powderhorn Hill and the sea, to be driven off; and it is recommended to the Commissary-General to endeavour to agree with the owners of the said cattle, and to purchase them for the use of the Army.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 14, 1775.

(Parole, Halifax.)

(Countersign, Inverness.)

As the health of an Army principally depends upon cleanliness, it is recommended in the strongest manner to the commanding officer of corps, posts, and detachments, to be strictly diligent in ordering the necessaries to be filled up once a week, and new ones dug; the streets of the encampments and lines to be swept daily, and all offal and carrion, near the camp, to be immediately buried. The officers commanding in barracks or quarters to be answerable that they are swept every morning, and all filth and dirt removed from about the houses. Next to cleanliness, nothing is more conducive to a soldier's health than dressing his provisions in a decent and proper manner. The officers commanding companies should therefore daily inspect the camp kitchens, and see the men dress their food in a wholesome way.

The commanding officers in those parts of the lines and redoubts where the pikes are placed, will order the Quartermasters of corps to see the pikes greased twice a week; they are to be answerable also that the pikes are kept clean, and always ready and fit for service.

The General, observing great remissness and neglect in the several guards in and about the camp, orders the officer commanding any guard, to turn out his guard immediately upon the near approach of the Commander-in-Chief, or any of the General Officers; and, upon passing the guard, the Commander-in-Chief is to be received with rested arms, the officer to salute, and the drums to beat a march; the Majors-General with rested arms, the officer to salute, and the drums to beat two ruffles; the Brigadiers-General with rested arms, the officer to salute, and the drums to beat one ruffle. There being something awkward as well as improper in the General Officers being stopped at the outposts, asked for passes by the sentries, and obliged often to send for the officer of the guard (who it sometimes happens is as much unacquainted with the persons of the Generals as the private men) before they can pass in or out, it is recommended to both officers and men, to make themselves acquainted with the persons of all the officers in general command; and in the mean time, to prevent mistakes, the General Officers and their Aids-de-Camp will be distinguished in the following manner: the Commander-in-Chief by a light blue ribband, worn across his breast, between his coat and waistcoat; the Majors and Brigadiers-General by a pink ribband, worn in like manner; the Aids-de-Camp by a green ribband.

The Court-Martial, of which Col. Ward is President, is dissolved.

Daniel Carmile, soldier in Colonel Patterson's Regiment, tried for "disobedience of orders, for re-enlisting and taking advance money twice over, and for drunkenness," is found guilty of the several charges, and ordered to be whipt on the bare back with thirty-nine lashes, and discharged from the Army. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed to-morrow morning, at the head of the Regiment he belongs to.

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL ON COLONEL JAMES SCAMMONS.

General Court-Martial held July 13, 1775, Col. Nixon, President; with one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, and ten Captains. William Tudor, Judge Advocate.

The Court being duly sworn, proceeded to the trial of Colonel Scammons of the Massachusetts Forces, who was brought before the Court, and accused of disobedience to orders, and backwardness in the execution of his duty, in the late action on Bunker's Hill at Charlestown, on the 17th of June last. The prisoner being arraigned on the above complaint, pleads not guilty. The Court postponed the examination of the witnesses to Friday, 14th of July, at eight of the o'clock, to which time the Court was adjourned.

Friday, July 14, 1775.
The Court being met according to adjournment; present all the members as yesterday. Lieutenant James Donnell deposed: about noon we marched to Lechmere's Point, where we remained one quarter of an hour. Going from the point, Charlestown was set on fire. Whilst at the point, General Whitcomb ordered Colonel Scammons to march to the hill. The deponent understood the hill meant was Bunker's Hill. Colonel Scammons then marched to a small hill, about a mile distant from Bunker's Hill. Col. Scammons sent two Sergeants to Bunker's Hill, to know if his Regiment was wanted. We remained on the small hill three-quarters of an hour, during all which time there was a smart fire on Bunker's Hill, from small-arms and cannon. After three quarters of an hour we marched to the hither edge of Bunker's Hill, where the shot flew very thick. Before we got to the top of the hill, Colonel Scammons ordered a retreat; immediately there was a general retreat of our Regiment. Every one made the best of his way off. We were no time that day near enough to engage the enemy. The witness does not know any distinction between Bunker's and Brewer's Hill.

Ensign Joshua Trafton deposed: about two of the clock in the afternoon we marched from Cambridge to Lechmere's Point, where we found General Whitcomb, who expressed much surprise at finding Colonel Scammons take post there. We remained on the point fifteen minutes, and then marched to a small hill below Prospect Hill. We continued on the small hill about half an hour or more; during which time Colonel Scammons sent two Sergeants to Bunker's Hill, to know if his Regiment was wanted. We took the nearest road to Bunker's Hill, as I suppose, and before we got to the top of the hill, the Colonel ordered a retreat. I cannot say whether the breastwork was forced or not at this time. We saw many men retreating down the hill, who said they had spent all their ammunition; some told us that the enemy had retreated, and begged us to push on. As we turned off the small hill, a Regiment marched up towards Bunker's Hill. As we marched from Cambridge we heard the Regulars were landing at Lechmere's Point, and at Charlestown. Colonel Scammons made the greatest despatch from the small hill to Bunker's Hill. I saw no other instance of backwardness in Colonel Scammons, except his long stay at the small hill, which appeared to me unnecessary. As we retreated, a number of men advanced up in an irregular manner.

Ensign Nathan Lord deposed: we were one quarter of an hour near Lechmere's Point; we then marched to a small hill below Prospect Hill, where we tarried a quarter of an hour, then marched to Bunker's Hill the nearest way, and with as much despatch as we could go. We stayed twenty minutes on the small hill, whilst the fire continued on the further part of Bunker's Hill; we got to the top of Bunker's Hill; after which General Putnam came up, and ordered the Regiment to advance within hearing of Colonel Scammons; part of the Regiment then advanced, but the deponent does not know if Colonel Scammons was with them. I heard several persons, whom I took to be officers, order a retreat before Colonel Scammons did. After we got over Charlestown Neck, going up Bunker's Hill, Col. Scammons cried, Come, my Yorkshire lads, now let us shew our bravery. The deponent does not know a distinction between Bunker's Hill and Brewer's Hill.

Major Daniel Wood deposed: we marched from near Lechmere's Point, to a small hill, nearly opposite to Prospect Hill, where we remained near three-quarters of an hour; during most of the time we were on that hill, there was a smart fire on what I take to be the easterly part of Bunker's Hill.

Captain Ebenezer Sullivan deposed and said: we continued on the small hill half an hour; some considerable part of the time we were there there was a very heavy fire from the further part of the hill in Charlestown. After we retreated, Colonel Scammons encouraged the men to advance. The Regiment was not near enough to engage the enemy.

Captain Philip Hubbard deposed: the reason of our going to Lechmere's Point was, because we met expresses, who told us the Regulars were landing at that place; when we got to Lechmere's Point, General Whitcomb told Col. Scammons he had better go and watch the floating batteries, and then marched to the small hill, where we stayed half an hour. As soon as Colonel Scammons discovered Charlestown meeting-house on fire, he marched the Regiment, with all possible despatch, towards Bunker's Hill. We met great numbers retreating down. The confusion was so great before we got to the top of the hill, it was impossible to force. I saw nothing of irresolution or backwardness in Colonel Scammons any time of the day.

Lieutenant Cuzons deposed: that at Lechmere's Point, General Whitcomb told Colonel Scammons he had better go to that hill, meaning, as the deponent took it, the small hill which they marched to, and watch the motions of the floating batteries. As soon as Colonel Scammons heard the firing of the small-arms at the hill in Charlestown, he said he would stay there no longer, and ordered the Regiment to march for Bunker's Hill, which he did. I know nothing of Colonel Scammons's behaviour at Bunker's Hill.

Lieutenant Morgan Lewis deposed and said: I saw nothing of cowardice or backwardness in Colonel Scammons that day.

Lieutenant Thomas Cutts in substance as Lieut. Lewis. Sergeant Amaziah Goodwin agrees with Lieut. Cutts.

Sergeant Samuel Goodale deposed: that General Whitcomb ordered Colonel Scammons from Lechmere's Point, to take possession of the small hill, and watch the motions of the floating batteries. I was sent by Colonel Scammons to General Putnam, to know if his Regiment was wanted; and before I got back, Colonel Scammons was upon his march towards Bunker's Hill. I saw Colonel Scammons two thirds of the way up the hill, but know nothing of his conduct there.

John Littlefield deposed: that as we marched down, we heard the Regulars were landing at Lechmere's Point. I know nothing of Colonel Scammons's behaviour.

Jonathan Love deposed and said: when we were upon Bunker's Hill, an officer ordered us to retreat, as the enemy had forced the intrenchment; after which Colonel Scammons ordered us to retreat.

Joseph Parson, drummer, deposed and said: we were three-quarters of an hour on the little round hill, and the firing of the small-arms lasted half an hour, when we marched off towards Bunker's Hill. I know nothing of Colonel Scammons's behaviour at Bunker's Hill.

The Court then called on Colonel Scammons to make his defence; upon which the following evidence was produced:

Captain Jeremiah Hill deposed and said: that down by the bridge near Lechmere's Point, we met General Whitcomb, who told Colonel Scammons that he was sufficient to guard that point, and told Col. Scammons he had better go round to the little hill and watch their motions there. We accordingly went and stayed there half an hour.

Colonel John Whitcomb, who is styled by the foregoing deponents General, deposed and said: I met Colonel Scammons with his Regiment about fifty rods from Lechmere's Point; I asked him what brought him there; he replied by asking me where he should go; I told him where he could do the most service. I am positive I never ordered him to the little hill, if my memory serves me, because men could be of no service at such a place except in the night.

The Court then adjourned till Saturday morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, July 15, A. M.

The Court met according to adjournment. Col. Scammons begged liberty to produce the four next witnesses, who were admitted and sworn accordingly.

Henry Fess, drummer, deposed: that as we marched down Cambridge road, we met two men on horseback, who told us the Regulars were landing at Lechmere's Point. We then marched very fast towards the point, where we met General Whitcomb, who told Colonel Scammons to go round to the hill, which I understood to mean the little round hill we marched to. I was within ten feet of General Whitcomb, when these orders were given.

Ichabod Smith deposed and said: I was about ten feet from General Whitcomb, at Lechmere's Point, when I heard him desire Colonel Scammons to march round, and observe the motion of the floating batteries which lay near the little hill. We marched to the little hill and continued there about twenty minutes. As soon as Colonel Scammons found out where the firing of the small-arms was he immediately marched the Regiment towards Bunker's Hill, with the utmost despatch.

Samuel Hubbard deposed and said: I was within ten feet of General Whitcomb, and heard him order Colonel Scammons to go to the hill. But the deponent does not know what hill. I heard Colonel Scammons ask the General if he could go across the marsh, which was the nearest way to the little hill. General Whitcomb replied, that he could not, but must go up and round by the road. Frethy Spencer agreed with Hubbard exactly, being close to him during the conversation between General Whitcomb and Colonel Scammons.

Adjutant Marsden was sworn at the desire of the complainants, and deposed, that we were three-quarters of an hour on the little hill, and continued about twenty minutes after we heard of this firing on the hill in Charlestown. I went half way up Bunker's Hill with Colonel Scammons, when I left him and went to the breastwork, where I got before the enemy forced it; the confusion was so great when we got to Bunker's Hill we could not form the Regiment.

The prisoner then made a few remarks on the evidence, and withdrew. The Court being cleared, entered upon the examination of the evidence collectively, and after debate adjourned to Monday, 17th of July, eight o'clock, A. M.

July 17, 1775.

The Court being met according to adjournment, and resumed the consideration of the case of Colonel Scammons, and having duly weighed the allegations and proofs brought against the prisoner, with his defence and evidence, are of the opinion, that the said Colonel Scammons is not guilty of the charge brought against him.

A true copy of the Proceedings:

JOHN NIXON, President.

Attest: WILLIAM TUDOR, Judge Advocate.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp near New-York, July 15, 1775.

SIR: Having found by experience that the Troops under my command, from the situation of their encampment, are subjected to many difficulties, which render it next to impossible to maintain that good order and discipline which is entirely necessary in the regulation of an Army, my officers agree with me in sentiment, that it will be much for the benefit of the service to remove the Troops to a further distance from the Town. I have viewed a plat of ground belonging to Mr. Sickles, of Harlem, which I think very proper for an encampment, and which he is willing should be made use of for that purpose. I therefore desire you to take the opinion and advice of the Committee of Safety, and if they think proper, I shall be obliged to them if they appoint somebody to contract with Mr. Sickles for the place, and assist us with the wagons, carts, &c., that we may remove next Monday.

I am, Sir, with the greatest esteem, your very humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER, Major-General.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 20, 1775.]

Saratoga, July 15, 1775.

SIR: Late last night I received two letters, of which the enclosed are copies. The information contained in that marked No. 1. is so truly alarming, that although I should have been at Ticonderoga to-morrow, I think it more advisable to remain a day here, in which I may probably receive some farther accounts that will determine whether my presence may not be more necessary in Tryon County than at Ticonderoga, although it is much, very much wanted at the latter place. I lament that it is not in my power to give such aid as the unhappy people in Tryon County, who are friends to the cause of America, stand in need of. All I am able to do, and which I have done, is to order Captain Van Dyck's company, which is at Schenectady, and consists of about fifty new levied men, to march to the relief of these people; to furnish him and the inhabitants with the trifling quantity of three hundred pounds of powder, my whole stock at Albany; and to recommend to the Militia of Albany and Schenectady to march up, though I fear they have little or no ammunition. The powder ordered from Philadelphia is not yet arrived, nor that for which I despatched an officer from New-York to Connecticut. In this defenceless condition, should eight hundred Indians, or half the number, come down, and be joined by the Highlanders and others that are disaffected in Tryon County, they may with impunity not only march where they please through that or this County, but so effectually cut off all supplies from the Troops to the northward, that they must disperse or starve.

You will perceive, Sir, by the enclosed Return, what our strength is at Ticonderoga and Crown Point, without lines to defend themselves against an attack, for I cannot learn that the least shelter has been made by the Troops.

In such a distressing situation, it is extremely natural to wish that I had more men and ammunition, not only to oppose this threatened invasion, but to carry into execution your former orders. Perhaps the necessity which induced your order to let the Connecticut Troops remain in New-York no longer exists; if so, I could wish they were directed to join me without delay. You may be assured, Sir, that I shall exert every nerve to counteract the schemes meditated by the enemy, happy if I shall be able to give you a favourable account of our operations.

I am, Sir, with the most profound respect, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO GENERAL PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Albany Committee Chamber, July 14, 1775.

SIR: You have enclosed copy of a letter from the Committee of Tryon County to the Committees of Schenectady and Albany; the contents whereof are very alarming; and the more so as the people of that County are not provided with ammunition to defend themselves. We shall forward the letter to the Provincial Congress, and would beg leave to suggest to you, whether it will not be advisable to let the company of Captain Van Dyck (which we find you have ordered up to Lake George) march up the Mohawk River, towards their relief. And as that company has no ammunition, and we have here about three hundred weight, whether you will think it proper to furnish them from the store here, and whether you will not think it necessary to send up some of the remainder to furnish the inhabitants.

As it is not possible to know how far this may be a fact, we would think it advisable to take some steps so as to keep up the spirits of the people of Tryon County.

In answer to your letter of yesterday we inform you, that we shall endeavour to get the carpenters as soon as possible. We are, Sir, your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN.

TRYON COUNTY COMMITTEE TO THE COMMITTEES OF SCHENECTADY AND ALBANY.

Canajoharie, July 13, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Ebenezer Cox informed this Board that Mr. Peter S. Deygert told this informant that he was informed by a person who we have reason to think has it from good authority, that Col. Johnson was ready with eight or nine hundred Indians to make an invasion of this County; that the same Indians were to be under the command of Joseph Brandt and Walter Butler; and that they were to fall on the inhabitants below the Little Falls, in order to divide the people in two parts; and were to march yesterday or the day before.

Captain Jacob Klock informed this Board, that this morning about an hour before day, three Indians of Fort Hunter came to his house from Oswego, in their way home; that he was informed by a free negro man, a servant of him, that they each had a bag of powder on their horses; that they stayed about an hour, and then went off in great haste. From these and other concomitant circumstances, we have but too much reason to think it is true, and that all our enemies in this country will appear in arms against us, as soon as the Indians are nigh to us, which, from the above information, we must expect in a few days.

We have sent off a party of people by way of a scout, to find out, if possible, the route of the Indians, and to give us early intelligence.

Our ammunition is so scant, that we cannot furnish three hundred men so as to be able to make a stand against so great a number. In these deplorable circumstances, we look up to you for assistance, both in men and ammunition, to save this country from slaughter and desolation, which we beg you will not be backward to afford us as soon as possible.

We have ordered some of our companies up towards the Little Falls, who are to keep scouting parties out, and we intend to keep sitting until such time as we can be convinced of our safety.

This is the more alarming to us, as we shall be obliged in a few days to begin with our harvests; men are therefore absolutely necessary.

We beg of you to forward this by express to Albany, and copies from there to the Provincial Congress and to General Schuyler. Mr. Deygert was obliged to promise not to disclose the person's name who informed him of the above; but be assured that the person is well acquainted with the Indians, and therefore, if found out, is in great danger.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servants. By order, CHRISTOPHER P. YATES.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, July 15, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Since I did myself the honour to write your Excellency from New-York, nothing very material occurred until yesterday, when I received the enclosed letters. The accounts contained in that marked No. 1, are truly alarming, in the present defenceless state of the Counties of Tryon and Albany, and especially as the assistance I can afford them, either of men or money, is next to nothing, the few troops at Ticonderoga, &c., being at too great a distance, and not more than sufficient to guard the posts they occupy. I should have been at Ticonderoga this day, had not the information from Tryon County arrived, which may make my presence there absolutely necessary if it should be confirmed. I therefore propose remaining here until to-morrow, when I hope to be farther informed. I wish I may be able to proceed to Ticonderoga, as I am very much wanted there, the greatest confusion having taken place in the controversy between the officers claiming command in that quarter. Some have taken the liberty to disband troops; others refused to serve unless this or that particular person commanded; the sloop is left without either captain or pilot, both of which are dismissed or come away; much provision wasted or embezzled, and on the 7th instant only one barrel of flour at Ticonderoga. I shall have an Augean stable to cleanse there.

I do myself the honour to enclose a return of the forces in the Colony. It is doubtless imperfect, as I have been under a necessity of forming it out of returns which were evidently so. I hope soon to send you a more complete one.

Be assured, my General, that I shall use my best endeavours to establish order and discipline in the troops under my command. I wish I could add that I had a prospect of much success in that way. It is extremely difficult to introduce a proper subordination amongst a people where so little distinction is kept up.

Our accounts of the disposition of the Canadians and Canada Indians continue to be favourable, though the intelligence is not very authentic.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c. &c. &c.

TRYON COUNTY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Tryon County, July 15, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The persons appointed by your Congress to be officers to a company to be raised in this County, having declined, and returned their warrants to this Committee, we beg leave to recommend Christopher P. Yates to be Captain, Andrew Finck, Jr., and John Keyser, Jr., to be Lieutenants of the said company, who have accepted of the same, and by the request of this Committee have begun to enlist their men. Permit us to observe, that they are well affected to American liberty, and are competent to the task. We therefore beg that you will approve of them, and send them new warrants.

Your very humble servants. By order of the Committee,

NICHOLAS HERKIMER,

Chairman pro tempore.

To the Provincial Congress of New-York.

NEWBURY, GLOUCESTER COUNTY, COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Newbury, New-York Province, July 15, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 31st of May I did not receive until the 14th instant, which was broke open and the General Association taken out. We have formed a County Committee, as also one in each Town and Precinct; also, we have chose Colonel Bayley to represent us in the Congress. The County seems to be very well united, and firm to one another, and also in the cause of liberty; and I make no doubt but they will cheerfully join in whatever measures and directions the honourable Congress may point out from time to time.

I am, Sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

JOHN TAPLIN.

July 1, 1775.—A true Return, made from the Returns of the Officers commanding the several Corps above mentioned. PHILIP SCHUYLER.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read September 13, 1775.]

Saratoga, July 16, 1775.

SIR: At three o'clock this morning I was favoured with a letter from the Committee at Albany, of which the enclosed is a copy; as also with two other papers, copies of which I do myself the honour herewith to send you, and which have in some measure removed my apprehensions for the people of Tryon County. It would, however, be imprudent to rely with too much confidence either on Colonel Johnson's declarations or those of the Indians, and have therefore recommended that scouts should be continually kept out to prevent a surprise, and that early intelligence may be given to such places from whence they may receive relief.

I shall set out in a few minutes for Ticonderoga, from whence I shall do myself the honour to write you, and make the returns agreeable to the resolutions of Congress.

I am, Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Albany Committee Chamber, July 15, 1775.

SIR: We received yours dated last night at three quarters after eleven o'clock, with the orders to Captain Van Dyck enclosed.

We this morning examined Mr. Garret Roseboom, who lately left Montreal and came round by Oswego, where Colonel Guy Johnson gave a letter to Nicholas Stevens, (from Schenectady, who came in company with him,) directed to the President of the Provincial Congress, and told him the Committee of Albany might open it if they pleased; which we have presumed to do, copy whereof we enclose you, together with a copy of Mr. Roseboom's examination. We now judge from the whole that it will be most advisable not to send Van Dyck's company forward, until we have further information, as we would not choose (if we can avoid it) to give any cause of jealousy to the Indians, as they have signified their desire that we should not send troops up. We have therefore desired the Committee of Schenectady to keep that company in readiness on a minute's warning; and we have sent one quarter cask of powder to be distributed among that company. We have also sent up six quarter casks more to the Committee of Tryon County. We should have sent the remainder, one hundred and twenty-five pounds, but for the hint in the examination of Roseboom.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants. By order of the Committee,
ABRAHAM YATES, Jr., Chairman.

COLONEL GUY JOHNSON TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ontario, July 8, 1775.

SIR: Though I received your letter from the Provincial Congress several days ago, I had not a good opportunity to answer it till now. I suppose, however, this will reach you safe, notwithstanding all the rest of my correspondence is interrupted by ignorant impertinents.

As to the endeavour you speak of, to reconcile the unhappy differences between the Parent State and these Colonies, be assured I ardently wish to see them. As yet, I am sorry to say, I have not been able to discover any attempt of that kind, but that of the Assembly's, the only true legal representatives of the people; and as to the individuals who you say officiously interrupt, in my quarter, the mode and measures you think necessary for these salutary purposes, I am really a stranger to them. If you mean myself, you must have been grossly imposed on. I once, indeed, went with reluctance, at the request of several of the principal inhabitants, to one of the people's meetings, which I found had been called by an itinerant New-England leather-dresser, and conducted by others, if possible, more contemptible. I had, therefore, little inclination to revisit such men, or attend to their absurdities. And although I did not incline to think that your gentlemen had formed any designs against me, yet it is most certain that such designs were formed. Of this, I received a clear account by express from a friend near Albany, which was soon corroborated by letters from other quarters, particularly one from a gentleman of the Committee at Philadelphia, a Captain in your service, who was pretty circumstantial; and since, I have had the like from many others. I have likewise found that mean instruments were officially employed to disturb the minds of the Indians; to interrupt the ordinary discharge of my duties; and prevent their receiving messages they had long since expected from me.

To enter into a minute detail of all the falsehoods propagated, and all the obstructions I met with, though it could not fail astonishing any gentleman disposed to discountenance them, would far exceed the limits of a letter, or the time I have to spare, as I am now finishing my Congress entirely to my satisfaction, with 1,348 warriors, who came hither to the only place where they can transact business or receive favours without interruption, and who are much dissatisfied at finding that the goods, which I was necessitated to send for to Montreal, were obliged to be ordered back by the merchant, to prevent his being insulted or his property invaded by the mistaken populace; that their ammunition was stopped at Albany; the persons on this communication employed in purchasing provisions for the Congress insulted; and all my letters, as well as even some trifling articles for the use of my own table, stopped. And this moment the Mayor of Albany assured me, that he was the other day aroused out of his bed at a certain Mr. Thompson's, above the German Flats, by one Hirkema and fifteen others, who pursued him to search for any things he might have for me.

You may be assured, Sir, that this is far from being agreeable to the Indians; that it might have produced very disagreeable consequences long since, had not compassion for a deluded people taken place of every other consideration; and that the impotent endeavours of a Missionary (who has forfeited his honour pledged to me) with part of one of the tribes, is a circumstance that, however trifling, increased their resentment. I should be much obliged by your promises of discountenancing any attempts against myself, &c., did they not appear to be made on conditions of compliance with Continental or Provincial Congresses, or even Committees formed, or to be formed, many of whose resolves may neither consist with my conscience, duty, or loyalty.

I trust I shall always manifest more humanity than to promote the destruction of the innocent inhabitants of a Colony to which I have been always warmly attached, a declaration that must appear perfectly suitable to the character of a man of honour and principle, who can on no account neglect those duties that are consistent therewith, however they may differ from sentiments now adopted in so many parts of America.

I sincerely wish a speedy termination to the present troubles; and I am, Sir, your most obedient and humble servant,
G. JOHNSON.

P. S. I shall have occasion to meet the Indians of my Department in different quarters this season.

The Examination of GARRET ROSEBOOM, of the City of ALBANY, before the Sub-Committee of the said City and County of ALBANY, the 15th day of JULY, 1775.

Says that he left Montreal on or about the 26th June last. That in Canada the utmost means were used to induce the Indians to side with the Regulars, especially by Mr. St. Luke Le Corne; but that amongst the Indians where this examinant has been, particularly Canusadaga, Esquasua, Oswegatie, and Caughnawagas, they decline taking up the hatchet against the Bostonians, (a term by which the general opposition is distinguished.)

That the Caughnawagas particularly, are active in preventing the incursions of the other Indian nations, for which purpose they have stationed about a dozen of their tribe at St. John's with horses, with directions that if their endeavours should prove ineffectual, to give immediate notice to the tribe, who in that case are resolved to prevent them by force.

That while this examinant was at Montreal, he saw about twenty-two Indians of the Messesagoes tribe, who were in their war-dress and accoutrements, set off to St. John's on a scalping party towards the forts on the Lakes in our possession; but that this examinant believes they will be stopped by the means above mentioned.

That this examinant on his arrival at Oswego, about eight days ago, found Colonel Guy Johnson there, who had with him about three hundred Indians, and about five hundred squaws and children.

That this examinant was present at a Congress he held with the Indians, but does not know the subject of their deliberations; but that he afterwards understood from those Indians, that the communication on the Mohawk River was to remain open. That on the day when this examinant left Oswego, the Indians were to receive his presents, except the rum, which was to be delivered them the next day at the Oswego Falls, to each nation or tribe one barrel. That from there Guy Johnson was to proceed to Oswegatie. Some of them were to go with him from each tribe, and the rest to return home. That this examinant heard before he came to Oswego, that there was to be a General Congress at Oswegatie, with the Canadian Indians.

That the Indians at Oswego assured this examinant, that they did not intend to fight against us; but that, considering the fickleness of their disposition, and probably the over persuasion of our enemies, no great dependance can be made on their assurances.

That endeavours were used in Canada, to enlist men in the service of the Crown; but that the Canadians were extremely averse to enter into the service. That a report prevailed there that Governour Carleton had threatened to fire the City, in case the merchants and others did not join.

That he has seen a few stragglers, and of the lowest class of the people, who were enlisted. That Monsieur St. Luke has proposed as an expedient to the Governour to hang half a dozen, which would intimidate the survivors into a compliance. That he had been informed there, that they were busy in building batteaus at St. John's, for the purpose of transporting troops across the Lake, to attack the possessions at Crown Point and Ticonderoga.

A true copy from the minutes:

JOHN BAY, Secretary.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Saratoga, July 16, 1775.

I did myself the honour to write you from Albany on the 12th, urging the sending the troops to join me with all despatch. Every intelligence I receive, evinces the necessity of strengthening the garrisons of Ticonderoga and Crown Point. The fatal consequences that would follow, should we be obliged to abandon those places, are too glaringly evident to need illustration. Let me, therefore, again entreat you to issue orders to every corps of your troops, in whatever part of the Colony they may be, to march without delay; and be pleased, Sir, to forward the tents for those already at the forts. I again beg leave to remind you, that the powder from Philadelphia is not yet come to hand.

I am, Sir, most respectfully, your obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Please to forward the enclosed.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., President of the New-York Congress.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BRAINTREE, MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, DATED JULY 16, 1775.

I am much surprised that you have not been more accurately informed of what passes in the camps. As to intelligence from Boston, it is but seldom that we are able to collect any that may be relied on, and to repeat the vague flying rumours would be endless. I heard yesterday, by one Mr. Rolston, a goldsmith, who got out from Boston in a fishing schooner, that their distress increases upon them fast; their beef is spent, their malt and cider all gone; all the fresh provisions they can procure they are obliged to give to the sick and wounded; that thirteen of our men, who were in jail and wounded at Charlestown, are dead; that no man dared to be seen talking to his friend in the street; that they are obliged to be within every evening at ten o'clock, according to martial law, nor can any inhabitant walk the street after that time without a pass from General Gage; that General Gage has ordered all the molasses to be distilled into rum for the soldiers; that he has taken away all licenses for selling of liquors, and given them to his creatures; that he has issued an order that no one else shall sell under a penalty of ten Pounds; that the spirit which prevails among the soldiers is that of malice and revenge; that there is no true courage to be observed among them; that their duty is hard, always holding themselves in readiness for an attack, which they are continually in fear of; that Doctor Elliot was not on board of a man-of-war, as was reported; that Mr. Lovell and Mr. Leach, with many others, are certainly in jail; that last week a poor milch cow was killed in Town and sold for a shilling sterling a pound; that the transports from Ireland and New-York arrived last week, but every additional man adds to their distress.

MEETING OF GUILD OF MERCHANTS, DUBLIN.

At Guildhall, Dublin, Ireland, the 17th of July, 1775, being Quarter-Day of the Guild of Merchants of the said City, the following Resolutions were agreed to, viz:

Resolved unanimously, That the sincere thanks of this Guild be presented to the Right Honourable the Earl of Effingham, in testimony of our approbation of his publick conduct, particularly exemplified in his refusing to draw that sword which has been employed to the honour of his Country, against the lives and liberties of his fellow-subjects in America, and honestly and spiritedly resigning a commission which he could no longer hold consistent with the principles of a true Englishman, or of a real friend to the interest of Britain.

Resolved, That the sincere thanks of the Guild be presented to the Right Honourable John Wilkes, Lord Mayor of the City of London, for the essential services he has rendered his King and Country, by his strenuous efforts in the cause of freedom, and for his able, spirited, and judicious defence of the right of the People to petition the Throne.

There was to the last Resolution a single negative, given by a Scotchman who has an employment in our Stamp Office.

Resolved unanimously, That an address of thanks from the Guild be presented to the several Peers who (in support of our Constitution, and in opposition to a weak and wicked Administration) protested against the American Restraining Bills.

And the following gentlemen were appointed, with the Master and Wardens, a Committee to prepare the same, viz: J. Napper Tandy, Henry Howison, Sir E. Newenham, John Peree, Samuel Gamble, Samuel Stephens, Hugh Crothers.

Who prepared the following:

We, the Masters, Wardens, and Brethren of the Guild of Merchants of the City of Dublin, in Common-Hall assembled, with the most unfeigned respect, beg leave to offer your Lordships the just tribute of our thanks for your noble and spirited, though hitherto ineffectual exertions in the cause of liberty and of your Country, fully evinced in your opposition to the oppressive and unconstitutional proceedings of a corrupt Administration.

With equal grief and indignation we have for years beheld repeated innovations on the free Constitution of these Realms, and daily invasions of the dearest rights and immunities of the subject. We have seen with astonishment Popery established by law in one, and encouraged in every part of the Empire, in the reign of a Protestant Prince, and despotism and arbitrary power promoted by every insidious machination and open violence by the servants of the Crown, in the reign of a Monarch who, from the Throne, declared, he gloried in being a Briton born, and whose family was called to the Throne of these Kingdoms to protect the Protestant Religion, and preserve that Constitution inviolate for which our ancestors so freely bled, and for the invading of which a tyrant was expelled the Throne.

But while we contemplate with horror the universal ruin and devastation in which the Empire is nearly involved by the wicked devices of evil men, we with pleasure survey the steady, incorruptible, and patriotick virtues which adorn you and shield us; while we boast of such a noble band of patriots, while we see united in the cause of freedom such a number of the true hereditary guardians of liberty, and of the principles of the glorious Revolution, we cannot, we will not despair of seeing once more the valuable Constitution of these Countries restored to its primitive purity.

Permit us, therefore, to offer your Lordship our warmest, our most grateful acknowledgments, as Protestants, for your steady opposition to the establishment of Popery and slavery in Canada; as freemen, for your manly and spirited opposition to the several Restraining Bills, and your noble efforts in the support of American liberty, and in the cause of our suffering and much oppressed brethren and fellow-subjects there; and we have the fullest reliance on your steady perseverance in the same principles which have so strongly endeared you, not only to us, but to every real friend of the British Empire and its constituents.

In testimony whereof, we have caused the seal of our Corporation to be hereunto affixed, this 17th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five.

[L. S.]

Midsummer Assembly, July 21, 1775.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Sheriffs and Commons be presented to Lord Effingham, for having chosen gloriously to resign his commission rather than imbrue his hands in the blood of his innocent and oppressed fellow-subjects.

Which being enclosed to his Lordship by the proper officer, the following answer was received:

"Sir: I have been favoured with your letter of the 21st of July last, enclosing a copy of a resolution of the Sheriffs and Commons of the City of Dublin.

"Next to the testimony of a man's own conscience, is, in my opinion, his greatest happiness to have the approbation of the wise and honest among his fellow-subjects.

"The former of these can, I think, be no other way enjoyed, than by a strict adherence to those principles which, at the Revolution, achieved our civil and religious liberties; and it is easy, Sir, for you to conceive, but beyond my abilities to express, what I felt at my conduct's being judged by so independent and respectable an assembly as the Sheriffs and Commons of the City of Dublin deserving of the latter.

"I am, with truth and respect, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

EFFINGHAM.

"The Holmes, August 14, 1775.

"To Alfred Howard, Esquire, Dublin."

CHARLES COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Charles County, on Monday, the 17th of July, 1775, in Port-Tobacco, Captain George Dent, Chairman, and J. Gwinn, Clerk:

Resolved, That this Committee will admit no Certificates respecting any Goods which may hereafter be imported into any part of this County, unless the same are attested under the hands, at least, of five of the Committee of the neighbourhood or place from whence they are immediately exported, and that this Resolve be immediately published in the Maryland Gazette.

Signed by order:

J. GWINN, Clerk.

JOHN HANCOCK, PRESIDENT, TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 17, 1775.

Sir: Major-General Schuyler having represented to the Congress the necessity of appointing a Deputy Adjutant-General, or a Brigade-Major, for the troops under his command, I am ordered to send you the following Resolve passed this day. I am, Sir, your obedient humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

P. S. I enclose you an authenticated commission to be filled up with the name of the gentleman appointed by your Congress. You will please to make a return to me of the person so appointed. The enclosed letter to General Schuyler I beg you will immediately forward to him by express.

"In Congress, July 17, 1775.

"Resolved, That the Convention of New-York be desired to recommend a proper person for a Deputy Adjutant-General, or a Brigade-Major, for the Army in the New-York Department.

"A true copy from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

Please to forward by the express to General Schuyler a number of the Articles of War. I forwarded them to New-York, directed to General Schuyler, but apprehend they did not meet him there, as he has wrote me for them from Albany. The commission referred to is sent by Mr. Lewis.

Hon. P. V. B. Livingston, Esq.

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 17, 1775.

Sir: As the appointment of a Brigade-Major to the Army under Major-General Schuyler's command is, by the Continental Congress, recommended to your choice, we beg leave to introduce Mr. Morgan Lewis to your favour for that appointment, being informed it would be agreeable to General Schuyler, who has promised him that office, with the approbation of your Convention.

We have the honour to be, Sir, your very humble servants,

PH. LIVINGSTON, HENRY WISNER, JOHN ALSOP, LEWIS MORRIS,
WILLIAM FLOYD, JOHN JAY.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., President of the Provincial Convention at New-York.

ELIZABETHTOWN (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE.

Elizabethtown, Monday, July 17, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We have this moment received from the Committee of Philadelphia four hogsheads, said to contain fifty-two quarter-casks of powder, which they direct to be conveyed to Dobbs's Ferry, there to be delivered to the order of your Committee. We are sorry to say, that this powder has been coming from Philadelphia since the first instant; this accidental delay makes the utmost despatch necessary, which we doubt not you will promote as far as is in your power. We are, Gentlemen, your most humble servants,

JONA. HAMPTON, Chairman.

To the Chairman of the Committee of the City of New-York.

P. S. The powder will be at Dobbs's Ferry by nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

ELIZABETHTOWN (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE.

Committee Chamber, Elizabethtown, July 17, 1775.

Resolved, That this Committee, for every hundred weight of Saltpetre made within this Town for the first three months after this day, will pay the sum of twenty Pounds, proclamation money of New-Jersey, on the delivery thereof to this Committee, and fifteen Pounds, of same currency, for the like quantity of Saltpetre, made and delivered as aforesaid, within the next three months thereafter.

The Chairman of this Committee having received a letter from Mr. Richard Lawrence, a Delegate of Richmond County for the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York, informing that the inhabitants of said County had, in general, signed the Association recommended by the Committee of New-York, this Committee are therefore of opinion that the inhabitants of said County be restored to their commercial privileges with the inhabitants of this Town. By order of the Committee:

JONATHAN HAMPTON, Chairman.

CIRCULAR TO COLONELS OF NEW-YORK REGIMENTS.

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, during the recess of the Provincial Congress,
New-York, July 17, 1775.

Sir: You are requested to prepare and lay before the Congress of this Colony, at New-York, a state of your Regiment, and of the number of men ready and fit for service in each company, with all possible despatch. You will also be pleased to inform the Congress when you expect your Regiment will be complete, and ready to take the field. We pray you to give all possible despatch in this business; the present circumstances admit of no delay. The sooner your answer and return can be received, the more acceptable it will be.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants. By order of the Committee.

JOHN LAMB TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, July 17, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: As several inconveniences will arise from the present arrangement respecting the artillery company which I am appointed to command, I must beg leave to point out the most material of them for your consideration, in order that they may be removed, if possible, as they will inevitably impede the publick service. Artillery companies, in every country, are always looked upon in a superior light to other foot companies; for which reason men of reputation, and such as are qualified for that department, do not incline to enlist in the battalions, from an apprehension (which I have not been able to remove by all the arguments in my power) that they will not be draughted into the artillery, and consequently will be obliged to serve under the command of the captain with whom they have enlisted; besides they think it a disgrace to appear in the ranks with such men as too often compose the companies of foot. If the artillery company is to be draughted from the battalions in the manner proposed, I must be constrained to choose them solely for their appearance and bodily strength, without having the least opportunity of knowing either their characters or principles, or whether they are qualified for the department in which they are to serve; although it is essentially necessary that I should have some knowledge of those circumstances previous to their joining the company. Another great inconvenience I conceive will arise, in regard to their clothing, if they are not to be draughted before the battalions are complete, as I must consequently have a number of men in different uniforms, it being more than probable that they will be draughted out of different battalions.

As there is no artillery companies in the service of Connecticut, it is the more necessary that ours should be immediately formed, in order that the men may be instructed in the several parts of their duty, and the necessary stores be prepared, that we may be ready to act, when and where the publick service may require.

For these reasons, and to obviate the inconveniences which I have pointed out, (especially as none of the battalions are near being completed,) I have thought proper to submit it to your better judgment, whether such an alteration in the arrangement should not be immediately made as will give me an opportunity of enlisting my own men, and forming the company as soon as possible. And as there is a distinction always held up between the artillery and companies of foot, I must beg leave to request that the clothing for the men may be better than that of the other companies, and that it may be blue with buff facings.

I am, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JOHN LAMB.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Province of New-York.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany Committee Chamber, July 17, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have four letters, three from Captain Edmunston to different persons in Europe, which we had appointed a Committee to peruse, who report that they judge it proper they should be sent open to the Provincial Congress for their inspection. The other is a letter from Colonel Guy Johnson, which we received with a verbal license to open it, which we have presumed to do, and have even taken upon us to give General Schuyler a copy thereof, which we hope you will put the best construction upon.

We are, Gentlemen, your very humble servants. By order of the Committee, ABRAHAM YATES, JR.
To the Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, July 17, 1775.

SIR: On the first instant I met the honourable Assembly of this Colony, to deliberate on the request and pressing reasons sent us from the Massachusetts, for an immediate augmentation of the troops from this Colony. Our Assembly agreed to augment with two Regiments, of seven hundred men each, who are now raising to join the Continental Army. It was wished that we could have had the advice and direction of the Congress, or your Excellency, before we took this step, but thought the present critical situation of our affairs would not admit the delay of obtaining it. Since your arrival at the camp before Boston, view and consideration of their situation and circumstances, shall gladly be advised, and shall attend your request for hastening and marching the men.

There are thirteen hundred and ninety-one barrels of flour come to the care of Colonel Frederick Huntington, at Norwich, for the use of the Army, which I have ordered forward. The busy season with the farmers renders its transportation difficult. Please to advise of the need of the hurry, and where it shall be ordered to be delivered.

Our Assembly supplied Major-Gen. Schuyler with fifteen thousand Pounds in cash, and forty half barrels of another necessary article. Accounts from the northward are favourable. The Brig Nancy Thomas, Davis master, which arrived at Stonington with molasses, is removed to Norwich; she hath on board eighteen or nineteen thousand gallons. The Committee of Inspection and Correspondence I trust will take proper care respecting both vessel and cargo.

The road by my door being the nearest for post-riding from Cambridge to Philadelphia, shall be obliged, whenever your Excellency has occasion to send to that City, if the rider may be directed this way, and to call on me for the convenience of my despatches I may have occasion to forward by him. Fessenden has passed this way more than once.

I am, with great esteem and regard, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, July 17, 1775.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the tenth instant, which came per Bennet. Per same hand I received a letter from Colonel Hinman, at Ticonderoga, in which he says, "There are many things which the Act of Assembly provides for the soldiers, which they never have as yet received, which occasions murmurings and discontent among them, and much weakens my authority." Copy of the Act of our Assembly has been forwarded some time ago to the Provincial Convention of New-York; our Commissary, Mr. Elisha Phelps, has also a copy. If New-York does not supply our Troops, as they have a right to expect, this Colony must fulfil their engagements themselves; pray your interposition in this matter.

I have received from Colonel Hinman and others, very favourable accounts of the disposition of the Canadians towards the general cause, and their desire that our Army might penetrate into their Province. Suppose you are fully acquainted with this intelligence, shall therefore only trouble you with some information I have received from Captain John Bigelow, a gentleman of Hartford, who was lately sent by our Assembly into Canada, as an escort to some ladies taken at Skenesborough, whom we thought proper to return to their friends in that Province. He is returned, and informs there are about three hundred and fifty of the King's Troops at St. John's, one hundred at Montreal, and forty at Chambly. Those at St. John's keep a good look out; have picketed in an acre or two of ground, in which they have some field-pieces not yet mounted. He understands there were a number of batteaus, and two floating batteries, building just below St. John's. The officers boasted to him the number of Canadians and Indians they were able to raise, but he says it is certain they are not sure of one man. Wheat is six and six pence, sterling money, per bushel, and is almost all purchased for the King's Troops at Boston and Canada. Was informed that the Canadians, almost to a man, were praying for our people to come into their country, or they must be obliged, for their own safety, to join the King's Troops, &c. He did not see more than six or seven Indians at St. John's. Nothing of importance has lately occurred at our camps near Boston. I am, &c.,

J. TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

Newport, Rhode-Island, July 20, 1775.

On Monday night, the seventeenth of July, two men belonging to the Swan, Captain Ayscough, being on shore, saw fit to attempt an escape from their old and detested habitation; their design, by the bye, was communicated to no individual of the Town. The next day, viz. the eighteenth, A. M., two or three of the ferry-boats which pass between Newport and Connecticut, were fired upon and brought to, an event so singular that two respectable members of the Committee waited upon Captain Ayscough to know the reason. He told them that two of his men, the night before, were sent on shore upon some errand and had not returned; added that he was confident the inhabitants knew where they were, and that they were detained by them purposely. The two gentlemen declared themselves ignorant of the matter, and believed the whole Town to be; however, to pacify Captain Ayscough, they assured him that they would summon the Committee together, inquire into the affair, &c., withal, desiring Captain Ayscough to write a letter to the Committee, stating his grievance; this he did, and they promised to wait on him with an answer in the afternoon. As the Captain's letter was rather in the threatening style, the Committee could not help inquiring what he meant thereby, and assured him in their reply, that they were not to be intimidated, and did not think themselves, by any means, accountable for the desertion of any of his men. Captain Ayscough read the letter with considerable composure, folded it up, and then gave it to Wallace, Captain of the Rose, Ayscough at this time being on board Wallace's ship. Captain Wallace immediately flew into a most terrible passion, threw the letter down in a violent fit of rage, damned the Committee, the Congress, &c., swore at Ayscough for writing to such a damned parcel of rebels, and declared that if he knew the two gentlemen, who were then present, to be of the Committee, they never should go ashore again. They endeavoured to pacify him, but in vain; he swore repeatedly, that if there was a God in Heaven, the Town should be destroyed before morning; that he was a King's officer and would not be insulted, &c. Hereupon the two gentlemen left the ship. A signal gun was instantly discharged, and the three pirates in the harbour, and their tender, immediately weighed anchor and came close in with the Town; their tomkins were taken out, the marines on board beat up to arms, and all the hostile preparations imaginable going forward against a defenceless seaport, consisting (exclusive of the men) of not less than six thousand women and children. About half past nine in the evening, a cannon was discharged from the Rose, when many really thought the firing on the Town was begun. Between the hours of ten and eleven, the same night, a packet arrived from Providence with seven or eight passengers; she was stopt, and a place appointed for her to near the Swan. The passengers were seized, made to tell all their names, and confined as prisoners, repeatedly styled rebels, with the most horrid oaths annexed; a guard with drawn swords kept over them during the night; the late infamous Proclamation of a truce-breaking Gage, was hung close by them, which they were fearful they would be compelled to sign, or else abide the consequence therein denounced. It is worthy of observation, that during this period the three Captains were together on board the Rose, playing cards, drinking, carousing, &c. About one or two o'clock next morning, viz. Wednesday, one of the Swan's men returned, and in order, it is supposed, to save himself from a flogging, as it was necessary for him to give some account of himself, he invented the following lie, and swore to it upon the holy evangelists, namely: "That the Rhode-Island rebels had taken him and his companion, and wanted that they should enlist among them to fight against the King, but that they refused; and because they did that, the rebels gagged them, and then carried them to Providence jail, but that he broke away, and travelled thirty miles to go on board again." The Captains of the pirates either believed this gross and inconsistent falsehood, or fain would make the inhabitants think so; accordingly it was taken down in writing, sent on shore, and satisfaction demanded, or the Town should certainly be laid in ashes that very day. Another cannon was now discharged, four ferry-boats and two wood sloops seized, quantities of tar, and other inflammatory combustible matter put into the same, in order to set on fire, and send into the wharves, as a more expeditious way of destroying the Town than by cannon only; the cannon, at the same time, were to be fired on every part of the Town; the Court-House, Doctor Stiles's Meeting-House, and the Printing Office, were first of all to feel the effects of this horrid plot. The most terrible parade was kept up by those low ministerial tools till near two o'clock, P. M., when two persons of undoubted veracity (farmers, within two or three miles of the Town,) went on board the Swan. One of these gentlemen assured the Captains of the three ships, that he saw the stragglers, for whose desertion such terrible confusion had ensued, in his corn-field on Tuesday morning, and described them; the other gentleman declared that he saw them on Tuesday afternoon, where he was making hay, and likewise described them, for they told these gentlemen how they had made their escape from the Swan, and were determined not to go back again. After fully proving that they knew the men, by pointing out the one who had returned, notwithstanding four others were first produced, in order to deceive them, they (viz. the two gentlemen,) came on shore, when all at once the boats and prisoners were dismissed, the ships weighed anchor, and stood up the river.

Let every honest American rise up in opposition to such inhuman, and, must we add, when speaking of Britons too, worse than savage cruelty. To prepare, after so hostile a manner, to destroy thousands of lives, and ruin vast estates, merely because two drunken wretches had fled from a ship under the command of a petty tyrant, is what will make a considerable figure in some future page, when our many trials are handed down to posterity by some able historian.

LANCASTER (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

Lancaster, Worcester County, July 17, 1775.

Whereas, Nahum Houghton being complained of as being an enemy to his Country, by officiating as an unwearied pedlar of that baneful herb, Tea, and otherwise rendering himself odious to the inhabitants of this Town; and notwithstanding being warned, he did not appear before the Committee that his political principles might be known: This, therefore, agreeable to a vote of said Town, is to caution all friends to the community to entirely shun his company, and have no manner of dealings or connections with him, except acts of common humanity.

JOHN PRESCOTT, Chairman.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, July 14, 1775.

The Deputy Secretary brought down a written Message from his Excellency, as follows, viz:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Assembly:

I find by your votes of the 13th of last month, that you have taken upon you to exclude three returned members, called by the King's writ, from sitting and voting in the House of Assembly, thereby depriving the electors of their privilege, and a whole County of any representation in the Legislature. You must be sensible that I cannot, consistent with my duty, pass by a measure so essentially infringing on His Majesty's prerogative and the rights of the people; and I do, therefore, recommend to you to rescind the vote for excluding the said three members from the House, that they may be entirely free to take their seats without interruption, according to the constant usage heretofore practised.

J. WENTWORTH.

Fort William and Mary, New-Hampshire, July 14, 1775.

Voted, That Captain Langdon, Colonel Bartlett, Doctor Thompson, and Meshech Weare, Esq., be a Committee to prepare an answer to his Excellency's Speech of this day.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Met according to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to prepare an Answer to his Excellency's Message of this day, reported, that they had prepared one; which was read, and is as follows, viz:

May it please your Excellency:

In answer to your Excellency's Message of this day, wherein you desire that this House would rescind their vote of the 13th of last month, respecting their dismissal of the three members for the County of Grafton, who were called by the King's writ only, without an act of Government for that purpose; we are sorry to find that your Excellency should intimate that our dismissing said members was depriving the electors of their privileges, as we did not apprehend that any one person in the English Empire could have had such an idea; and trust that the good people of the County of Grafton will not think that we have deprived them of any part of their rights or privileges, by our dismissing the said members; as it is very notorious that this and former Houses of Assembly have long wished that this Province might be more generally represented in a constitutional way, and have long endeavoured that an act of Government might be passed enabling the Governour to issue writs to such Towns to send members as might be provided for in said act, (as is the case in the other Governments on this Continent,) but have not been able to have such an act established, for what reasons your Excellency may know better than we do. As the Council are appointed for this Province by the Crown, we think it not only a cruel, but an arbitrary stretch of prerogative, for your Excellency to issue writs to such Towns as you think proper, to send Representatives without the concurrence of the other branches of the Legislature therein; for by that means the Representatives, as well as the Council, would in effect be chosen by the Crown. We cannot think that such an attempt was ever made in any other Government within the English Dominions. Upon the whole, this House have determined unanimously, as they look upon it as their undoubted right and privilege to regulate themselves, not to rescind their said vote.

We would also inform your Excellency that we have been expecting that you would order the Treasurer's accounts to be laid before the House, agreeable to your promise, that we might be thereby enabled to proceed in the ordinary business of the Government; but are sorry to find that your Excellency has ordered the Treasurer not to lay them before the House, as he informs us. We hope that you will direct that we may be furnished therewith as soon as possible, as you must be sensible that it is not only very expensive, but very disagreeable to us to be from our respective places of abode at this season of the year.

Which report of the Committee being considered,
Voted, That it be presented to his Excellency in answer to his Message to the House of this day.

Monday, July 17, 1775.

Some of the Members met, according to adjournment.

The Deputy Secretary, by his Excellency's direction, adjourned the General Assembly till to-morrow ten o'clock.

Tuesday, July 18, 1775.

Some of the Members being met, the Deputy Secretary brought down the following Message from his Excellency, viz:

Mr. Speaker and

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

In reply to your answer to my Message of yesterday, concerning your vote for excluding the three members returned for three Towns in the County of Grafton, by virtue of the King's writ, I would observe, that in the early state of New-Hampshire, when the Massachusetts-Bay exercised jurisdiction over the inhabitants, a commission was issued by King Charles the Second, appointing a President and Council to govern the Province, according to the methods and regulations specified in the said commission. This laid the foundation of the Constitution by which the Province hath since been governed; and the people, by their acceptance and acquiescence in the frame of Government then given them, bound themselves to maintain the same.

Among other things, the President and Council were authorized to issue writs for calling a General Assembly. It hath ever since been the invariable practice, as circumstances made it reasonable to extend representation in the Province, to call the members by the King's writ; it is a part of the Constitution first established by the aforesaid commission, and ever since preserved unaltered; and you all came by your seats in the House in the same constitutional way; and the laws of the Province rest upon this foundation. It is true that some contention was heretofore made by a former House, on this point, but after a long and fruitless controversy, the House thought it advisable at length to proceed to business with the new members in the established course.

Since my administration, three new members have been called from three Towns in the County of Cheshire, and they took their seats without interruption. Upon petitions to the Governour and Council from the inhabitants of the County of Grafton, it seemed equally reasonable to extend to them the same privilege, expressly given by President Cutt's commission, and secured by constant usage since, which was done in the usual form with advice of Council. It does not now appear, either by a general view of this practice, or any particular instance, that it hath not been exercised for the advantage of the people; and as there is no reason at present to apprehend danger from the influence of the Crown, the argument you make use of to support or justify your refusal of the new members, has, in itself, in reality, very little weight, more especially as provision is established by law for regulating the election of Assembly-men, and their qualifications.

In short, a Constitution has been given to this Province, which the people have accepted, and lived happily and prospered under, and I apprehend their interest will be much better consulted by adhering to that Constitution, than by any innovations or attempts to alter or subvert it, especially in a point of inherent right and prerogative of His Majesty, which cannot be suffered to be violated or infringed.

The Treasurer's accounts are prepared, and I should have ordered them to be laid before the House, but my duty calls upon me to take care that no members, constitutionally returned to the Assembly, should be excluded from their privilege of acting freely in all matters of business that may come before the General Assembly. No inconvenience can as yet be occasioned by these accounts, as a sufficient number of members to make a House did not attend till yesterday, and then (as I understand) but a very thin House.

I am sorry to observe, that it appears to me from the determination not to rescind the vote for excluding the three members for Plymouth, Lyme, and Orford, that the House did not meet with a disposition to proceed upon the affairs of the Province. In hopes, however, that this business may acquire a more favourable consideration in a fuller House of Assembly, on a future day, I think it my duty to adjourn the General Assembly, and it is hereby adjourned accordingly, to Tuesday, the 28th of September next, at ten o'clock in the morning, then to meet at the State-House in Portsmouth.

J. WENTWORTH.

Fort William and Mary, New-Hampshire, July 15, 1775.

London, July 18, 1775.

Yesterday se'nnight arrived at Whitehaven, the Molly, Captain Mitchinson, in twenty-six days from Norfolk, in Virginia. She was not suffered to land her cargo in Norfolk. The Committee was called and expresses sent to Alexandria, where a Congress was sitting. The Captain was seized, and with much difficulty and solicitation escaped tar and feathers. One of the merchants who resides at Norfolk, requested that the vessel might proceed with her cargo to Quebeck, which was refused; nor would the Committee suffer it to be transhipped into another vessel belonging to the company, then loading for Whitehaven; nor allow the Molly to take in the tobacco which was prepared for her, but compelled the merchant to send the cargo back in the same bottom, without diminution or addition, to be landed at Whitehaven; for the performance of which they obliged him to give a bond of three thousand Pounds.

JOHN STUART, SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, TO COMMITTEE OF INTELLIGENCE, CHARLESTOWN, S. C.

St. Augustine, July 18, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of 21st and 29th June, by express. In the former, you are pleased to acquaint, by order of the Provincial Congress, that I stand in a very unfavourable light with the publick; but you have not thought proper to acquaint me of what I am accused, and upon what evidence the publick has conceived an unfavourable opinion of me. You must be conscious of the impropriety of desiring me to answer in my own vindication to a charge which is not stated. And here I must beg permission to say, that my services to your Province have merited very different sentiments than you tell me they entertain of me, and much better treatment than I have received.

I am sorry that it is not in my power to comply with your requisition, of sending you copies of all my correspondence on Indian affairs with Administration, the Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's Forces, and my Deputies. But I hope it will be sufficient to assure you, most faithfully, that I have always considered myself to be most effectually discharging my duty to the King, and fulfilling his intentions, when employed in securing the friendship and affection of the Indian Nations to his Majesty's Provinces; and in preventing, as far as in my power, jealousies arising from encroachments and mutual violences. And the long uninterrupted tranquillity which your frontiers have enjoyed, without any expense to the Province, during the past thirteen years of my superintendency, evinces that my endeavours have not been unavailing. And this will appear in a clearer point of view, if you will contrast the state of Indian affairs, and the expense to the Province, during the above period, with that of the thirteen preceding years. I never have received any orders from my superiours which, by the most tortured construction, could be interpreted to spirit up, or employ the Indians to fall upon the frontier inhabitants; or to take any part in the disputes between Great Britain and her Colonies. And I do not know that any part of my conduct, through all the various scenes of my life, can fix upon me the imputation of cruelty or inhumanity, or induce a belief that I could wantonly use any influence with Indians to make them fall upon innocent people.

Yet such an opinion has been most industriously propagated; although it is absolutely impossible that it could, or can be supported by any evidence of the least credibility. And I will venture to say, that every one, and all of you do, in your consciences, believe the charge to be false. I therefore think I have a right to call upon you, as men of honour, to efface the impression it has made on the minds of the people.

With respect to the warm expressions in my letter to Colonel Howarth, I cannot help thinking them in some measure justified, by your being authorized by the Congress to tell me that I stand in a very unfavourable light with the publick. What can have placed me in such an unfavourable light, but calumnious falsehoods, which endangered my life and property? I know not the authors, and shall not repeat illiberal epithets; you know what are suitable to such characters.

You are pleased to say, that my estate is a security for the good behaviour of the Indians in the Southern Department. It is disagreeable that my all should be held by so precarious a tenure as their behaviour; which, in a great measure, will depend upon the conduct of the inhabitants of the Provinces; yet you must allow, that holding my personal safety and life itself on such terms, would be more so. His Majesty's service will necessarily detain me here some months longer.

My little estate in your Province was purchased under the protection of the laws of my Country. I have always considered both life and fortune as pledged for my dutiful obedience to the King, and the laws. As I am not conscious of having transgressed, I hope for that security to my property, which is inseparable from the idea of a virtuous and well-policed community; and as power is now in your hands, I doubt not but I shall find this security from your justice.

Your letter of the 29th renders it necessary for me to tell you, that some time before I left Charlestown I had received information of a design to seize my person; and in order to give a colour to such a step, a report was industriously propagated of my having sent to call down the Indians. Immediately after my removal from Charlestown to my plantation on Lady's Island, it was reported, that in consequence of my orders, thirty-four families on the frontiers had been murdered by the Cherokees. When I was at Georgia, I had information that Captain Joyner and Mr. Barnwell, two members of the Provincial Congress, had returned to Beaufort; where, by most defamatory reports and insinuations, they endeavoured to blacken my character, and render me obnoxious to the people; giving out that my having called down the Indians was proven before the Congress; that great quantities of arms and ammunition were shipped for me to arm the Negroes and Indians; and that it was now discovered that I had sold Fort London, and was the instrument of getting the garrison massacred; and Captain Joyner showed at the publick muster-field, in St. Helena, printed bills, containing the above, and other false accusations.

From thence they went to Savannah, and in the night had a meeting with the Committee, of which Sir James Wright gave me notice early next morning, and advised me to take steps for the security of my person. I accordingly prevailed upon Captain Grant, of the St. John, armed schooner, to land me at St. Augustine, where the business of my department called me. But before I embarked, I saw some of the members of the Committee, and read to them some part of my correspondence with my Deputies, which they communicated to you. They candidly told me that the people were much enraged; and they could not answer for the safety of my person. I then thought it high time to provide for my safety; and went on board the St. John, armed schooner, at Cockspur.

I have since been informed, that two boats were sent down the river in pursuit of me; and from the schooner I saw several armed canoes, said to be commanded by Captain Joyner and Mr. Barnwell, who, before they left Beaufort, gave out they were to receive and conduct me back to Charlestown. The armed schooner, however, proceeded the next day for this place, where I landed in a very weak condition; and this, gentlemen, you are pleased to call a precipitate departure, though I shall ever consider it as a most fortunate escape.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,
JOHN STUART.

SUSSEX COUNTY (DELAWARE) COMMITTEE.

Dagsberry, July 18, 1775.

To the Publick.

Notwithstanding the many rumours and intimations that have been frequently spread, that Thomas Robinson, Esq., of Sussex on Delaware, was counteracting the wise, prudent, and manly measures recommended by the honourable Continental Congress, to put a stop to the calamities of America, and, if possible, avert Ministerial vengeance, which, like a torrent with increasing violence, is rushing down on our heads, yet the Committee, out of tenderness to his character, (as no vouchers appeared,) considered those vague reports as not worthy their notice, and therefore declined making inquiry into them. But Mr. Robinson, weakly imagining that this tenderness and lenity proceeded from fear, began to vaunt and exult, and with an effrontery ever the companion of ignorance, proceeded more openly and boldly to stamp his vile and slavish Ministerial principles upon the weak and unwary, over too many of whom, in the forests of Sussex and Maryland, by means of his office and store, he has indeed too much influence.

Since which time the Sub-Committee met at Dagsberry, the 18th July, 1775; and receiving information, clothed with better circumstances, ordered the authors immediately to be brought before them; who deposed as follow:

Peter Watson, being duly sworn upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposed and saith: that on Mon- day, the 10th of this instant, July, being at Robinson's store, on the head of Indian River, he saw John Gozlin, clerk to said Robinson, weigh and sell two small parcels of Bohea Tea, one of which he delivered to a girl, the other to Leatherberry Barker's wife; which aforesaid Tea he took out of a large canister, that he judged would hold about twelve or fifteen pounds. And further saith not.

Robert Butcher, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, deposeth and saith: that being in company with Thomas Robinson, Esq., the said Robinson asked him what those Committees were doing; he told him they were advising the people to muster, in order to defend their liberties. Robinson replied, that they were a pack of fools, for it was taking up arms against the King; and that our Charters were not annihilated, changed, or altered by the late Acts of Parliament, and therefore we ought to obey the King, and those that were put in authority under him; and that the great people were only leading the poor into a premunire, and after they had done it, they would not help them out of it. And further saith not.

And further saith not.

Mr. Robinson's conduct thus palpably appearing, and leaving no further doubt with respect to the measure he was industriously pursuing, the Clerk was ordered to summon him to appear at the house of William Newbold, on Saturday, the 22d of July; which citation is as follows:

"SIR: In consequence of repeated suggestions and informations lodged against you, the Committee of Inspection for the proposed new County, met at Dagsberry, the 19th of July, 1775; Colonel John Dagworthy in the Chair: and after maturely and dispassionately considering the several charges exhibited against you, were unanimously of opinion, that you ought to be cited to attend the General Committee at the house of William Newbold, on Saturday next, the 22d of this instant, in order to satisfy them with respect to the many heavy charges alleged against you.

"In strict obedience to which resolution, I do hereby send you this notification, that you do attend at the house of William Newbold, on Saturday, the 22d of this instant, July, at ten o'clock, A. M.

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, July 18, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We are honoured with your despatches of the 12th and 15th instant, and detained the express till after the rising of the Congress this day, in expectation of giving you the establishment of the Army, which is reported, but not fully confirmed and perfected; but to our great concern, such was the state of the business before the House, that we were disappointed. We shall, however, seize the first opportunity to draw this important point to a conclusion. In the mean time, as your Troops are sure of being placed on an equal footing with their neighbours, it is hoped the difficulty will not be insurmountable. This is all the satisfaction which we can at present give you on that head.

From a want of proper directions from those who had the charge of transporting the powder for the use of Major-General Schuyler's department, from this City to Elizabethtown, it has unfortunately been delayed on the road. We could do no more than complain. The fault will be repaired, and you may expect it soon.

We are not insensible to the distress to which you must be reduced, for the want of money, arms, and powder. With the first, you will soon be supplied. The difficulties attending an emission so uncommon, of which the necessary guards against counterfeits is not the least, has rendered its progress very tedious. We can give you no assurances of a supply of arms and ammunition from this quarter. Every scheme which could be devised to procure them from abroad, has been pursued, and on their success, and the efforts of the different Colonies, we must depend; for in the Southern Provinces there is very little, and none to be spared. Some blankets are to be had in this City, which will be purchased as soon as the money is issued.

We are, Gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

LEWIS MORRIS, PHILIP LIVINGSTON.

JAMES DUANE, HENRY WISNER.

Committee of Safety, New-York.

DOCTOR J. MALLETT TO WILLIAM ALLMON.

Ship Asia, New-York, July 18, 1775.

SIR: Relying on your discretion and prudence, I have to request your assistance in an affair that I imagine will require some dexterity to manage properly. I want to have a few articles out of the medicine store put on board Captain Vandeput's Ship, to be sent here, if you think it can be done so as not to be observed. You must consult with Bowden about it, who has the care of them; and I hope will meet with no difficulty in putting into the man-of-war boat at Blundell's house, at noon day, to avoid suspicion, a box of lint, the two boxes pulv. Peruvian, one do. Sal Glau. The pot of camphire, and what opium there is packed in another small box. If you can't easily send all these articles, the box of lint, which is most wanted, may be easily carried under the arm; as also the camphire and opium. Scrape off the marks, and after it is on board, direct it for me at this place. Be cautious how you open the front part of the store. I believe you will find the key at Mrs. Reid's; as Mrs. Mallett tells me she left all the keys with her; you will leave them there again when you have got out the above articles. I hope Bowden will take all the care he can both of the medicines and bedding store, and give me immediate notice if any one offers to meddle with them; and tell them from me, that I will take care he shall be satisfied for his trouble. If the key should not be there, I must get you to write to Mrs. Mallett, or to go up, if necessary, to know where it is put. I left them all in a drawer of my desk, and I dare say you will find them at Mrs. Reid's, as I know that of the bedding store is there. I should be glad of a bale or two of old sheets, but am afraid it will be difficult to get them. Don't risk any thing, but first let me know if it is practicable to get them, and several other articles I want, out of the medicine store on some future occasion. Captain Kingston, who brings you this, has directions to find you or Bowden, and give you all the assistance he can, and will take care of whatever you give into his charge. There are some lancets, needles, scalpels, and pocket instruments, in one of my drawers also; if they could be got at, I should be glad they were sent here, but I fear Mrs. Mallett has the keys in the country. Mr. Bruce will write to you on this subject, to enjoin your transacting this business with all imaginable precaution; and be assured you will, in return, meet with every thing to serve you in the power of your assured friend,

J. MALLETT.

To Mr. William Allmon, at Dr. Bruce's, New-York, per favour of Captain Kingston

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ticonderoga, July 18, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of the first July I only had the honour to receive on the fifteenth, on my way to this place, where I arrived this day. Be assured, Sir, that every recommendation of yours will claim my particular attention. I left Captain Elisha Phelps to forward the stores from Albany, where he will remain, unless the necessity of the service should oblige me to call him elsewhere. If any opportunity offers in which I can employ Captain Noah Phelps, I shall embrace it with alacrity. I find the Troops from your Colony, under the command of Colonel Hinman, destitute of tents, an article they much stand in need of, being now crowded into bad barracks, which I fear will be productive of disease. Should it be impossible to procure the materials for making tents in your Colony, they may possibly be furnished by the New-York Congress, which can make no material difference, as it will probably be a Continental charge. Colonel Hinman informs me that fat cattle were expected up from Connecticut for the Troops here. I had ordered Mr. Walter Livingston to purchase a hundred head. Should your Honour learn that he has succeeded, it will supersede the necessity of sending any until a future requisition.

Permit me, Sir, to assure you of my respect and esteem, and that I am your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

The Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

P. S. Colonel Hinman begs his respects. Be pleased to forward the letters for General Washington by the next post.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Ticonderoga, July 18, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I do myself the honour to inform your Excellency of my arrival at this place early this morning, and as a person is just going to Hartford, I sit down to give you the little information I have procured.

A Canadian, who twelve days ago left St. John's, advises me that General Carleton has about four hundred men at that place; that he has thrown up a strong intrenchment, covered with chevaux-de-frise, picketed the ditch, and secured it with an abatis; that he has an advanced post of fifty men intrenched a league on this side; that there are many Indians in Canada, but believes that neither they nor the Canadians will join him; the latter he is sure will not, unless compelled by force.

You will expect that I should say something about this place and the troops here. Not one earthly thing for offence or defence has been done; the commanding officer had no orders, he only came to re-enforce the garrison, and he expected the General! But this, my dear General, as well as what follows in this paragraph, I pray may be entre nous, for reasons I need not suggest. About ten o'clock last night I arrived at the landing place, the north end of Lake George, a post occupied by a captain and one hundred men. A sentinel, on being informed I was in the boat, quitted his post to go and awake the guard, consisting of three men, in which he had no success. I walked up and came to another, a sergeant's guard. Here the sentinel challenged, but suffered me to come up to him, the whole guard, like the first, in the soundest sleep. With a pen-knife only I could have cut off both guards, and then have set fire to the block-house, destroyed the stores, and starved the people here. At this post I have pointedly recommended vigilance and care, as all the stores from Fort George must necessarily be landed there. But I hope to get the better of this inattention. The officers and men are all good looking people, and decent in their deportment, and I really believe will make good soldiers as soon as I can get the better of this nonchalance of theirs. Bravery, I believe, they are far from wanting. As soon as I am a little settled, I shall do myself the honour to send you a return of my strength both on land and water.

I enclose your Excellency a copy of a letter from Colonel Johnson, with a copy of an examination of a person lately from Canada, contradictory of the accounts I gave you in my last from Saratoga. You will perceive that he is gone to Canada. I hope Carleton, if he should be able to procure a body of Indians, will not be in a hurry to pay us a visit. I wish to be a little more decently prepared to receive him; in doing which, be assured I shall lose no time.

I have no way of sending you any letters, with a probable hope of their coming to hand, unless by express, or by the circuitous route of Hartford; by which only, I can expect to be favoured with a line from you.

Generals Lee and Gates share with you in my warmest wishes. I shall devote the first hour I can call my own, to do myself the honour to write them.

I am, most sincerely, your Excellency's obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

P. S. Permit me, Sir, through you, to inquire the health of Colonel Reed, Major Mifflin, and Mr. Griffin.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, July 18, 1775.

SIR: Allow me to return you my sincere thanks for the kind wishes and favourable sentiments expressed in yours of the thirteenth instant. As the cause of our common Country calls us both to an active and dangerous duty, I trust that Divine Providence, which wisely orders the affairs of men, will enable us to discharge it with fidelity and success. The uncorrupted choice of a brave and free people has raised you to deserved eminence.

That the blessings of health, and the still greater blessing of long continuing to govern such a people, may be yours, is the sincere wish of, Sir, your, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp, July 18, 1775.

SIR: It is with no small concern that I find the arrangement of General Officers made by the honourable Continental Congress has produced dissatisfaction. As the Army is upon a general establishment, their right to supersede and contract a Provincial one must be unquestionable, and in such a cause I should hope every post would be deemed honourable which gave a man opportunity to serve his Country.

A representation from the Congress of this Province, with such remarks as occurred to me on this subject, is now before the Continental Congress. In the mean time, I beg leave to assure you that, unbiased by any private attachments, I shall studiously endeavour to reconcile their pretensions to their duty, and so dispose them as to prevent, as far as possible, any inconvenience to the publick service from this competition. I have the honour to be, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

Cambridge, July 21, 1775.

Last Saturday, July 15th, the several Regiments quartered in this Town being assembled upon the parade, the Reverend Doctor Langdon, President of the College, read to them "A Declaration by the Representatives of the United Colonies of North America, now met in General Congress at Philadelphia, setting forth the causes and necessity of their taking up arms." It was received with great applause, and the approbation of the Army, with that of a great number of other people, was immediately announced by three huzzas. His Excellency the General, with several other General Officers, &c., were present on the occasion.

Last Tuesday morning, July 18th, according to orders issued the day before by Major-General Putnam, all the Continental Troops under his immediate command assembled at Prospect Hill, when the Declaration of the Continental Congress was read; after which an animated and pathetick address to the Army was made by the Rev. Mr. Leonard, Chaplain to General Putnam's Regiment, and succeeded by a pertinent prayer, when General Putnam gave the signal, and the whole Army shouted their loud amen by three cheers, immediately upon which a cannon was fired from the fort, and the standard lately sent to General Putnam was exhibited flourishing in the air, bearing on one side this motto, "An appeal to Heaven," and on the other side, "Qui transtulit sustinet." The whole was conducted with the utmost decency, good order, and regularity, and the universal acceptance of all present; and the Philistines, on Bunker's Hill "heard the shout of the Israelites, and, being very fearful, paraded themselves in battle array."

INSTRUCTIONS OF GEN. GAGE TO CAPT. CAMPBELL.

By his Excellency the Honourable THOMAS GAGE, General and Commander-in-Chief of all His Majesty's Forces in NORTH AMERICA, &c., &c., &c.

To Captain DUNCAN CAMPBELL and Lieutenant SYMES:

You are hereby directed to embark on board the Rebecca and Frances, transport, George Hastings, master, and proceed as fast as possible to New-York, where you are to receive on board your ship such men as may be inclined to serve His Majesty; and you are particularly to attend to the arrival of ships expected from Scotland, and to procure as many men out of them as you possibly can; and you are to do your endeavour not to suffer any of those emigrants to join the rebels on shore, and to give every encouragement to all the Scotch and other nations that will join you. Captain Vandeput, of His Majesty's Ship Asia, will give you all the assistance in his power, and with whom you will confer when there may be occasion; you will continue at New-York as long as the service you are upon may require, when you are to return to this place with all expedition, bringing as many volunteers with you as you can procure.

Given under my hand at Head-Quarters at Boston, this eighteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five.

THOMAS GAGE.

By his Excellency's command:

SAMUEL KEMBLE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN FREDERICKTOWN, MARYLAND, TO HIS FRIEND IN BALTIMORE, DATED JULY 19, 1775.

On Monday last Captain Morgan, from Virginia, with his company of riflemen, (all chosen,) marched through this place, on their way to Boston. Their appearance was truly martial; their spirits amazingly elated, breathing nothing but a desire to join the American Army, and to engage the enemies of American liberty. They were met about a mile out of Town by three companies, viz: Captain Price's company of riflemen, Captain Grosh's and Captain Beatty's companies of militia, and escorted a few miles out of Town, amidst the acclamations of all the inhabitants who attended them; and yesterday Captain Price, with his company, also marched. And surely never were two finer companies raised in any Country, more determined to conquer or die, than those two companies are.

Capt. Cresap also, with his brave company, have marched. I need not say any thing of Captain Cresap's undaunted courage; not an American but knows him to be an intrepid warrior, and of course he knows his men, and has culled them from the many. We are also in hourly expectation of Captain Sinason, with his brave company, in this Town, on his way to Boston. God grant them a speedy and happy arrival there. So many offered to join the above companies, that not one of them but might have had one hundred men at least.

PISCATAWAY AND BLADENSBURGH (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

Prince George's County, July 19, 1775.

The Committee of Inspection for Piscataway and Bladensburg having had information that Goods had been sold and landed by some persons belonging to ships lying in the Eastern Branch of Potomack River, met this day at Kerbey's Landing, and chose Colonel Joshua Beall, Chairman:

When Robert Miller, Master of the Ship Diana, was called before the Committee, and being asked if he had not sold or delivered to Mr. Henry Bradford a barrel of Porter, who, after some evasive answer, acknowledged he had made Mr. Bradford a present of a barrel of Porter, in consideration of sundry services he had done him last voyage, and others he expected this present voyage.

Mr. Bradford being then examined, acknowledged, that at the repeated and pressing requests of Captain Miller, he had accepted of a barrel, which he believed was Porter, though he had not tasted it since he received it from him; that at that time he did not think he was doing wrong, as he did not purchase it, and was sorry to find he had erred in accepting it, and was ready and willing to deliver it up to the Committee in the order he had received it.

Captain Benjamin King being examined by said Committee, declared he heard Captain Miller say, on the Exchange of London, before he came out this voyage, that he would bring to America any Goods he pleased.

The Committee then examined James McKinsey, carpenter, and Samuel Pool, boatswain of the Ship Eolus, Captain Rankins. They acknowledged they had sold seven pair of Shoes to different persons, and also part of a piece of Linen to the Skipper of a Schooner down the river, his name unknown to them; they declared they did not know they were breaking the rules of the Continental Congress, and agreed to give up the money they had sold the Shoes for to the Bladensburg Committee, to be disposed of by them as they should think proper.

Luke Jefferson, Robert St. Clair, and Baptist Kirbey, being examined, acknowledged they had bought Shoes of the above-named persons, viz: Luke Jefferson three pair, Robert St. Clair three pair, and Baptist Kirbey two pair; which they agreed to give up to the Bladensburg Committee.

Captain Rankins being examined, declared he did not know that his people brought any thing for sale, and that he had, before they sailed, told them not, as he had received orders from his owners not to suffer any Goods to come out in the ship; that as soon as he had information that his people had been selling Shoes, he made a search in the ship, and could not find any thing his people had but what was necessary for the voyage.

Resolved by the Committee aforesaid, That the Porter and Shoes be destroyed in a publick manner, and the money for which the Shoes were sold to be applied to the relief of the poor of Boston; and it is the opinion of this Committee, that the several persons concerned in importing, vending, purchasing, and receiving the said Goods, have been guilty of violating the Association of the Continental Congress.

Bladensburg, July 22, 1775.

Then Mr. Henry Bradford produced the cask of Porter to the Committee of this Town, the head of which was staved in, and the liquor thrown out on the ground, the staves and heading burnt, with six pair of the Shoes, two pair of those purchased by Robert St. Clair not being produced to the Committee according to promise; the eight dollars, for which the Shoes were sold, were this day paid into the hands of the Chairman.

JOHN HANCOCK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, July 19, 1775.

SIR: The earnest desire of several members of Congress, joined to a hearty wish of rendering service to the gentlemen, induce me to take the freedom to introduce to your notice Mr. Ogden and Mr. Burr, of the Jerseys, by whom this will be handed you. They are gentlemen of reputation, and visit the camp not as spectators, but with a view of joining the Army, and being active during the campaign; I beg you will please to place them in such a department as you shall judge suitable. Your notice of these gentlemen I shall esteem a particular favour.

Your despatches reached me last evening; I shall forward you the papers immediately. The result of Congress you shall know as early as possible.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK.

To his Excellency General Washington.

JOHN HANCOCK, PRESIDENT, TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Congress Chamber, July 19, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: By advice from the Army before Boston, a supply of gunpowder would be very acceptable, and greatly contribute to promote the common cause. I am therefore desired by the Congress, who have had an intimation that a quantity of that article was lately imported into your City, to apply to you and request you to send forward, as speedily and safely as possible, what you can spare, to the camp before Boston. I am, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK.

To Committee of Safety, New-York.

ADDRESS OF COMMITTEE OF SAFETY OF HILLSBOROUGH TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

To the Honourable JOHN SULLIVAN, Esquire, Brigadier-General of the Continental Army:

SIR: The Committee of Safety for the County of Hillsborough, in the Colony of New-Hampshire, having in contemplation the great services you lately rendered the County in your civil capacity, and the great abilities you then exerted at the bar in their defence, at a time when the people were most cruelly oppressed by the tools of Government, pray leave to address and congratulate you on your appointment to the rank of Brigadier-General—an appointment which, as it distinguishes your merit, so at the same time it reflects honour upon, and shews the penetrating discernment of those truly eminent patriots from whom you received it, and of whom are composed the Continental Congress. Nor are we less sanguine in our expectations of the high advantages which must result (under God) to the publick, by your military skill and courage, as you have been indefatigable in attaining the first, and have given a recent instance of the latter, to your great honour and reputation, in depriving our enemies of the means of annoying us at Castle William and Mary, and at the same time furnishing us with materials to defend our invaluable rights and privileges.

This, Sir, must be ever had in remembrance, and (amongst the actions of others, our heroes of 1775) handed down to the latest posterity. That the Almighty may direct your counsels, be with you in the day of battle, and that you may be preserved as a pattern to this people for many years to come, is our fervent prayer.

Per order: MATTHEW PATTIN, Chairman.

July 19, 1775.

General SULLIVAN's Answer.

To the Honourable the Committee of Safety for the County of HILLSBOROUGH:

GENTLEMEN: Your polite congratulatory Address upon my appointment to the rank of Brigadier-General in the American Army, demands my most sincere and cordial thanks. Your approbation of my conduct while at the bar, acting in defence of an injured people against the arbitrary tools of Government, gives me the highest satisfaction.

The favourable opinion which you have formed of my courage and military skill, must alone be a sufficient inducement for me to exert myself at this important day, and, if possible, prevent you from being disappointed in your expectations. It gives me great pleasure to find that so respectable a number of the worthy sons of freedom, in the Colony to which I belong, have so publicly given their approbation of my conduct in assisting to secure the warlike stores at Fort William and Mary, and thereby preventing those evils which must have resulted from our enemies having the possession of them. That the important office you sustain may be ever held by such worthy patriots, who, while they so nobly exert themselves in defence of our common liberties, are endeavouring to strengthen the hands of others, is, gentlemen, the earnest prayer of your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

Camp at Winter Hill, August 10, 1775.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Medford, July 19, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: As we have no matters regulated in manner ordered by the Congress as yet, I can give no exact account of the state of our affairs till that time. We are in great want of bayonets for our men; I would entreat you to send some of different sizes, and a person who understands fixing them to the guns. I am sorry to inform you, that the New-Hampshire forces are without a Chaplain, when the Continental Congress have voted pay for a Chaplain in each regiment. Our men are obliged to attend prayers with the Rhode-Island Regiment, and when they assemble, the concourse is so great that few of them can hear a word that is said. It being essentially necessary in an army to keep up divine worship, I doubt not you will send us a Chaplain to each Regiment.

I must remind you that it is absolutely necessary for us to have some beds for our sick men, many having died already for the want of comfortable beds to lie upon. I therefore entreat that you would buy up and send us beds, with some stuff to make cots and hammocks.

We also are in great need of guns and blankets, several having been lost in the late engagement, and several others not fit for service.

Gentlemen, I am, with respect, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

Committee of Safety.

COLONEL REID TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp at Winter Hill, July 19, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I received yours of the 1st instant, and note the contents. You say, without knowing I had in actual service or in my eye, any person as Adjutant of my Regiment, have commissioned Mr. McGregore, a suitable person, &c. I doubt not but Mr. McGregore is a worthy and suitable gentleman for an Adjutant, and is agreeable to me, and I wish he had been so to the Regiment; but, to my surprise, when he ordered the Guards to be paraded, I soon learnt they refused to appear. I was under the necessity to order the Captain to parade them, and they immediately obeyed. You may be assured I should have done every thing in my power to have made Mr. McGregore's duty agreeable, but this happened at a time when no officer was in commission, nor the soldiers sworn. It was not a time to enter into a dispute; the difficulties are better known than expressed. I must beg leave to inform you, that not a single day's duty in a regiment can be done with propriety without an Adjutant; and if ever the duty of an Adjutant was necessary, it was before the late action, as well as soon after. How could you imagine that I could do one day without both Adjutant and Quartermaster; besides, you gave me the liberty of appointing both. You say, if any person I judge suitable is disposed to act as a volunteer in that capacity, without pay, you have no objection, unless it should plainly appear to you that he would not answer the end. To which I answer, I hope in time my conduct will convince you that I have the service more at heart than to be partial in the matter. I do easily perceive, that it must be very disagreeable to the honourable Committee and the worthy gentleman, Mr. McGregore, to be disappointed; but hope you will provide for him some other way. I heartily thank the honourable Committee for their friendly paragraph, in which you say, you may assure yourself, that so far as the publick service will allow, you shall take pleasure in gratifying me or the Regiment, of any individual. This is the sole reason why Mr. Peabody is continued as Adjutant; and I presume the voice of the Regiment will make this manifest, which is the best information the nature of the thing will admit of.

Permit me, gentlemen, to remind you of your promise that I should have a Chaplain, for the want of which the service greatly suffers, as we have to borrow from other regiments, which is a thing I cannot repay.

Beg leave, at the same time, to subscribe, gentlemen, myself your obliged and ever humble servant at command,

JAMES REID.

WILMINGTON (NORTH-CAROLINA) COMMITTEE.

On the 20th July, at a monthly meeting of the Committee for the Town of Wilmington, and the County of New-Hanover, at which were occasionally present a number of gentlemen, members of the different Committees in Wilmington District, the Committee, upon taking the Restraining Act into consideration,

"Resolved unanimously, That the exception of that Colony, and some others, out of the said act, is a base and mean artifice, to seduce them into a desertion of the common cause of America;" and that "they will not accept of the advantages insidiously thrown out by the said act; but will adhere strictly to such plans as have been, and shall be, entered into by the honourable Continental Congress, so as to keep up a perfect unanimity with their sister Colonies."

They also "unanimously Resolved, not to freight, or in any manner employ, any shipping belonging to Poole, and that they will not carry on any commercial intercourse or communication with the selfish people of that Town."

The Committee, likewise, after premising that it appeared upon incontestible evidence that John Collett, Commander of Fort Johnston, was preparing the said Fort for the reception of a promised re-enforcement, and had been also guilty of various malepractices, inform the publick, that they, "having taken these things into their consideration, judged it might be of the most pernicious consequences to the people at large, if the said John Collett should be suffered to remain in the Fort, as he might thereby have opportunities of carrying his iniquitous schemes into execution."

This opinion having been communicated to the officers, and the Committees of some neighbouring Counties, a great many volunteers were immediately collected, a party of whom reached Brunswick, when accounts were received that the said Commander had carried off all the small arms, ammunition, and part of the artillery, (the property of that Province,) together with his furniture, on board a transport hired for that purpose, there to remain until the re-enforcement should arrive, and then again to take possession of the Fort. The original design being thus frustrated, but the different detachments having met at Brunswick, about five hundred men marched to the Fort, and burnt and destroyed all the houses, &c., in and about the same; demolished as far as they then could the back parts of the fortification, and effectually dislodged that atrocious freebooter.

VIRGINIA VOLUNTEERS TO NORFOLK COMMITTEE.

On Thursday, July 20th, 1775, one of the Dinwiddie volunteers was despatched to Norfolk with the following Letter, from the officers of the several Volunteer Companies in Williamsburgh, to the Committee of that Borough:

GENTLEMEN: We judge you are sensible it requires no extraordinary genius to divide, and true wisdom despises the infamous task. You have, hitherto, shown the diffusive spirit of benevolence to our cause, in your strictures on Lord Dunmore's letters. We are, therefore, the more truly alarmed at a report, which gives us too much grounds to fear you are, some of you, deserting the glorious cause; being informed that there are volunteers recruiting in opposition to the Continental plan. Our desire is, that you inform us of the verity of this report, that we may assist the proper side with all our force, as soon as we obtain authority from the Convention, which is at present sitting, before whom we shall not fail to lay the whole state of the case.

We are, &c.

On Saturday he returned with the following Answer from the Committee:

To the Officers of the Volunteer Companies in WILLIAMSBURGH.

GENTLEMEN: We are happy in every expression of your attachment to the common interest of your Country, and are glad we can inform you there is not the least foundation for the fears you have declared for our safety, upon an ill-grounded report, that any among us are deserting the cause of their Country, and enlisting against it. It is a report, we can assure you, that is totally devoid of truth. You may depend, we would not sit still as indifferent spectators of such hostile measures. The time may come, when we may stand in need of your assistance, surrounded as we are by armed vessels and some suspected inhabitants; we trust we shall then receive it; and should the Convention, hereafter, think it necessary to quarter any of you among us, you may rest assured we shall welcome you with willing hearts and open arms.

We are, Gentlemen, your humble servants. By order of the Committee: WILLIAM DAVIES, Secretary.

CAPTAIN MONTAGUE TO CAPTAIN SQUIRE, OF HIS MAJESTY'S SHIP OTTER.

Fowey, Hampton Roads, July 20, 1775.

SIR: Joseph Harris,* the bearer of this letter, has applied to me for protection, as the people of Hampton and some other places have threatened his destruction, as they have found him to have given intelligence concerning a smuggling schooner, which was seized in Cherry-Stone Creek. As the Fowey will soon leave the Province, I think him too useful to His Majesty's service to take away, he being well acquainted with many creeks on the Eastern Shore, at York, James River, and Nansemond, and many others, and of course a very useful person, especially in tenders, as he is not acquainted with the duties of a seaman, but accustomed to pilot, as he had a boat for that use, which is now detained by violence in Hampton harbour. He has always appeared very sober and prudent, is a free-man, and I could wish strongly to recommend him to such indulgence as his endeavours may merit. Agreeable to my Lord Dunmore's application, I have sent up the Arundel, and Mr. Atkinson her officer, and will send Mr. Ruth in the Liberty. I have taken such stores and hawser out of the Arundel as belonged to the Crown when with me employed on His Majesty's service, and have fitted her with her real private property.

I am, dear Sir, your very humble servant,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

Pastoral Letter from the Synod of NEW-YORK and PHILADELPHIA, to the Congregations under their care; delivered from the Pulpit on the 20th of JULY, 1775, being the day appointed by the Honourable Congress for a General Fast.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN: The Synod of New-York and Philadelphia being met, at a time when publick affairs wear so threatening an aspect, and when (unless God in his sovereign providence speedily prevent it) all the horrors of a civil war throughout this great Continent are to be apprehended, were of opinion, that they could not discharge their duty to the numerous Congregations under their care, without addressing them at this important crisis. As the firm belief, and habitual recollection of the power and presence of the living God ought at all times to possess the minds of real Christians; so in seasons of publick calamity, when the Lord is known by the judgments which he executeth, it would be an ignorance or indifference highly criminal, not to look up to him with reverence, to implore his mercy by humble and fervent prayer, and, if possible, to prevent his vengeance by unfeigned repentance.

We do, therefore, brethren, beseech you, in the most earnest manner, to look beyond the immediate authors either of your sufferings or fears, and to acknowledge the holiness and justice of the Almighty in the present visitation. He is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works. Affliction springeth not out of the dust. He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men; and, therefore, it becometh every person, family, City, and Province, to humble themselves before his throne, to confess their sins, by which they have provoked his indignation, and entreat him to pour out upon all ranks a spirit of repentance and of prayer. Fly, also, for forgiveness, to the atoning blood of the Great Redeemer—the blood of sprinkling, which speaketh better things than that of Abel. Remember and confess, not only your sins in general, but those prevalent national offences which may justly be considered as the procuring causes of publick judgments—particularly profaneness and contempt of God, his name, Sabbath, and sanctuary; pride, luxury, uncleanness, and neglect of family religion and government, with the deplorable ignorance and security which certainly ought to be imputed to this as their principal cause. All these are among us, highly aggravated by the inestimable privileges which we have hitherto enjoyed without interruption, since the first settlement of this Country. If in the present day of distress we expect that God will hear our supplications, and interpose for our protection or deliverance, let us remember what he himself requires of us is that our prayers should be attended with a sincere purpose and thorough endeavour after personal and family reformation. “If thou prepare thine heart, and stretch out thine hand towards him: if iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away; and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.” Job xi, 13 and 14.

The Synod cannot help thinking, that this is a proper time for pressing all of every rank seriously to consider the things that belong to their eternal peace. Hostilities, long feared, have now taken place; the sword has been drawn in one Province, and the whole Continent, with hardly any exception, seem determined to defend their rights by force of arms. If, at the same time, the British Ministry shall continue to enforce their claims by violence, a lasting and bloody contest must be expected. Surely, then, it becomes those who have taken up arms, and profess a willingness to hazard their lives in the cause of liberty, to be prepared for death, which to many must be the certain, and to every one is a possible or probable event.

We have long seen, with concern, the circumstances which occasioned, and the gradual increase of this unhappy difference. As Ministers of the Gospel of peace, we have ardently wished that it could, and often hoped that it would, have been more early accommodated. It is well known to you, (otherwise it would be imprudent, indeed, thus publicly to profess,) that we have not been instrumental in inflaming the minds of the people, or urging them to acts of violence and disorder. Perhaps no instance can be given on so interesting a subject, in which political sentiments have been so long and so fully kept from the pulpit; and even malice itself has not charged us with labouring from the press. But things are now come to such a state, that we do not wish to conceal our opinions as men and citizens; so the relation we stand in to you seemed to make the present improvement of it to your spiritual benefit our indispensable duty. Suffer us, then, to lay hold of your present temper of mind, and to exhort, especially the young and vigorous, by assuring them, that there is no soldier so undaunted as the pious man; no army so formidable as those who are superior to the fear of death. There is nothing more awful to think of, than that those whose trade is war should be despisers of the name of the Lord of Hosts, and that they should expose themselves to the imminent danger of being immediately sent from cursing and cruelty on earth, to the blaspheming rage and despairing horror of the infernal pit. Let, therefore, every one who, from generosity of spirit or benevolence of heart, offers himself as a champion in his Country's cause, be persuaded to reverence the name, and walk in the fear of the Prince of the Kings of the earth; and then he may, with the most unshaken firmness, expect the issue either in victory or death.

Let it not be forgotten, that though, for the wise ends of his providence, it may please God for a season to suffer his people to be under unmerited oppression; yet, in general, we may expect, that those who fear and serve him in sincerity and truth will be favoured with his countenance and strength. It is both the character and the privilege of the children of God, that they call upon him in the day of trouble, and he, who keepeth covenant and truth forever, has said, that his ears are always open to their cry. We need not mention to you in how many instances the event in battles, and success in war, have turned upon circumstances which were inconsiderable in themselves, as well as out of the power of human prudence to foresee or direct; because we suppose you firmly believe, that after all the counsels of men, and the most probable and promising means, the Lord will do that which seemeth him good. Nor hath his promise ever failed of its full accomplishment. “The Lord is with you while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.” 2 Chron. xv. 2.

After this exhortation, which we thought ourselves called upon to give you at this time on your great interest—the one thing needful—we shall take the liberty to offer a few advices to the Societies under our charge, as to their publick and general conduct. And first, in carrying on this important struggle, let every opportunity be taken to express your attachment and respect to our Sovereign King George, and to the Revolution principles by which his august family was seated on the British throne. We recommend, indeed, not only allegiance to him from duty and principle, as the first magistrate of the empire, but esteem and reverence for the person of the Prince, who has merited well of his subjects on many accounts; and who has probably been misled into the late and present measures by those about him. Neither have we any doubt that they themselves have been, in a great degree, deceived by false information from interested persons residing in America. It gives us the greatest pleasure to say, from our own certain knowledge of all belonging to our communion, and from the best means of information of the far greatest part of all denominations in this Country, that the present opposition to the measures of Administration does not in the least arise from disaffection to the King, or a desire of separation from the Parent State. We are happy in being able with truth to affirm, that no part of America would either have approved or permitted such insults as have been offered to the Sovereign in Great Britain. We exhort you, therefore, to continue in the same disposition, and not to suffer oppression or injury itself easily to provoke you to any thing which may seem to betray contrary sentiments. Let it ever appear, that you only desire the preservation and security of those rights which belong to you as freemen and Britons, and that reconciliation upon these terms is your most ardent desire.

Secondly: Be careful to maintain the union which at present subsists through all the Colonies. Nothing can be more manifest, than that the success of every measure depends on its being inviolably preserved; and therefore, we hope that you will leave nothing undone which can promote that end. In particular, as the Continental Congress, now sitting at Philadelphia, consists of Delegates chosen in the most free and unbiased manner by the body of the people, let them not only be treated with respect, but encouraged in their difficult service; not only let your prayers be offered up to God for his direction in their proceedings, but adhere firmly to their resolutions; and let it be seen that they are able to bring out the whole strength of this vast Country to carry them into execution. We would also advise, for the same purpose, that a spirit of candour, charity, and mutual esteem be preserved and promoted towards those of different religious denominations. Persons of probity and principle, of every profession, should be united together as servants of the same Master; and the experience of our happy concord hitherto in a state of liberty, should engage all to unite together in support of the common interest; for there is no example in history in which civil liberty was destroyed, and the rights of conscience preserved entire.

Thirdly: We do earnestly exhort and beseech the Societies under our care, to be strict and vigilant in their private government, and to watch over the morals of their several members. It is with the utmost pleasure we remind you, that the last Continental Congress determined to discourage luxury in living, publick diversions, and gaming of all kinds, which have so fatal an influence on the morals of the people. If it is undeniable that universal profligacy makes a nation ripe for divine judgments, and is the natural mean of bringing them to ruin, reformation of manners is of the utmost necessity in our present distress. At the same time, as it has been observed by many eminent writers, that the censorial power, which had for its object the manners of the publick in the ancient free States, was absolutely necessary to their continuance, we cannot help being of opinion, that the only thing which we have now to supply the place of this, is the religious discipline of the several sects with respect to their own members; so that the denomination or profession which shall take the most effectual care of the instruction of its members, and maintain its discipline in the fullest vigour, will do the most essential service to the whole body. For the very same reason, the greatest service which magistrates or persons in authority can do with respect to the religion or morals of the people, is to defend and secure the rights of conscience in the most equal and impartial manner.

— Fourthly: We cannot but recommend, and urge in the warmest manner, a regard to order and publick peace; and as in many places, during the confusions that prevail, legal proceedings have become difficult, it is hoped that all persons will conscientiously pay their just debts, and to the utmost of their power serve one another, so that the evils inseparable from a civil war, may not be augmented by wantonness and irregularity.

Fifthly: We think it of importance at this time, to recommend to all of every rank, but especially to those who may be called to action, a spirit of humanity and mercy. "Every battle of the warrior is with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood." It is impossible to appeal to the sword without being exposed to many scenes of cruelty and slaughter; but it is often observed, that civil wars are carried on with a rancour and spirit of revenge, much greater than those between independent states. The injuries received or supposed in civil wars, wound more deeply than those of foreign enemies; it is, therefore, the more necessary to guard against this abuse, and recommend that meekness and gentleness of spirit, which is the noblest attendant on true valour. That man will fight most bravely who never fights until it is necessary, and who ceases to fight as soon as the necessity is over.

Lastly: We would recommend to all the Societies under our care, not to content themselves with attending devoutly on general fasts, but to continue habitually in the exercise of prayer, and to have frequent occasional voluntary meetings for solemn intercession with God on the important trial. Those who are immediately exposed to danger, need your sympathy; and we learn from the Scriptures, that fervency and importunity are the very characters of that prayer of the righteous man which availeth much.

We conclude with our most earnest prayer, that the God of Heaven may bless you in your temporal and spiritual concerns, and that the present unnatural dispute may be speedily terminated by an equitable and lasting settlement on constitutional principles.

Signed in the name, presence, and by appointment of the Synod: BENJAMIN HAIT, Moderator.

New-York, May 12, 1775.

ETHAN ALLEN TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 20, 1775.

RESPECTABLE GENTLEMEN: When I reflect on the unhappy controversy which hath many years subsisted between the Government of New-York and the settlers on the New-Hampshire Grants, and also contemplate on the friendship and union that hath lately taken place between the Government and those its former discontented subjects, in making a united resistance against ministerial vengeance and slavery, I cannot but indulge fond hopes of reconciliation. To promote this salutary end I shall contribute my influence, assuring your Honours, that your respectful treatment, not only to Mr. Warner and myself, but to the Green Mountain Boys in general, in forming them into a battalion, are by them duly regarded, and I will be responsible that they will retaliate this favour by boldly hazarding their lives, if need be, in the common cause of America.

I hope no gentleman in the Congress will retain any preconceived prejudices against me, as, on my part, I shall not against any of them; but as soon as opportunity may permit and the publick cause not suffer thereby, shall hold myself in readiness to settle all former disputes and grievances on honourable terms.

I am, Gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your devoted, most obedient humble servant, ETHAN ALLEN.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress, New-York.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM WATERTOWN TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED JULY 20, 1775.

Our new Assembly met yesterday, and only chose a Speaker and a Clerk. I shall now endeavour to inform you what has happened in the military way since my last. The attempt on Long-Island, the taking off all the stock, and afterwards returning to burn the buildings, &c., (which you will have in the papers,) was certainly a bold intrepid manœuvre, and as such, astonished our enemies. The barges full of armed men were afraid to attack our whale-boats at a proper distance, and the armed vessels, either agitated by fear, or destitute of judgment, did it without execution. The next thing that took place was, the possessing and fortifying a post by Brown's house, on the neck, near their lines; this has been effected with the loss of only one man, and he not employed there, though they worked in open sight of them, and exposed to an incessant fire from their cannon, which our people treated with the extremest contempt, not so much as leaving their work or firing a shot. No general movement has taken place. There was an appearance of one the day before yesterday, on the Roxbury side, but they disappointed General Thomas, who commands there, and made an excellent disposition to receive them. Roxbury is amazingly strong. I believe it would puzzle ten thousand troops to go through it, I mean of the best in the world. I am just told that our boats have this day been at the Light-House, and burnt it, in spite of the firing from the men-of-war and a number of boats. I hear it was executed by three hundred Rhode-Islanders, without any loss. It is said they are more afraid of our whale-boats than we are of their men-of-war; and a few armed vessels, I am well convinced, would produce great consequences. Captain Derby, who went to England with the account of the battle of the nineteenth of April, returned two days ago. He was there eight days, and came away before General Gage's packet arrived. He says trade and stocks were amazingly affected in that short time. Lord Dartmouth sent for him three times, but he refused to go; and when he threatened him, he decamped, got on board, and came off without clearing or entering. By a letter from London by him, I fancy General Gage is to expect no re-enforcement this fall. The troops are very sickly in Boston, and greatly reduced.

TO ALL SEAFARING PEOPLE.

Preston, at Boston, July 20, 1775.

This is to give notice, that the Light-House on Thatcher's Island, (commonly called Cape Anne Lights) and the Light-House at the entrance of Boston Harbour, are burnt and destroyed by the Rebels.

And further notice is given, that all seafaring people be careful that they are not deceived by false lights, which the Rebels threaten to hang out, in order to decoy vessels into destruction. By command of the Admiral:

G. GEFERINA.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED SALEM, JULY 20, 1775.

I have just time to acquaint you, that within these few days we have had offers from some maritime Powers, secretly conveyed to us, that if we wanted assistance from either of them, in money or men-of-war, we shall be supplied, upon condition that when peace is restored to these unhappy Colonies, we open a trade with them, and exclude our Mother Country from any share of it. Their offers are at present rejected. The Spaniards have now in the West-Indies a fleet of men-of-war of great force, and the Spanish Islands are full of soldiers, waiting in expectation that we shall embrace their offers. But I hope Government will find out some means to bring about a reconciliation; for we are so loyal, that nothing but depredation can make us submit to go under the Spanish yoke. All things have remained quiet since the seventeenth of last month, except some small skirmishes. I send this by our post to New-York, so that I hope it will come safe to hand.

Newbern, North-Carolina, July 21, 1775.

Agreeable to an order of the honourable the Continental Congress, yesterday, the twentieth instant, was observed here as a day of fasting, humiliation, and prayer, to humble ourselves before God, and to deprecate his impending judgments now held over this land for our sins and offences. Divine service was performed in the church, and a very animating and spirited discourse, suitable to the occasion, was read by a member of the Committee, to a very crowded audience, who were assembled on the occasion. A deputation from the Committee had been ordered, previous to the day, to wait on the Reverend Mr. James Reed, Minister of the Parish, to request and entreat him to perform divine service in his church on the fast day, and deliver a sermon; but their entreaties were vain, he giving as a substantial reason, that as he was one of the missionaries of the honourable Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, he should render himself obnoxious to the Ministry, and of course lose his mission.

Committee Chamber, July 21, 1775.

The Committee taking into consideration the unaccountable behaviour and conduct of Mr. Reed, in deserting his congregation yesterday, when almost all ranks and denominations of Christians among us were assembled at the church, by order of the Continental Congress, to humiliate ourselves before God, by fasting and prayer, to avert from us his heavy judgments now hanging over us; have resolved, that the vestry of this Parish be earnestly requested to suspend the said James Reed from his ministerial function in the said Parish, and that they immediately direct their church-wardens to stop payment of the said Mr. Reed's salary as Minister of the said Parish.

In General Committee, July 23, 1775.

The Select Committee having passed a vote of censure on the Reverend Mr. James Reed, for refusing to perform divine service in his church on the day set apart by the Continental Congress for a fast, a motion was made that the said suspension be agreed to; whereupon it was resolved unanimously, that the said suspension be confirmed.

BENJAMIN HARRISON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, July 21, 1775.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your very acceptable favour of the tenth instant, by express. Your fatigue and various kinds of trouble, I dare say are great; but they are not more than I expected, knowing the people you have to deal with by the sample we have here. The Congress have taken the two regiments, now raising in Connecticut, into service, which, with riflemen and recruits to your regiments, will, I hope, make up the number voted by your Council of War. I wish, with all my heart, your troops were better, and your stores more complete; every thing that we can do here, to put you in the best posture possible, I think you may depend will be done. I trust you will have a supply soon of ammunition; without an accident you may depend on it. The want of Engineers, I fear, is not to be supplied in America. Some folks here seemed much displeased at your report on that head. They affirm there are two very good ones with you—a Colonel Gridley, I think, is one. I took the liberty to say that they must be mistaken; they were certainly either not in camp, or could not have the skill they were pleased to say they had. This, in my soft way, put a stop to any thing more on the subject. Indeed, my friend, I do not know what to think of some of these men; they seem to be exceeding hearty in the cause, but still wish to keep every thing amongst themselves. Our President is quite of a different cast—noble, disinterested, and generous, to a very great degree. The Congress have given you the appointment of three Brigade Majors. Mr. Trumbull has the office you proposed for him. The appointment of the Commissary of Artillery, ditto of Musters, and Quartermaster-General, are also left to your disposal. Nothing is yet done as to the hospital, but I will bring it on very soon. Your brothers in the Delegation have recommended it to our Convention to send some Virginians to the camp, at the expense of our Colony, to learn the military art; and I hope you will see them soon. We have given the commission of First Brigadier to Mr. Thomas. As Putnam's commission was delivered, it would, perhaps, have offended the old gentleman to have superseded him; the other, I hope, will still act. The Congress have, from your account, a high opinion of him, and I dare say will grant any thing in their power that he may hereafter require. Your hint for a remove of the Congress to some place nearer to you, will come on to-morrow. I think it will not answer your expectations if we should remove; you shall have the result in the close of this. The military chest, I hope, will be supplied soon; they begin to strike the bills this day, so that I hope some may be forwarded to you next week; what has occasioned the delay in this article I know not, without an imitation of the Congress, in its slowness, is become fashionable. I have had no further account from our country about the Governor, except that he is still at Yorktown, with three men-of-war. He, Montague, and Foye, went the other day by water to his farm, and were within three or four minutes of being all taken by Captain Meredith, with seventy men from Hanover, who are, with about one hundred and fifty from other counties, guarding Williamsburgh from any attempts that he may make with his boiled crabs. Meredith says his intentions were to carry his Lordship to Williamsburgh, to put him into the Palace, and promise him protection, to convince him and the world that no injury was intended him; however, as he missed his stroke, I dare say he will be charged with intending to murder him. We think the season too far advanced to send you any more men from the southward, but it seems to be the general opinion to send some thousands early in the spring. Should this be the case, if I have the honour of being here, you may depend on my care of Mr. Johnston. We have an imperfect account of an attack on New-York by some of the over-lake Indians. I hope it is not true; indeed, (betwixt you and I,) I give very little credit to any thing from that quarter, and wish I could say I had no reason to be suspicious of those people. We yesterday received despatches from Georgia; they have come into the Union, and have appointed Delegates to the Congress. They have even done more; they, with the South-Carolinians, armed a vessel, and have taken a ship with one hundred and forty barrels of the King's powder, which they have divided betwixt them.

Twenty-third.—The debate about our remove was taken up yesterday, and determined in the negative. I proposed a Committee, but could not carry it. I think the last method would have answered your purpose best, but the gentlemen could not think of parting with the least particle of their power. Pendleton left us yesterday; all Maryland are gone off this day, and we intend to follow them next Sunday, if nothing material happens betwixt this and then. Our going, I expect, will break up the Congress; indeed I think it is high time there was an end of it: we have been too long together.

Edmund Randolph is here, and has the greatest desire to be with you. He has begged of me to say something in his favour, and that if you can with propriety, you will keep one of the places now in your gift for him; he is not able to support himself, or he would not ask this of you. You know him as well as I do; he is one of the cleverest young men in America, and if Mr. Reed should leave you, his place of Secretary can't be better supplied. He will set off for New-York in a few days, and I beg it as a favour of you to write a line to him, to be left at the post-office there till called for. This deserving young man was in high repute in Virginia, and he fears his father's conduct may tend to lessen him in the esteem of his countrymen. He has taken this method without the advice of his friends, to raise him into favour. As he is determined on the thing I am sure our good old Speaker will be much obliged for any favour you show him. Applications of this sort, I fear, will be too frequent. I shall avoid them as much as possible; but I could not refuse it on this occasion, well knowing that a most valuable young man, and one that I love, without some step of this sort, may, from the misconduct of his parent, be lost to his Country, which now stands much in need of men of his abilities. We have a report that Bob McKenzie was killed at Bunker's Hill. Is it true? I had a great friendship for him formerly, but can't help saying I shall be glad to hear the news confirmed.

Twenty-fourth.—Nothing new in Congress, or from Virginia to-day. I should therefore have closed this, without saying more, had not an application been made to me to introduce to you Captain Thomas Price, of a Company of Riflemen from Maryland. He comes with a high character from thence, and is looked on as most firmly attached to the cause of America. He has a large family, which he has left merely to forward the service. The Deputies from that country are gone home. I have seen a letter in his favour to Mr. Tilghman, highly commending him; and as he could not, through that channel, get a recommendation, I have been prevailed on to introduce him, which liberty I hope you will excuse. I am, my dear Sir, yours, &c.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

BUCKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Bucks County, July 21, 1775.

Complaints being made by several officers of the Associated Companies, that sundry persons from various causes had attempted to raise second Companies in their Townships, whereby those already associated were weakened, and in some instances had been greatly insulted:

The Committee having considered the same, are of opinion, that as harmony and unanimity are essentially necessary in prosecuting the present unhappy contest, and as Field-Officers are now appointed for the respective Battalions of the County, no second Companies ought to be raised in any Township, without leave being first obtained from them for that purpose.

Whereas, several persons who were chosen members of this Committee in December last, have hitherto neglected to attend the same, and others who have attended, have, from scruples of conscience, made application to be discharged, the Committee therefore request all those who do not purpose attending for the future to advertise their respective Townships with their determination, at the same time appointing some convenient time and place for the inhabitants to meet, and choose other suitable persons in their room, who are desired to meet the Committee on Monday, the 21st of August, at the house of John Bogart, in Buckingham Township.

By order of the Committee:

HENRY WYNKOOP, Clerk.

HUNTINGTON (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

Committee Chamber, Huntington, July 21, 1775.

Mr. Hobart laid before the Committee a Letter from the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York in the recess of the Provincial Congress, dated New-York, July 14, 1775, directed to him, containing information that George Youngs and his son, John Brush, and one Conkling, were concerned in Provisions in such manner as they must inevitably serve to supply General Gage's Fleet and Army at Boston; and inclosing notes taken from two witnesses on that subject, which were read. Messrs. Youngs, Brush, and Conkling being present, acknowledged that they had sent two Sloops loaded with Provisions to the eastward, but it was in consequence of an agreement with the inhabitants of Portsmouth, in New-Hampshire; that upon their arrival in the harbour of Portsmouth, they were taken by two English men-of-war; and though Governour Wentworth and the Committee of the Town claimed the Provisions as theirs by contract, they were sent, very much against their inclination, to Boston, where they were obliged to sell their Provisions under great disadvantages, and at great loss; since which they have discontinued their trade to the eastward, nor have they at present any thoughts of resuming it. In confirmation of all which, they produced Timothy Titus, who was mate of one of the sloops, who deposed as follows, viz:

Timothy Titus deposes: that he was mate of the Sloop Elizabeth, whereof Cornelius Conkling was master, for the two voyages she lately made to Portsmouth, in New-Hamp- shire; that about the latter end of April last, being at Portsmouth aforesaid, when John Conkling, in a sloop loaded by John Brush of Huntington, was there, he was knowing to a contract made by the said Cornelius Conkling and John Conkling, with the inhabitants of Portsmouth, to deliver two cargoes of Provisions there, with all convenient speed, provided they could clear out from New-York; that on the 18th of May following, said two sloops sailed from the east end of Long-Island, and on the 21st they arrived within a few hours of each other in Portsmouth harbour, where they were taken by the Canceaux and Scarborough men-of-war; and notwithstanding the application of Governour Wentworth and the Committee of Portsmouth, they were sent to Boston under convoy of the Sphinx, sloop-of-war, where they were obliged to sell their cargoes at the price the agents were pleased to give; after which they were permitted to come away. And this deponent further saith, he has never heard any persons concerned in the aforesaid voyage propose to send their sloops upon another voyage to the eastward.

TIMOTHY TITUS.

Sworn the 21st July, 1775.

Before me,

JOHN SLOSS HOBART,
Justice of the Peace.

The Committee taking the premises into consideration, came to the following Resolution, viz:

Resolved unanimously, That the said Youngs and his son, Brush, and Conkling, in this matter have not contravened the Association, nor in any wise disobeyed the recommendations of the Continental or Provincial Congresses.

Whereas, it appears that great uneasiness prevails in the minds of many people upon this subject, arising from a laudable zeal to prevent any Provisions being sent to the instruments of tyranny and oppression at Boston, Ordered, That the parties concerned be allowed a copy of the Minutes for publication.

THOMAS WICKES, Chairman.

COL. JAMES CLINTON TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Little-Britain, July 21, 1775.

I have just now received your letter dated July 17th, requesting me to prepare and lay before the Congress of this Colony at New-York, a state of my Regiment, and of the number of men ready and fit for service in each company, and likewise requesting me to inform the Congress when the Regiment will be complete and ready to take the field, with all possible despatch.

I can only acquaint you that I have mustered Captain Nicholson's company, and Captain Denton's; Nicholson's is complete, Denton's wants but four men. Captains Brown and Hasbrouck, at Kingston, have made but small progress, as they have but lately begun to enlist; but I make no doubt they will soon get their men. I have seen Captain Billings at Poughkeepsie, who says his company is complete, and I suppose Captain Dubois's is by this time. I ordered him to apply to Captain Swartwout to muster the two last companies, as he was appointed for that purpose.

I have had no account from Captain Johnston, at Orange-town, nor the three Captains on Long-Island; but I suppose they have made a return to the Congress agreeable to the directions given them in their warrant. As the companies appointed to my Regiment are at so great a distance from each other, it is almost impossible for me to make a return of the Regiment till I meet the Congress in New-York next Tuesday, which I intend to do as near the time as possible. I am, Sir, your humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON.

To Henry Williams, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety for the City of New-York.

P. S. I find arms a scarce article amongst the men, they not having a sufficient quantity to exercise them.

ELISHA PHELPS TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Albany, July 21, A. D. 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: Being appointed by his Honour the Governour of Connecticut, according to your resolve, to be Commissary, to receive at Albany provisions, &c., from the Provincial Convention of New-York, when I received the small stores of Mr. Bleecker, the Commissary in Albany, found them very deficient, according to the act of the Colony of Connecticut; on which I immediately applied to the Committee, who told me they had no orders to purchase; but some of them gave me, as their private advice, to purchase according to act of said Colony, whose advice I followed, and have purchased about three hundred barrels of flour, thirty barrels of molasses, some rum, sugar, vinegar, &c., and some hospital stores; which I have done on the credit of the United Colonies of North America; would therefore take it as a great favour, if I could have from your Honours a sum of money sufficient to discharge said debts, and also to supply the Army with other necessities, and pay wagoners, &c., as they complain much for want of money, which I suppose would be much for the advantage of the cause we are embarked in, and to the honour of your humble servant; which business you may depend will be done with as much spirit and despatch as possible.

I have thought proper, as a part of my duty, to make return of the provision received and forwarded, as I have done to his Honour the Governour of Connecticut, and to the Provincial Congress of New-York and Massachusetts-Bay. Whilst, honoured gentlemen, I think I am doing my duty in the cause of my country, I am, with the greatest respect, your humble servant, at command,

ELISHA PHELPS.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

Albany, July 21, 1775.

JOHN N. BLEECKER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 21, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Although I intimated in mine of the 3d instant, that I would soon transmit accounts of the expenses in my department here, yet it is not in my power at present to give such an exact state of the charges as I could wish, as several accounts have not yet been delivered in for provisions, &c., supplied for the Provincial service. But being desirous to render accounts, under these circumstances I enclose you general accounts of stores and provisions received, purchased on credit, forwarded, issued, &c. You have also enclosed an account of expenses, so far as have come to my hands, by which a balance of £1,225 remains due, which I have in some measure engaged would be soon paid; and as those with whom the debts are contracted make daily application to me for money, in particular the wagoners, who have been employed, and intimate, that unless their demands are satisfied very soon they must decline riding, since they have not wherewith to purchase hard fodder for their horses, I therefore hope you will be pleased to put it in my power to fulfil my promises, by furnishing me with a sufficient sum of money to discharge the above-mentioned balance; and all publick moneys which have or may be delivered into my hands, I shall account for in a future settlement, by producing such vouchers for disbursements as I doubt not will meet your approbation.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, and most humble servant,

JOHN N. BLEECKER.

P. V. B. Livingston, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 21, 1775.

SIR: I arrived here early on Tuesday morning, the 18th instant, having been detained at Fort George and the Landing in giving directions and making preparations to keep up the communication, that the provision and stores for the Army may be forwarded without interruption, whenever they shall be sent.

I cannot find that any intelligence has been received from Canada, on which any great dependance can be made; yet accounts from all quarters agree that the Canadians are friendly to us; that they refuse to assist General Carleton; and that the Indians will remain neuter. I have great reason to believe it is so.

A Canadian, who left Canada thirteen days ago, informs me that a large body of Indians had come there; that Governour Carleton attempted to engage them to fight against us; that he believed he would have little success; that some of the young men inclined to take up the hatchet, but that the elderly men opposed it; that the Canadians will not act against us, some of the noblesse and very lower kind excepted; that timber was preparing on the north side of the St. John's to construct some craft; that he saw nothing of a floating battery; that they have thrown up lines strengthened with a chevaux-de-frise, a picketed ditch and abattis; that about a league on this side they have an advanced guard of fifty men, covered by a small intrenchment.

This, then, is the time to gain intelligence with certainty by going to St. John's with a respectable body, giving the Canadians to understand, when we arrive there, that we mean nothing more than to prevent the regular Troops from getting a naval strength, and interrupting the friendly intercourse that has subsisted between us and them. But, unfortunately, not one earthly thing has been done here to enable me to move hence; I have neither boats sufficient, nor any materials prepared for building them. The stores I ordered from New-York are not yet arrived. I have therefore not a nail, no pitch, no oakum, and want a variety of articles indispensably necessary, which I estimated and delivered to the New-York Congress on the 3d inst. An almost equal scarcity of ammunition subsists, no powder having yet come to hand; not a gun-carriage for the few proper guns we have; and as yet very little provision; two hundred Troops less than by my last return, these badly, very badly armed indeed; and one poor armourer to repair their guns.

Armourers and armourers' tools, I had also ordered up, but not yet arrived. However, I believe the New-York Congress have sent off the articles I requested of them; if so, I shall probably soon have them here. I shall not delay a moment in making the necessary preparations to move, agreeably to the orders you have been pleased to give me. Since my arrival I have repaired one saw mill, and given directions to do the same with another. The first will begin to work on Sunday, the other can only begin when the saws arrive, which are amongst the other things I have ordered from New-York.

Until the stores from New-York arrive, I shall employ my carpenters (about thirty in number, exclusive of what I may get out of the Troops) in procuring timber and plank for the boats, &c., &c.

Although I made not a moment's delay in issuing the necessary orders, agreeably to your resolutions, and those of the New-York Congress, for levying five hundred of the Green Mountain Boys, yet nothing has been done by that people, occasioned by disputes and jealousies among themselves, on the appointment of officers. Messrs. Allen and Warner have both been here, and left this only yesterday. They wish to appoint the officers themselves, and have applied to me for that purpose; but your orders are positive, and the people averse to it.

I now find that my conjectures, given you in a former letter, as to their numbers, were well founded, for both Allen and Warner declare that they will be obliged to recruit in New-England to complete the five hundred men to be raised; so that this intended corps will in all probability not join me, if at all, until September.

At Crown Point an intrenchment was begun to shelter the Troops, before my arrival, but nothing has been done at this place, and we are in a perfectly defenceless state. I have, however, this day begun lines, on which I propose to employ as many men as I can spare, that I may be able to make some defence, and preserve the post in case of an attack, which General Carleton must have attempted had he been informed of our real situation. A few Troops without any shelter, with little ammunition, less discipline, lulled in perfect security, might have fallen an easy prey to an enterprising man. I hope, however, soon to be in a situation to receive him properly should he venture to come aided by Canadians and Indians.

The Connecticut Troops here are destitute of tents. They are now crowded in very bad barracks, which I fear will be introductory of disease. I have written to Governor Trumbull on this head.

Enclose you a copy of a letter dated the 17th instant, I have just received from Governor Trumbull. I am very sorry that the Colony of Connecticut has made such large allowance for the daily subsistence of their men. It is difficult and expensive to procure the things they are to have agreeable to the law of their Colony here, and what is worse, other Troops that may join will certainly expect the like allowance, and a discrimination cannot be made in favour of the Troops of any particular Colony. A resolve of Congress what shall be the Continental allowance, and that no Colony should send their Troops any thing more than what shall be so prescribed, would settle the matter and prevent that jealousy which will otherwise take place.

I have sent for a man, the only one to be depended upon, to carry a letter into Canada, and to return with information. I momentarily expect him, and shall despatch him immediately after his arrival.

The measures I took before I left New-York and Albany, have relieved me from much anxiety on the score of provisions, with which I now hope the Troops will be better supplied. Exclusive of the extraordinary expenditures of provision, it has been so scandalously neglected at the several posts on its way up, that I shall sustain a considerable loss in the article of pork. Suspecting this, I ordered salt up before I left Saratoga, to save all that can be.

Mr. Mott of Connecticut has been appointed an Engineer by that Colony, with the rank of Colonel. What his abilities are in that way I know not, having as yet seen none of his works. I beg to know if his appointment is to be confirmed by Congress.

The only Troops from this Colony that have yet joined the Army, are those mentioned in the return I had the honour to send you, which were enlisted by order of the Albany Committee previous to the order of Congress for raising Troops in it.

The person I sent for to go to Canada is so lame that he cannot stir. I shall venture a letter with the Frenchman who brought me the intelligence I have given you, and despatch him to day.

There are such a variety of persons employed in providing these Troops, that they involve me in great difficulties. No less than fifty milch cows are sent up for the use of Colonel Hinman's Regiment, (our working cattle and the fat cattle have hardly any feed, occasioned by the severest drought ever known in this country;) I have ordered them back to New-England as useless to the men, distressing to the service, and as what would be another source of uneasiness, if we should be joined by other Troops.

A set of people in this country, calling themselves a Committee-of-War, by what authority I know not, have taken Colonel Skene's forge and farm into possession, under pretence of working it for the publick; but as it has turned out, to embezzle every thing. I have given orders for them to quit it, and to restore it to Colonel Skene's agent, or overseer, that no disgrace may be brought on our cause by such lawless proceedings.

Since the return I had the honour of sending to you, eight batteaus, built on Lake George, have been brought here, each capable of carrying twenty men and twenty days' provisions.

I am, Sir, with the most sincere respect, your most obedient and most humble servant, PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 21, 1775.

SIR: I am just favoured with a line from Governor Trumbull; the enclosed is part of what he writes me, and of what I have said on that subject to the Continental Congress.

It is not easy to conceive the difficulties I labour under for want of many of the articles contained in the estimate which I had the honour to deliver you on the 3d instant, especially for the intrenching tools and materials for building.

The swivel guns and the lead I find a sufficiency of here, you will therefore please to order these, if not already sent, to be stopped; instead thereof to add one ton of oakum, twenty barrels of pitch, ten lanterns, and two pair of fort colours. The truck carriages were to be sent provided they were ready made; as they are not, you will please to take no farther notice of them.

By a letter from Mr. Curtenius, of the 10th, I find he has delayed sending the oars, on account of the heavy expense of carriage; but even in that case they will come cheaper than to make them here by the workmen from New-York.

I am very anxious to have the New-York Troops with me. Their arrival will, therefore, afford me great satisfaction. I hope some are on their way up. I have appointed a very good man as a sutler to supply them here, who is now preparing for their reception. Too many of them are very disadvantageous to the soldiers, and destructive to the service.

Intelligence which I have received from Canada advises that a numerous body of Indians are there; that Governor Carleton attempted to engage them against us; that he believed he would have little success; that some of the young men inclined to take up the hatchet, but that the elderly opposed it; that the Canadians are averse to enter into the controversy, the noblesse and very lower order excepted.

I am, Sir, with great respect, your most obedient humble servant, PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Peter V. Brugh Livingston, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOR TRUMBULL.

Ticonderoga, July 21, 1775.

SIR: Your Honour's letter of the 17th instant was delivered this morning. I shall immediately write on the subject of providing for the Troops to the New-York Congress, and enclose so much of your letter as relates to that subject. It gave me pain to learn that not less than fifty cows were driving up here, for the use of Colonel Hinman's Regiment. Our working cattle are in a starving condition, the country being parched up by the excessive droughts, and such an additional number of cattle would destroy the little feed we have left, and be of very little use to the Troops. These would be sufficient reasons to order them back; but if grass was plenty here I would not wish to have them; troops from New-York are coming up, and such a discrimination in the allowance would create me much trouble. I am happy to find Colonel Hinman and several of his officers quite agree in sentiment with me. I am informed the cows are in good order, and that they may be soon made beef; I have, therefore, directed Major Sheldon, who, I understand, has charge of them, to put them into pasture wherever he can get it, until he shall receive your Honour's direction how to dispose of them.

It is much to be lamented that we are so totally unprepared to avail ourselves of the favourable disposition of the Canadians. I was in hopes to have found something done to enable the Troops to move, but every thing is wanted; I am destitute of every material for making the necessary preparations. I hope, however, in a little while, to make all obstacles vanish; much may be done when people set to business with hand and heart. I am, Sir, with sentiments of respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c., &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp at Cambridge, July 21, 1775.

SIR: Since I did myself the honour of addressing you the fourteenth instant, I have received advice from Governor Trumbull that the Assembly of Connecticut had voted, and that they are now raising two Regiments, of seven hundred men each, in consequence of an application from the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts-Bay. The Rhode-Island Assembly has also made an augmentation for this purpose. These re-enforcements, with the riflemen who are daily expected, and such recruits as may come in to fill up the Regiments here, will, I apprehend, compose an army sufficiently strong to oppose any force which may be brought against us at present. I am very sensible, that the heavy expense necessarily attendant upon this campaign, will call for the utmost frugality and care, and would therefore, if possible, avoid enlisting one unnecessary man. As this is the first certain account of the destination of these new raised troops, I thought proper to communicate my sentiments as early as possible, lest the Congress should act upon my letter of the tenth, and raise troops in the Southern Colonies; which, in my present judgment, may be dispensed with.

For these eight days past there have been no movements in either camp of any consequence. On our side, we have continued the works without any intermission, and they are now so far advanced as to leave us little to apprehend on that score. On the side of the enemy, they have also been very industrious in finishing their lines, both on Bunker's Hill and Roxbury Neck. In this interval, also, their transports have arrived from New-York, and they have been employed in landing and stationing their men. I have been able to collect no certain account of the numbers arrived, but the enclosed letter, wrote (though not signed) by Mr. Sheriff Lee, and delivered me by Captain Darby, (who went express with an account of the Lexington battle,) will enable us to form a pretty accurate judgment. The increase of tents and men in the Town of Boston is very obvious, but all my accounts from thence agree that there is a great mortality, occasioned by the want of vegetables and fresh meat, and that their loss in the late battle at Charlestown, from the few recoveries of their wounded, is greater than at first supposed. The condition of the inhabitants detained in Boston is very distressing; they are equally destitute of the comfort of fresh provisions, and many of them are so reduced in their circumstances as to be unable to supply themselves with salt; such fish as the soldiery leave is their principal support. Added to all this, such suspicion and jealousy prevails, that they can scarcely speak, or even look, without exposing themselves to some species of military execution.

I have not been able, from any intelligence I have received, to form any certain judgment of the future operations of the enemy. Sometimes I have suspected an intention of detaching a part of their Army to some part of the coast, as they have been building a number of flat-bottomed boats, capable of holding two hundred men each. But from their works, and the language held at Boston, there is reason to think they expect the attack from us, and are principally engaged in preparing themselves against it. I have ordered all the whale boats along the coast to be collected, and some of them are employed every night to watch the motions of the enemy by water, so as to guard as much as possible against any surprise.

Upon my arrival and since, some complaints have been preferred against officers for cowardice in the late action on Bunker's Hill. Though there were several strong circumstances and a very general opinion against them, none have been condemned, except a Captain Callender, of the artillery, who was immediately cashiered. I have been sorry to find it an uncontradicted fact, that the principal failure of duty that day was in the officers, though many of them distinguished themselves by their gallant behaviour. The soldiers generally shewed great spirit and resolution.

Next to the more immediate and pressing duties of putting our lines in as secure a state as possible, attending to the movements of the enemy, and gaining intelligence, my great concern is to establish order, regularity and discipline; without which, our numbers would embarrass us, and in case of action, general confusion must infallibly ensue. In order to this, I propose to divide the Army into three divisions, at the head of each will be a General Officer; these divisions to be again subdivided into Brigades, under their respective Brigadiers. But the difficulty arising from the arrangement of the General Officers, and waiting the farther proceedings of the Congress on this subject, has much retarded my progress in this most necessary work. I should be very happy to receive their final commands, as any determination would enable me to proceed in my plan.

General Spencer returned to the camp two days ago, and has consented to serve under Putnam, rather than leave the Army entirely. I have heard nothing from General Pomeroy; should he wholly retire, I apprehend it will be necessary to supply his place as soon as possible. General Folsom proposes also to retire.

In addition to the officers mentioned in mine of the tenth instant, I would humbly propose that some provision should be made for a Judge Advocate and Provost Marshal; the necessity of the first appointment was so great, that I was obliged to nominate a Mr. Tudor, who was well recommended to me, and now executes the office, under an expectation of receiving Captain's pay—an allowance, in my opinion, scarcely adequate to the service in new raised troops, where there are Courts-Martial every day. However, as that is the proportion in the regular Army, and he is contented, there will be no necessity of an addition.

I must also renew my request as to money, and the appointment of a Paymaster. I have forbore urging matters of this nature, from my knowledge of the many important concerns which engage the attention of the Congress; but as I find my difficulties thicken every day, I make no doubt suitable regard will be paid to a necessity of this kind. The inconvenience of borrowing such sums as are constantly requisite must be too plain for me to enlarge upon, and is a situation from which I should be very happy to be relieved.

Upon the experience I have had, and the best consideration of the appointment of the several offices of Commissary-General, Mustermaster-General, Quartermaster-General, Paymaster-General, and Commissary of Artillery, I am clearly of opinion, that they not only conduce to order, despatch, and discipline, but that it is a measure of economy. The delay, the waste, and the unpunishable neglect of duty, arising from these offices being in commission in several hands, evidently shew that the publick expense must be finally enhanced. I have experienced the want of these officers in completing the returns of men, ammunition, and stores; the latter are yet imperfect, from the number of hands in which they are dispersed. I have enclosed the last weekly return, which is more accurate than the former, and hope in a little time we shall be perfectly regular in this, as well as several other necessary branches of duty.

I have made inquiry into the establishment of the Hospital, and find it in a very unsettled condition. There is no principal Director, or any subordination among the Surgeons; of consequence, disputes and contention have arisen, and must continue, until it is reduced to some system. I could wish it were immediately taken into consideration, as the lives and health of both officers and men so much depend upon a due regulation of this department. I have been particularly attentive to the least symptoms of the small-pox, and hitherto we have been so fortunate as to have every person removed so soon as not only to prevent any communication, but any alarm or apprehension it might give in the camp. We shall continue the utmost vigilance against this most dangerous enemy.

In an army properly organized there are sundry offices of an inferior kind, such as Wagon-master, Master-Carpenter, &c.; but I doubt whether my powers are sufficiently extensive for such appointments. If it is thought proper to repose such a trust in me, I shall be governed in the discharge of it by a strict regard to economy and the publick interest.

My instructions from the honourable Congress direct, that no Troops are to be disbanded without their express direction, nor to be recruited to more than double the number of the enemy. Upon this subject I beg leave to represent, that unless the Regiments in this Province are more successful in recruiting than I have reason to expect, a reduction of some of them will be highly necessary, as the publick are put to the whole expense of an establishment of officers, while the real strength of the Regiment, which consists in the rank and file, is defective. In case of such a reduction, doubtless some of the privates, and all the officers, would return home; but many of the former would go into the remaining Regiments, and, having had some experience, would fill them up with useful men. I so plainly perceive the expense of this campaign will exceed any calculation hitherto made, that I am particularly anxious to strike off every unnecessary charge. You will therefore, Sir, be pleased to favour me with explicit directions from the Congress on the mode of this reduction, if it shall appear necessary, that no time may be lost when such necessity appears.

Yesterday we had an account that the light-house was on fire, by whom, and under what orders, I have not yet learned; but we have reason to believe it has been done by some of our irregulars.

You will please to present me to the Congress with the utmost duty and respect; and believe me to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. Captain Darby's stay in England was so short that he brings no other information than what the enclosed letter, and the newspapers which will accompany this, contain. General Gage's despatches had not arrived, and the Ministry affected to disbelieve the whole account, treating it as a fiction, or, at most, an affair of little consequence. The fall of Stocks was very inconsiderable.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Cambridge Camp, July 21, 1775, Five o'clock, P. M.

SIR: Since closing the letters which accompany this, I have received an account of the destruction of the Light-house, a copy of which I have the honour to enclose, and of again assuring you that I am, with great respect, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. I have also received a more authentick account of the loss of the enemy in the late battle, than any yet received. Doctor Winship, who lodged in the same house with an officer of the Marines, assures me they had exactly one thousand and forty-three killed and wounded, of whom three hundred fell on the field, or died within a few hours; many of the wounded are since dead.

G. W.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 15, 1775.

(Parole, Virginia.)

(Countersign, Maryland.)

The Commanding Officers of each Regiment to report the names of such men, in their respective corps, as are most expert in the management of whale-boats.

When any commissioned or non-commissioned officer is sent upon any detachment or duty of honour or fatigue, or to see the execution of any particular work, he is, so soon as the service is performed, to make a report thereof to his commanding officer.

It being found advantageous to the publick service to remove sundry horned cattle and sheep from the ground upon which they were grazing near Chelsea, (to prevent their falling into the enemy's hands,) it is earnestly recommended to the several Commissaries, to purchase such of them as are fit for slaughter, of the owners, in order that they may suffer the least loss possible from the unavoidable necessity of removing them from the rapacious claws of our enemies.

Colonel Gridley, Chief Engineer, is desired to report what chevaux-de-frise are made, and what forwardness those are in that are now making. It is necessary those upon hand be completed without delay.

Notwithstanding the orders already given, the General hears with astonishment that not only soldiers, but officers unauthorized, are continually conversing with the officers and sentries of the enemy. Any officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, or any person whatsoever, who is detected holding any conversation, or carrying on any correspondence with any of the officers or sentries of the advanced posts of the enemy, will be immediately brought before a General Court-Martial, and punished with the utmost severity. The General is alone to judge of the propriety of any intercourse with the enemy, and no one else is to presume to interfere.

The Chief Engineer, Colonel Gridley, to order an Engineer and a Field-Officer of Artillery to go round the lines and redoubts to examine if the guns are placed properly in the embrasures, and if the embrasures are properly made, and properly sloped towards the country. The Engineer and Artillery Officer to report to the Commander-in-Chief as soon as they have obeyed this order.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 16, 1775.

(Parole, Carolina.)

(Countersign, Springfield.)

The Continental Congress having earnestly recommended, that "Thursday next, the 20th instant, be observed by the inhabitants of all the English Colonies upon this Continent as a day of publick humiliation, fasting, and prayer, that they may with united hearts and voice unfeignedly confess their sins before God, and supplicate the all-wise and merciful disposer of events to avert the desolation and calamities of an unnatural war," the General orders that day to be religiously observed by the forces under his command, exactly in manner directed by the Proclamation of the Continental Congress. It is therefore strictly enjoined on all officers and soldiers (not upon duty) to attend divine service, at the accustomed places of worship, as well in the lines as the encampments and quarters; and it is expected, that all those who go to worship do take their arms, ammunition, and accoutrements, and are prepared for immediate action, if called upon. If, in the judgment of the officers, the works should appear to be in such forwardness as the utmost security of the camp requires, they will command their men to abstain from all labour upon that solemn day.

It was with much surprise and concern that the General, in passing along the New-Hampshire lines yesterday, observed a most wanton, mischievous, and unprofitable abuse of property, in the destruction of many valuable trees, which were standing along the side of the road, out of the way of our works or guns; he therefore orders, that an effective stop be put to such practices for the future, or severe punishment will fall upon the transgressors of this order.

William Palfrey, Esquire, is appointed Aid-de-Camp to Major-General Lee; all orders, whether written or verbal, coming from General Lee, and delivered by Captain Palfrey, are to be punctually obeyed.

A particular Return, to be delivered to the Adjutant-General to-morrow at orderly time, of the Regiment of Artillery, distinguishing how every man and officer in that corps is at present employed, and where posted.

Head-Quarters, July 17, 1775.

(Parole, Boston.)

(Countersign, Salem.)

There is reason to apprehend, that the General Orders are not regularly published to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the Army. As pleading ignorance of orders will not for the future be admitted in excuse of any delinquency, it is once more ordered, that the Adjutants of the several corps will be exact in seeing the orders read every evening to the men off duty, of their respective corps, as they may depend upon answering before a Court-Martial for any neglect in obeying this order.

The General Court-Martial, whereof Col. John Nixon is President, to sit again to-morrow morning at eight o'clock, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them; all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

There being a great neglect in sending in the Returns to the Adjutant-General, as directed by the General Orders of Friday last, (especially from the Regiments posted in and near Roxbury.) the General assures Commanding Officers of corps from whom the Returns are expected, that he will not for the future pass over the slightest neglect in sending Returns to Head-Quarters at the time directed by the General Orders. If there is any remissness in the Adjutants, the Colonels will confine the transgressors.

After Orders.

Captain Benjamin Perkins, of Colonel Little's Regiment, confined by Colonel Doolittle for assisting and abetting soldiers to mutiny, in rescuing a prisoner from the quarter-guard of Colonel Doolittle's Regiment, is to be tried to-morrow morning by the Court-Martial whereof Colonel Nixon is President; all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

Head-Quarters before Boston, July 18, 1775.

(Parole, Wilmington.)

(Countersign, Chester.)

As the chevaux-de-frise are not in readiness, the officers commanding the different lines and redoubts are, as speedily as possible, to provide a sufficient number of gabions, which are to lay empty at the entrances of their respective posts, in order to be filled up as occasion may require. General Putnam will forthwith order his post to be furnished with a large quantity of fascines.

The officers commanding the different posts to send an exact Return to Head-Quarters this afternoon of all the intrenching tools in their possession, viz: Spades, Pickaxes, Wheelbarrows, Handbarrows, Axes, and Crowbars, and to mention the number and quality of any of these implements that are still wanting to carry on their respective works.

Six Captains, twelve Subalterns, twelve Sergeants, and three hundred rank and file, to parade to-morrow morning, immediately after divine service, from the Regiments now stationed in Cambridge, as a working party, to assist in raising the New-Hampshire lines.

Colonel James Scammons, of the Massachusetts-Bay forces, tried by the General Court-Martial of which Col. John Nixon was President, for "disobedience of orders, and backwardness in the execution of his duty;" the Court, after duly examining the evidence for and against the prisoner, together with what the prisoner had to say in his defence, are of opinion, that Colonel Scammons is not guilty of the crimes wherewith he was accused, and therefore do acquit the prisoner. Colonel Scammons to be immediately released from his arrest.

If, after what has happened, the enemy, in revenge of their late loss, should dare to attempt forcing our lines, the Army may be assured, that nothing but their own indolence and remissness can give the least hope of success to so rash an enterprise. It is therefore strongly recommended to the commanding officers of corps, guards, and detachments, that they be assiduously alert in parading their men, at their several posts, half an hour before daybreak, and remain there until the commanding officers think proper to dismiss them.

The General hears with astonishment the very frequent applications that are made to him, as well by officers as soldiers, for furloughs. Brave men, who are engaged in the noble cause of liberty, should never think of removing from their camp while the enemy is in sight, and anxious to take every advantage any indiscretion on our side may give them. The General doubts not but the commanding officers of corps will anticipate his wishes, and discourage those under them from disgracefully desiring to go home, until the campaign is ended.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 20, 1775.

(Parole, Albany.)

(Countersign, Ticonderoga.)

Certain drums in and near Cambridge very improperly beat the reveille this morning before day. Although the Troops are ordered to be under arms half an hour before day-light, it does not follow the drums are to beat at that time. The reveille is to beat when a sentry can see clearly one thousand yards around him, and not before.

All Aids-de-Camp and Majors of Brigade are to keep regularly entered in a book all the General Orders of the Army, as well as those of the Brigades they belong to, as the General-in-Chief will not, for the future, admit, as an excuse for the breach of orders, the plea of not knowing them.

Samuel Osgood and Joseph Ward, Esquires, being appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Ward, they are to be obeyed as such; and all orders coming from Aids-de-Camp, are to be considered as the orders of their respective Generals, and whether written or verbal, to be forthwith obeyed. It may be necessary once more to repeat to the Army, that every Aid-de-Camp, and Major of Brigade, will be distinguished by a green ribband.

Certain corps having been dilatory in delivering last Saturday their weekly Returns, as positively directed by former orders, the General is determined, for the future, not to excuse any neglect in sending the Returns every Saturday to the Adjutant-General. As the commanding officers of Regiments are to be answerable for the due observance of this order, it is expected they are exact in obliging their respective Adjutants to fulfil their duty.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOHN HANCOCK.

Cambridge, July 21, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I am particularly to acknowledge that part of your favour of the tenth instant, wherein you do me the honour of determining to join the Army under my command. I need certainly make no professions of the pleasure I shall have in seeing you; at the same time I have to regret that so little is in my power to offer equal to Colonel Hancock's merits, and worthy of his acceptance. I shall be happy, in every opportunity, to show the regard and esteem with which I am, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant.

To Colonel John Hancock.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, July 21, 1775.

SIR: I am to acknowledge your favour of the seventeenth instant, informing me of the destination of the Troops raising in your Colony. As the season is now advanced, and the enemy considerably re-enforced, we have the utmost reason to expect any attack that may be made will not be much longer delayed. I should therefore think it highly necessary the new raised Troops should join the Army with all possible expedition. Upon inquiry with respect to the flour, I do not find our necessities to be such as to require an immediate transportation during the harvest; but as soon as it can be sent with convenience, you will please to give directions for that purpose. Colonel Trumbull will advise you to what place it is to be addressed, and to whose care.

Agreeable to your intimation I have ordered the express to wait on you, and shall do so in future. We have had no occurrence in the camp of any material consequence. On both sides we are strengthening our lines in full view of each other.

I am, Sir, with esteem, &c., your most obedient servant.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull.

GOVERNOUR WENTWORTH TO SECRETARY ATKINSON.

Fort William and Mary, July 21, 1775.

SIR: Captain Barkley (at noon) gave me the enclosed paper, which I hope may effect a continuance of the boat fishery. You are sensible that I have not any powers to alter or direct in this matter, the execution of the Restraining Act being committed to the Navy and Custom-House.

I am, with due regard and respect, Sir, your most obedient servant,

J. WENTWORTH.

The Honourable Theodore Atkinson, Esq.

Scarborough, July 21, 1775.

Captain Barkley will suffer the open boats of the Town of Portsmouth, and the country, to go a-fishing for fresh fish only, first having a permit from him for that purpose, provided the Town of Portsmouth will let His Majesty's ship, under his command, be supplied with fresh beef as usual, at the common market price, and our boats to pass and repass without molestation.

JOHN HANCOCK, PRESIDENT, TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Congress Chamber, July 22, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: By return of the Army, transmitted by the General to Congress, it appears there is a great deficiency in many Regiments; upon which the Congress came to the enclosed resolutions, which I am ordered to transmit to you.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient humble servant,
JOHN HANCOCK, President.

Convention of New-Hampshire.

P. S. I enclose you a publick paper, in which you will see the resolutions of Congress respecting the Militia through the Continent.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp at Harlem, July 22, 1775.

SIR: I received your order of the seventeenth instant, and immediately contracted for vessels to carry the Troops to Albany. The first division, under the command of Colonel Waterbury, will march on Monday next, and the remainder will march as soon as I can possibly get the vessels ready to take them, which wont exceed Wednesday. And indeed, Sir, you may depend upon my utmost exertion and assiduity for carrying into execution every order within my department, for the good of the common cause, notwithstanding some discouragements that I have met with, after a series of thirty-four years in the service of my King and Country.

Since General Schuyler went to Ticonderoga, a letter came from General Washington, addressed to him or the officer commanding at or near New-York, in which was the following paragraph, viz: "The commissions which have been forwarded to me are not sufficient to answer the demand I have for them, there being at least one thousand officers in this department, and not more than five hundred commissions in my possession. As you are so much nearer to Philadelphia than I am, I request you to apply to Congress for as many as you are likely to want."

The forces under my command are in general good health and high spirits, and rejoice to have it in their power to go where they may have an opportunity to do their Country some service.

I am, Sir, with the greatest esteem, your obliged humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

The Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 22, 1775.

SIR: I am just favoured with your letter of the thirteenth instant, enclosing a copy of Colonel Hinman's to the Congress. Every consideration induces me to take all the precautions possible, more especially as I have four important posts to maintain, with a small number of troops, and those very ill armed and with little ammunition. In this disagreeable situation, I feel very sensibly the exceeding slowness with which the levies are made in every part of our Colony. Captain Mott informs me that I need not expect a re-enforcement in less than a month. Should General Burgoyne (as is reported) be gone with a body of troops to Canada, and make an attack in this quarter, in our present weak and defenceless situation, what the consequences would be to the Country are easier conceived than described. I hope such as are raised, although the Regiments may not be complete, will be ordered up without delay with camp equipage. I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Henry Williams, Esquire, Chairman of the Committee of New-York Congress.

NEW-IPSWICH (NEW-HAMPSHIRE) COMMITTEE.

New-Ipswich, July 22, 1775.

In February last, the Committee of Inspection for the Town of New-Ipswich, in New-Hampshire, finding that Mr. David Hills, a trader in said Town, had raised the price of some articles of his Merchandise, whereupon said Committee called him to an account, and after some debate, said Hills promised to adhere strictly to the Association; so said Committee received him again. In the beginning of March then next, the said Hills violated the Association again in the same manner as before, whereupon said Committee called him to an account again; then he said he did not understand the Association nor the promise, as we did, but for the future he would adhere to the Association and the promise, as we understood them; so was again received. Now he has violated the Association in like manner the third time, notwithstanding his promise; so we again examined him, and he owned he had raised his price on some articles, viz. Salt, Fish, and Rum, and says it is no violation of the Association, so refuses to make satisfaction. Now we, the Committee, advise all good people to break off all dealings with him, as the Association binds all to do. By order of the Committee.

JOSEPH BATES, Chairman of said Committee.

DAVID HILLS TO THE PUBLICK.

New-Ipswich, August 30, 1775.

The publication in the Essex Gazette, printed the 24th instant, signed "Joseph Bates, Chairman of said Committee," requires this piece of justice to the publick, and to my character, that some of the facts therein mentioned be rightly stated. The customary price of salt was four shillings per bushel till July last, when the price of carting was necessarily raised five or six pence, for want of loading to carry down, and nearly all the salt I have had on hand ever since has cost three shillings, seven pence, one-fifth, per bushel, delivered here, and the price complained of is four shillings, three pence, one-fifth; so that the advance is eight pence, making no allowance for the casks to contain it, waste, &c. I have had license to retail rum only since November last. My price has been two shillings, six pence, two-fifths per gallon, till July last, when I raised it to two shillings eight pence, which has been the customary price here for several years, the excise on it being two pence. The customary price of common fish is two pence and three pence per pound; this of mine is spring merchantable fish, equal in quality to what the Army is supplied with at nineteen shillings per quintal, and my price for it is three pence per pound. As for what passed in February and March last, see a vote of the Town at the annual meeting, March 13, viz: "Voted to accept of the Committee of Inspection's Report, with respect to the two shop-keepers, and that the Town is satisfied with said shop-keepers." This I can fully prove is the true state of the case, and I hereby challenge this Committee, and the whole world, to produce any evidence to the contrary. Their publication, however absurd, is less strange, since it appears that two, the most leading men of the Committee, have declared against the present proceedings of the united American Colonies, as being imprudent, and that we had better have complied with the requisitions of the British Parliament. Upon principles, it seems, not unlike this, the Committee have proceeded in the most arbitrary and obstinate manner to publish the said piece, utterly refusing, after repeated entreaties, to submit to a hearing of the case before any other Committee. Now I desire all people, both "good" and bad, to treat this Committee and their publications as they deserve.

DAVID HILLS.

STATEMENT OF COMMITTEE.

New-Ipswich, September 13, 1775.

The piece published in the Essex Gazette, the seventh instant, signed by David Hills, which says, "the publication in the Essex Gazette, printed the twenty-fourth instant, signed by Joseph Bates, Chairman, requires that piece of justice to the publick and his character," I observe is such a piece of justice as the Tory party have practised to publish, mostly false and scandalous, representing things in a false light. When he says the carting was necessarily raised, he hired some teams to carry and fetch a load at eight shillings, lawful money, a journey cheaper than the usual price; the salt he mentions, he bought at twelve shillings per hogshead; the fish, which he says is equal in quality to what the Army is supplied with at nineteen shillings per quintal, he bought at ten shillings per quintal, as appears by his bill from his merchant; the rum he bought a large store of, at one shilling eight pence per gallon, except one load at one shilling nine pence; and as the affairs of the Province are regulated by the Congress, it is supposed there will be no excise. It appears said Hills got his goods or merchandise as cheap as usual; if so, I see no reason why he should raise his price. I should think it soon enough to raise when his goods cost more. The report of the Committee he refers to was, that the said Hills had promised to make restitution to those he had sold to at a higher price than the usual custom, and that he would adhere to the Association as the Committee understood it. The said Hills and his adherents said the Ninth Article of the Association means that the vender of goods shall sell at their usual profits. The Committee said it means that they should sell at their usual prices; so he complied and made said promise. Upon said promise the Town voted, satisfied with said Hills, or shop-keeper. These things, I think, may easily be proved, notwithstanding his bold challenge. On the twenty-ninth of August last, we had a full Town-meeting, which was requested by the said Hills and his adherents, and the Town heard said Hills's complaints against the Committee of Inspection; (see the votes of the Town thereon.)* I further observe, that the said Hills is the man that had a quantity of goods burnt at New-York, by the good people of that City, for none of his good conduct, in the time of the Stamp Act. After the people of this Town had unanimously agreed not to use any Tea, said Hills brings a quantity into Town to sell; thus it appears he (the said Hills) has proved himself guilty of perfidy, and that no solemnities are sufficient to hold him. Considering these things, it is not strange that he has published his false piece, saying, "that two of the most leading men of the Committee have declared against the present proceedings of the united American Colonies as being imprudent, and that we had better have complied with the requisitions of the British Parliament." Can any one suppose that any person can declare as above said, and take pains to bring people to an adherence to the Association. As for the Committee's refusing a hearing before some other Committee, said Hills never asked it till after the paper was sent to the printers, and then he claimed it as his right given him by the Association. Now if the Committee's dealing with said Hills as the Association directs, after he has violated the Association the third time, besides his bringing Tea, when he refuses to reform, is arbitrary, I know not what is arbitrary.

JOSEPH BATES.

* Voted, to hear the complaints of Mr. David Hills against the Committee of Inspection.

Voted, that the Committee of Inspection have gone according to the Association. A true copy from the minutes.

Attest:

ISAAC HOW, Town-Clerk.

DR. BENJAMIN CHURCH TO MR. KANE, MAJOR OF BRIGADE, IN BOSTON.*

Cambridge, July 23, 1775.

I hope this will reach you. Three attempts have I made without success. In effecting the last, the man was discovered in attempting his escape; but fortunately my letter was sewed in the waistband of his breeches. He was confined for a few days, during which you may guess my feelings; but a little art and a little money settled the matter. It is a month since my return from Philadelphia. I went by the way of Providence to visit my mother. The Committee for warlike stores made me a formal tender of twelve cannon, eighteen and twenty-four pounders, they having taken a previous resolution to make the offer to General Ward. To make a merit of my services, I sent them down; and when they received them they sent them to Stoughton to be out of danger, even though they

* The following letter is a very intelligent and particular account of the strength and disposition of the Colonies, written by Doctor Church, who had the best means of knowing the true state of matters. It was obviously intended only for the private information of the General, and therefore must be considered a much more impartial and candid account than we commonly receive from either party, which accounts are usually drawn up for the very purpose of magnifying or diminishing objects. Doctor Church's residence was in Boston; he was taken into the Government's pay about the middle of April. On the 19th, General Gage having retracted his promise to the Bostonians, after they had delivered up their arms, by detaining them in Town, Doctor Church made his pretended escape from Boston. From that day till the fatal time of writing the letter, he seems to have been very diligent and pretty successful in his employment.—Remembrancer.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

had formed the resolution, as before hinted, of fortifying Bunker's Hill, which, together with the cowardice of the clumsy Gerrish and Colonel Scammons, was the lucky occasion of their defeat. The affair happened before my return from Philadelphia. We lost one hundred and sixty-five killed then, and since dead of their wounds; one hundred and twenty more lie wounded; they will chiefly recover. They boast that you have fourteen hundred killed and wounded in the action. You say the rebels lost fifteen hundred; I suppose with equal truth. The people of Connecticut are raving in the cause of liberty. A number of their Colony, from the Town of Stamford, robbed the King's stores near New-York, with some small assistance which the New-Yorkers lent them. These were growing turbulent. I counted two hundred and eighty pieces of cannon, from thirteen to twenty-four pounders, at King's Bridge, which the Committee had secured for the use of the Colonies. The Jerseys are not a whit behind Connecticut in zeal. The Philadelphians exceed them both; I saw two thousand men reviewed there by General Lee, consisting of Quakers and other inhabitants in uniform, with one thousand riflemen and forty horse, who, together, made a most warlike appearance. I mingled freely and frequently with the members of the Continental Congress; they were united and determined in opposition, and appeared assured of success. Now, to come home, the opposition is become formidable. Eighteen thousand brave and determined men, with Washington and Lee at their head, are no contemptible enemy. Adjutant General Gates is indefatigable in arraying the Army. Provisions are very plentiful; clothes are manufactured in almost every Town for the soldiers. Twenty tons of gunpowder have lately arrived at Philadelphia, Connecticut, and Providence; and upwards of twenty tons are now in camp. Saltpetre is made in every Colony. Powder-mills have been erected, and are consequently employed at Philadelphia and New-York. Volunteers of the first fortunes daily flock to the camp. One thousand riflemen will arrive in two or three days. Recruits are now levying to augment the Army to twenty-two thousand; besides, ten thousand militia of this Government are appointed to appear on the first summons. The bills of all the Colonies circulate freely, and are readily exchanged for cash. Add to this, unless some plan of accommodation takes place immediately, their harbours will swarm with privateers. An Army will be raised, however, in the Middle Colonies to take possession of Canada. For the sake of the miserable convulsed Empire, solicit peace, repeal the acts, or Britain is undone. This advice is the result of a warm affection for my King and Realm. Remember, I never deceived you; every article here sent you is sacredly true.

The papers will acquaint you that I am a member again for Boston. You will there see our motley Council.

A general arrangement of officers will take place, except the chief, which will be suspended but for a little while, to see what part Britain takes in consequence of the late Continental Petition.

A view to independence appears to be more and more general. Should Britain declare war against the Colonies, they would be lost forever. Should Spain declare war against England, the Colonies would declare a neutrality, which would doubtless produce a league offensive and defensive between them. For God's sake, prevent it by a speedy accommodation!

Writing this has employed me for a day. I have been to Salem to reconnoitre, but could not escape the geese in the capital. To-morrow I set out for Newport, purposely to send you this. I write you fully, it being scarcely practicable to prevent discovery. I am out of place here by choice, and therefore out of pay; and am determined to be so, unless something be offered in my way.

I wish you could contrive to write to me largely, in cyphers, by way of Newport, addressed to Tom Richards, merchant, enclosed under cover to me, intimating that I am a perfect stranger to you; but that being recommended to you as a gentleman of honour you took the liberty to enclose it, entreating me to deliver it as directed to the person living, as you are informed, in Cambridge. Sign some fictitious name, and send it to some confidant friend at Newport, to be delivered to me at Watertown.

Make use of every precaution, or I perish.

SOUTH-CAROLINA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Charlestown, Saturday, July 23, 1775.

Present: Colonel Henry Laurens, President; Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Middleton, Honourable Mr. Lowndes, Honourable Mr. Drayton, Colonel Pinckney, Mr. Brewton, Mr. Bee, Captain Benjamin Elliot, Mr. Heyward, Col. Parsons.

On motion, Resolved, That the Hon. William Henry Drayton, and the Reverend William Tennent, be the two gentlemen to make a progress into the back country, to explain to the People the causes of the present disputes between Great Britain and the American Colonies.

Resolved, That the following commissions and powers, be given to the Honourable William Henry Drayton and Reverend William Tennent:

SOUTH-CAROLINA:

In the Council of Safety, July 23, 1775.

The Council of Safety, elected and chosen by the Provincial Congress, begun to be holden the first day of June last, by these presents testify, that they have nominated, appointed, and commissioned the Honourable William Henry Drayton, and the Reverend William Tennent, to go into the interior parts of this Colony, at the publick expense; there to explain to the people at large the nature of the unhappy publick disputes between Great Britain and the American Colonies; to endeavour to settle all political disputes between the people; to quiet their minds, and to enforce the necessity of a general union, in order to preserve themselves and their children from slavery.* And that the said William Henry Drayton, and William Tennent may proceed in this business with safety and advantage to the publick, all the friends of the liberties of America are hereby requested to afford them every necessary aid, assistance, and protection. By order of the Council of Safety:

HENRY LAURENS, President.

SOUTH-CAROLINA:

In the Council of Safety, Charlestown, July 23, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In order to give you every necessary and proper support and protection in your progress into the country, in execution of our commission of this date, you

*On the 14th of July, Major Mayson arrived at Ninety-Six Court-House, with a portion of the gunpowder and lead, which he had taken in Fort Charlotte. At this time, Colonel Thomas Fletchall was holding the general muster of his Militia Regiment at Ford's, on the Enoree River. And Captain Moses Kirkland, who had accompanied Major Mayson with his troop of Rangers to Ninety-Six Court-House, and who had thought himself overlooked by the Provincial Congress in the military appointments; and besides, having an old grudge against Major Mayson, his superior officer, both of whom were rivals for military rank and back-country influence; knowing that Colonel Fletchall had assembled a number of men, and supposing the whole back-country disaffected, resolved to change sides. Under this impression, he despatched Major Terry, of the militia, who was with him in opinion, to Colonel Fletchall; ardently requesting, that he would send a force, and recover the powder and lead, which had been taken from the King's fort; and was then at Ninety-Six. He, at the same time, assured Fletchall, that the force sent by him to retake the ammunition should not be opposed; and that the Rangers meant to force him, and every other person in the back-country, to sign the Association. Having expedited these advices, he proceeded to fulfil his part of the proffered agreement, and commenced inducing his Troop to desert; in which he was so successful, that in a few hours they withdrew to a man.

In the mean time, Terry having arrived at Colonel Fletchall's muster-field at Ford's, at the fork of Cedar Creek and Enoree River, where he continued the assemblage of his men for three days, and seeing Fletchall about to tender the Association of the Congress for the signatures of the individuals of his Regiment, he concealed his business, until he saw what turn that affair should take. And accompanying Fletchall through the companies, the Association was tendered under such discouraging expressions, as gave the people to understand Fletchall's mind on the subject, not a man signing the same. And passing from one extreme to another, Fletchall having previously caused Major Robinson to prepare another Association more suitable to his opinions, and the part he intended to act in favour of the King, it was offered to the men for signature, and the people very generally subscribed it. Terry seeing the multitude in this disposition, now communicated his mission from Kirkland to Fletchall, in presence of Major Robinson and the Cunninghams; when Fletchall declined to appear publicly in the affair; but the three others declared they would go, and seize the powder and lead. At this, Fletchall showed no disposition to prevent them; and they immediately rode off the field, with two hundred men on horseback. They arrived at Ninety-Six Court-House on the 17th July, about noon; and had little trouble in possessing themselves of the ammunition, as Major Mayson had only an officer or two left with him, beside Captain Kirkland. Robinson and his party then committed the Major to the District jail; where, having continued some hours, they admitted him to bail, to answer at the ensuing Sessions, for having, as they charged, robbed the King's fort. In a few days afterwards, Captain Kirkland put the seal to his treachery, in joining Fletchall's party openly: in addition to which act of perfidy, he also induced are hereby authorized to call upon all and every officer of the militia and rangers, for assistance, support, and protection; and they and each of them are hereby ordered to furnish such assistance, support, and protection, as you shall deem necessary. By order of the Council of Safety:

HENRY LAURENS, President.

To the Honourable W. H. Drayton, Reverend William Tennent, Commissioners, &c.

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation for Prince George's County, at the house of Richard Carnes, in Piscataway, on Monday the 24th of July, 1775, were present: Josias Beall, Chairman; William Diggs, Enoch Magruder, Thomas Dent, William Diggs, Jr., William Beanes, Jr., Nathaniel Newton, Richard Carnes, Edward Edelin, Jonathan Bink, Thomas Clagett, H Ezekiah Wheeler, and James Hawkins. In consequence of information being lodged with the Committee, that Josias Lanham and John Lindsey had purchased Shoes imported contrary to the American Association, they proceeded to inquire into the charge, and find, that Wm. McCraight and William Blair, Mariners, on board the Ship Janney, Captain Cochran, from Glasgow, had sold to the said Josias Lanham and John Lindsay, four pair of Shoes, imported into this Province since the first day of February last, for the sum of thirty-four shillings and six pence, current money. The parties were summoned to attend the Committee; whereupon the said Lanham and Lindsay appeared, and confessed the charge, and produced the above-mentioned pairs of Shoes. The aforesaid McCraight and Blair likewise appeared, with the money received for the said Shoes.

The Committee, on considering the premises, unanimously resolve such proceedings a violation of the Continental Association. The said McCraight and Blair declared they made sale of the Shoes inadvertently, and are sorry they should have acted so as to give offence; that they will for the future pay strict regard to what they are now informed to be the General Association as to goods imported; and they cheerfully give up the money received Captain Purvis and his Troop of the same Regiment, to quit the service.

The number of men collected at Fletchall's muster-field, amounting to fifteen hundred at least—the spirit they displayed, the seizure of the powder and lead, the treatment of Major Mayson, and the desertion of Kirkland and Purvis, encouraged and increased the disaffection of the people, from Broad to Savannah Rivers. The million voted by the Provincial Congress was an endless theme to harangue upon, for the purpose of stating, that the Congress would ruin them; and the paper money was cried down as of no value. But, above all, their spirits and cabals were kept up, by correspondences with Lord William Campbell, the Governor, in Charlestown; who, through Colonel Fletchall, commended the loyalty of Robinson and the Cunninghams: promising them rewards for perseverance in duty. This being circulated, gave these men real consequence among the disaffected; tied them fast to the Royal interest, and threw out a lure of recompense to every leader of the party. From this state of things, the most fatal consequences were apprehended; and it was then supposed, that if Lord William Campbell had gone up among the disaffected, had collected Fletchall and his men around him, and had conducted himself with promptness and efficiency, the whole proceedings of the Provincial Congress would have been overthrown. However, for wiser purposes, Providence had not so directed his actions; but left him in Charlestown, to experience the daily loss of his executive powers; and the little consideration in which he was holden, as well by the publick authorities as by the citizens at large.

Accounts of these circumstances frequently arriving in Charlestown; and through Lord William's plots, affairs becoming more critical every day in the back parts of the Colony, the Council of Safety took into consideration the urgency of the case, and the necessity which existed, of reconciling the people to the publick measures; but it was opposed. However, on the 23d day of July, 1775, it was resolved, "that the Honourable William Henry Drayton, and the Reverend William Tennent, be the two gentlemen to make a progress into the back-country, to explain to the people the causes of the present disputes between Great Britain and the American Colonies; and they were accordingly commissioned on the same day for that purpose: "to go into the interior parts of this Colony at the publick expense; there to explain to the people at large the nature of the unhappy publick disputes between Great Britain and the American Colonies; to endeavour to settle all political disputes between the people; to quiet their minds, and to enforce the necessity of a general union, in order to preserve themselves and their children from slavery." Beside this, they were privately armed with authority "to call upon all and every officer of the Militia and Rangers, for assistance, support, and protection," to act "as you shall deem necessary." Colonel Richard Richardson, Joseph Kershaw, and the Reverend Mr. Hart, were desired to accompany them; and to complete the arrangement, the whole Militia were ordered to be classed in three divisions; and to hold themselves ready by turns, to march at twelve hours notice.—Drayton.

for the said Shoes into the hands of the Committee, for publick purposes. The said Josias Lanham and John Lindsay declare their concern for the part they have acted in violation of the Association, and promise their paying due regard thereto for the future; and also declare their willingness to destroy the said Shoes; which were accordingly burnt by the said Lanham and Lindsay, in the presence of the Committee.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON FROM AN OFFICER ON BOARD HIS MAJESTY'S SLOOP SWAN, STATIONED AT RHODE-ISLAND, DATED AUGUST 14, 1775.

Two gentlemen crossing a ferry at Rhode-Island in their way from Philadelphia to the eastward, were stopped by Captain Ayscough, who found several letters in their possession, which were transmitted to Admiral Graves; but I found an opportunity of copying two of them, and herewith send the copies to you, that you may see the real intentions of those miscreants who have misled His Majesty's subjects in North America to commit themselves in acts of open rebellion; and that you may be no longer deceived by the artful publications of those traitors, or give credit to their professions of wishing for accommodation. There is undoubted proof that both these letters are from Mr. John Adams, a lawyer of Boston, and one of the Delegates in the Continental Congress.

Philadelphia, July 24, 1775.

MY DEAR: It is now almost three months since I left you, in every part of which my anxiety about you and the children, as well as our country, has been extreme.

The business I have had upon my mind has been as great and important as can be intrusted to one man, and the difficulty and intricacy of it is prodigious. When fifty or sixty men have a constitution to form for a great empire, at the same time that they have a country of fifteen hundred miles extent to fortify; millions to arm and train; a naval power to an extensive commerce to regulate; numerous tribes of Indians to negotiate with; a standing army of twenty-seven thousand men to raise, pay, victual, and officer; I really shall pity those fifty and sixty men.

I must see you ere long. Rice has wrote me a very good letter, so has Thatcher, for which I thank them both. Love to the children.

J. A.

P. S. I wish I had given you a complete history, from the beginning to the end of the journey, of the behaviour of my compatriots. No mortal tale could equal it. I will tell you in future, but you shall keep it a secret—the fidgets, the whims, the caprice, the vanity, the superstition, the irritability of some of us is —

Mrs. Abigail Adams, Brain-tree; to the care of Colonel Warren; favoured by Mr. Hitchborne.

Philadelphia, July 24, 1775.

SIR: In confidence I am determined to write freely to you this time. A certain* great fortune and piddling genius, whose fame has been trumpeted so loudly, has given a silly cast to our whole doings. We are between hawk and buzzard. We ought to have had in our hands a month ago the whole legislative, executive, and judicial power of the whole Continent, and have completely modelled a Constitution; to have raised a naval power; opened all our ports wide; to have arrested every friend to Government on the Continent, and held them as hostages for the poor victims in Boston; and then opened the door as wide as possible for peace and reconciliation. After this they might have petitioned, and negotiated, and addressed, &c., if they would. Is all this extravagant? Is it wild? Is it not the soundest policy?

One piece of news: Seven thousand weight of powder arrived here last night. We shall send along some as soon as we can; but you must be patient and frugal.

We are lost in the extensiveness of our field of business. We have a Continental Treasury to establish; a Paymaster to choose; and a Committee of Correspondence, or Safety, or Accounts, or something, I know not what, that has confounded us all day.

* We can assure the publick that these letters are not copied from the originals.—Mass. Spy.

Shall I hail you Speaker of the House, or Counsellor, or what? What kind of an election had you? What sort of magistrates do you intend to make? Will your new legislative and executive, feel bold or irresolute? Will your judicial hang and whip, and fine and imprison, without scruple? I want to see our distressful country once more; yet I dread the sight of devastation.

You observe in your letter the oddity of a great man. He is a queer creature; but you must love his dogs if you love him, and forgive a thousand whims, for the sake of the soldier and the scholar. Yours.

To the Honourable James Warren, Esq., Watertown, favoured by Mr. Hichborne.

NOTE.—This letter was anonymous, but wrote in the same hand with that addressed to Abigail Adams.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GENERAL GAGE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH, DATED BOSTON, AUGUST 26, 1775.

The designs of the leaders of the rebellion are plain, and every day confirms the truth of what was asserted years ago by intelligent people, that a plan was laid in this Province, and adjusted with some of the same stamp in others, for a total independence; whilst they amused people in England, called the friends of America, as well as many in this Country, with feigned professions of affection and attachment to the Parent State, and pretended to be aggrieved and discontented only on account of taxation; that they have designedly irritated Government by every insult, whilst they artfully poisoned the minds of the people, and ripened them for insurrection. They would still deceive and lull the Mother Country into a belief that nothing is meant against the Nation, and that their quarrel is only with the Ministers. But it is hoped that the Nation will see through this falsehood and deceit. It matters not who hold the helm of the state; the stroke is levelled at the British Nation, on whose ruins they hope to build their so much vaunted American Empire, and to rise, like the Phoenix, out of the ashes of the Mother Country.

TO MR. PURDIE.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, November 10, 1775.

SIR: The Tories lay great stress on certain intercepted letters from a Delegate, as containing a full proof that the Congress are aiming at independence; but let any impartial person read their Resolves and Petitions, and judge whether they had any such views, and whether, if they had at the time of writing such letters, it was not on a supposition that their humble Petition would be rejected, and that there was no alternative left but slavery or independence. If we entertain a wish to be unconnected with Great Britain, it is because we have been cruelly and inhumanly treated by her. Could any nation be more completely dependant on another, and retain even a shadow of freedom, than America was, and still consents to be on Great Britain? Was Britain satisfied with this in the year 1763? She was. Does America ask for any immunities she did not then enjoy? She does not. Even Lord North himself must answer these questions in the same manner. What, then, is the new claim that they charge us with demanding, and for which they are endeavouring to butcher our people, and lay waste our coasts? The truth is, the Ministry and Parliament have made a new demand necessary, by new oppressions, by repeated and aggravated insults, and by unheard-of cruelties. It is high time to look to ourselves, to take care of our extended coasts, "to form a connexion with some other Power," since Great Britain insultingly, wantonly, and cruelly, has spurned us from her, "and to think of laying the foundation of a great Empire." This is what the Delegate said he had in contemplation, and this is what the British Ministry have made necessary; and this it must be the duty of the Congress to do, if the King refuses to hear their Petition, and to redress our grievances. We still love our fellow-subjects in Britain; we still wish to be connected with them. Although our King has hitherto refused us relief, and suffers us to be inhumanly treated, we have not, and wish not to withdraw our allegiance from him, and are willing to attribute all the cruel oppressions under which we labour to the baleful influence of certain men, who, unhappily, have gained the confidence of their Prince, and who are deadly enemies to his family, and would wish to see him driven from his throne. But whatever may be their design, and however basely we may be misrepresented by our enemies, we call God to witness for the purity of our intentions, look up to him as the all powerful protector of injured innocence, and firmly rely on him as a shield in the day of battle.

A VIRGINIAN.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read July 28, 1775.]

In Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 24, 1775. }

SIR: We have been honoured with your letter of the 19th instant, which informs us that you have an intimation that a quantity of gunpowder had lately arrived here. We are sorry to say, it is without foundation.

You may be assured, Sir, that should a quantity arrive, we shall be attentive to the wants of our brethren to the Eastward, and forward as much as possible that way.

We are, with great respect, Sir, your most obedient servants. By order of the Committee:

AB. BRASHER, Chairman pro tem.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., Philadelphia.

COL. VAN SCHAICK TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Albany, July 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I yesterday received yours of the 17th instant, and agreeable to your request, have made out a return, as near as I could, which you have on the other side.

The five first companies on this return, are those raised by the Committee of this City and County, who are now in actual service at Lake George, and the posts adjacent, from whence General Schuyler has ordered an officer out of each company down the country to complete the levies of those companies. The officers of the last five companies on this return have but lately received their warrants, and are now raising men in this and the neighbouring Counties.

I have sent orders to the recruiting officers, to send to me without delay, returns of the number of men they have enlisted; and shall, on receipt thereof, lay before the Congress a return of the state of my Regiment.

You will please to observe, that several of the officers appointed by the Provincial Congress refused to accept their warrants; in lieu of whom, the Committee of this City and County, at the request of General Schuyler, have appointed others, as the General conceived that waiting for the appointment of others by the Congress would create such a delay in the levying of the companies, as might be productive of ruinous consequences; so that the return consists of those who have accepted their warrants from the Provincial Congress, and those appointed by the Committee in the room of those that declined serving.

It is impossible for me at present to say when my Regiment will be ready to take the field, as I cannot determine with what success the recruiting officers will meet.

You may depend upon it, that nothing will be wanting on my part to expedite the completing of the Regiment, as I am convinced that the circumstances of the Country admit of no delay.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

GOOSE VAN SCHAICK.

To the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, during the recess of the Provincial Congress.

COMMITTEE OF SAFETY FOR CONNECTICUT.

At a meeting of the Governour, &c., Monday, July 24, 1775, by adjournment. Present:

His Honour the Governour; the Hon. M. Griswold, Esq., Jabez Huntington, Esq., Samuel Huntington, Esq., William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Jedediah Elderkin, Joshua West, and Benjamin Huntington, Esq.

His Honour the Governour laid before us a large number of Letters received from various quarters, relating to the great subject matter of the unnatural civil war, &c. A Post (Judd) also, now came in with a Letter from General Schuyler at Ticonderoga, among other things informing that our Troops there were destitute of Tents, &c., and that they may be had at New-York.

On consideration thereof, and that they cannot be furnished without great difficulty and delay in this Colony, advised that his Honour the Governour be desired to write the Congress at New-York, to provide and send a suitable number of Tents for Colonel Hinman's Regiment, and send them forward to Ticonderoga.

On motion, that there is about two thousand barrels of Flour at Norwich, sent by the Continental Congress for the use of the Army near Boston, for which the freight has been paid by Colonel Jedediah Huntington, &c., and is desired by General Washington to be sent forward for the use of said Army, &c.,

Voted, That the expense of the freight and transportation of said Flour, be paid and advanced out of the Colony Treasury; and that the Committee of the Pay Table be ordered to draw on the Treasurer in favour of such persons, and for such sums as shall be ordered by his Honour the Governour for the purposes aforesaid; keeping a proper account thereof.

The affair of the two armed Vessels, (being a principal occasion of this meeting,) was taken up and largely discussed. Letters received from a number of gentlemen, from New-Haven, Middletown, Wethersfield, &c., relating to it, read, &c. Captain Deshon, Mr. Shaw, and Captain Giles Hall were present on that account, and discoursed with, &c., and they retired. And on further consideration, &c., this Council are of opinion and do resolve, that William Williams and Nathaniel Wales, Esqrs., together with Captain Deshon and Captain Hall, be a Committee to Norwich, New-London, and by the sea-coast to New-Haven, and to Middletown, Hartford, &c., to inquire after and find out proper and suitable Vessels for the purpose; the terms on which they may be had; the proper manning of them; the terms on which officers and men may be had, &c.; and give proper directions for preparing Carriages for the Cannon at New-Haven, which may be wanted, and what may be proper and necessary, &c.; and thereof to make report to this Council on Wednesday the 2d of August next, to which time this Council is to be adjourned.

On a request from General Washington, signified by his Letters, &c.,

Voted, That his Honour the Governour be desired and advised to give orders to the Colonels of the Seventh and Eighth Regiments, to march their Troops as soon as they possibly can be prepared, either in whole or in part companies, at their discretion, with necessary officers, to the Camp near Boston, to be under the proper regulation of the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army.

And adjourned to Wednesday, 2d of August next, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, July 24, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of the 18th July I have this moment received, and observe the contents. I shall send an express to New-York to move their Congress to supply Colonel Hinman's Regiment with tents, as I apprehend this Colony is so far exhausted of the materials for making tents, that it will be difficult to have them in season. I take the liberty to insert some queries, &c., which I forwarded yesterday to our Delegates of the honourable General Congress at Philadelphia, viz: "Is it not high time to proceed into, and even to hasten forward to secure the Government of Quebeck, and thereby the whole Indian strength in our interest and favour? Is there any thing to expect from the present Administration that is favourable or kind? If needful, may not Colonel Waterbury with his Regiment be spared to the Northward?" "We are near the grand scene of action; are anxious for the safety of our friends, the security of our rights, and to convince our enemies that we are in earnest, and that the object in view is American Liberty; the barrier of Virtue to be defended and maintained even at the sacrifice of life;" which went express. Captain Derby, who went to England with the Provincial account of the Lexington fight, is returned. He informs he had twenty-seven days passage; tarried eight days in England, and when he came away, General Gage's express, which sailed four days before him, had not arrived. Our friends published the account of the fight; Lord North was thunderstruck with the news, the people uneasy, the merchants distressed for their property in America, the stocks fell, and every thing in a ferment when he came away. The Administration published that they had not received any accounts from Boston; that they did not believe the story; were sure the New-Yorkers would fall off, and thereby the union of the Colonies be broken and the opposition be at an end. What turn matters will take when General Gage's account arrives, is uncertain. Captain Derby's Schooner never went into port, but plied on and off while he tarried. He never appeared in publick, kept with our friends, the Lord-Mayor, Doctor Lee, &c. Lord Dartmouth sent for him, but our friends advised him not to put himself in his power. I am, &c.

J. TRUMBULL.

Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Cambridge, July 24, 1775, Two o'clock, P. M.

General Lee begs General Sullivan will get as much work as possible out of the men this day. If they cannot all work on the face of the citadel, let them deepen and widen the ditch of the flank and rear faces, and heighten the parapet all round.

To General Sullivan.

P. S. For God's sake finish and strengthen the abattis.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE CAMP AT CAMBRIDGE, DATED JULY 24, 1775.

On Thursday last, the universal fast day, a party of our troops, in whale-boats, landed on Nantasket Point before day, and set fire to the Light-house. At day-light the men-of-war discovered them and fired upon them. I was at Little Cambridge when the guns wakened me. I ascended an eminence at a distance, and saw the flames of the Light-house ascending up to Heaven like grateful incense, and the ships wasting their powder. Our men proceeded from thence to Point Shirley, in order to drive off some young colts which were there. A party of Regulars attacked them, but were repulsed and drove into their boats, without the loss of a man on our side, either killed or wounded; what loss the Regulars have sustained I have not yet heard. The party set fire to all the fishing-houses and hay that were on the place, and brought off four Tory fishermen, who are now prisoners at the General's, together with one Whiting, a Sheriff of New-Hampshire Government, who has been detected in some illicit practices inimical to this Country. The troops here are increasing daily; a Regiment is arrived from the Province of Connecticut, and the riflemen are expected hourly. The strictest discipline begins to be practised in the camp, and nothing but a due subordination is required to make this Army as complete as any troops in the word. Wednesday evening Colonel Reed of your City delivered a copy of the Declaration and Address from the Congress, to the advanced guards of the enemy, for General Gage; and our sentinels have dispersed several hundred of those papers called "An Address to the Soldiers," amongst the Regular Troops, which, it is to be hoped, will be of good effect. We are now in perfect tranquillity, being well secured by intrenchments on all sides, and General Lee thinks they will not come out soon against us.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE CAMP AT CAMBRIDGE, DATED JULY 24, 1775.

Within a day or two we have had five deserters from the advanced posts of the enemy; two of them are sensible, honest-looking fellows, the one that came in this morning particularly so. They have a return of the enemy's killed and wounded, amounting to one thousand and fifty-two; most of the wounded are in a dangerous way. They have had no fresh provisions since the affair of Noddle's Island, and are not like to have any without fighting for it. One of the deserters went off last night, with leave, to Philadelphia; he is a Grenadier of the Royal Irish. The deserters say, that yesterday morning General Gage surrendered, in the orders of the day, his command of the Army to General Howe, and now acts only as a civil Governour; that he is lampooned and despised by the whole Army. That Howe is much censured for his mode of attack on our lines last month. That their artillery was wretchedly served, and, what is more strange, that all their spare cartridges which they brought out were twelve-pounders, and they took out only nine-pounders cannon; so that when our people were obliged to quit their lines, the enemy had not one round of artillery cartridges left. That young Richardson was the first person that mounted our parapet; you know him well, he is of the Eighteenth or Royal Irish; he is dangerously wounded. That their number of effective men is four thousand in Boston, and two thousand two hundred on Bunker's Hill; that they despair of forcing our lines, but talk of getting round us if they can. That eight sail of transports, and one frigate, are gone to Fisher's Island, and other places in the sound, marauding, with one hundred men. That they have erected a large bomb battery on Bunker's Hill, and amongst others, two eighteen-inch French mortars. That our morning gun, yesterday, threw an eighteen-pound shot into their encampment on the top of Bunker's Hill. That the Grenadiers of the Royal Welch Fusileers amounted to forty at the attack last month, and are now reduced to eight men; that the Fifty-Second Regiment had twenty-two Grenadiers killed out of thirty-nine. That the inhabitants of Boston are ill-used and miserably fed; that they will be soon released, because provisions begin to be scarce. That the Army begin to clamour for their pay; there is no cash, and bills will not sell under fifty per cent. discount. The resolution of the Congress against Government Bills was wise, and has distressed the enemy exceedingly. The Reading Company of Riflemen came in on Tuesday; the rest are hourly expected and much wanted. We have frequently thrown into their lines, on the wings of the wind at night, hand-bills, and propose to send in a few to-night. These bills are blown into their camp, and get into the hands of their soldiers, without the officers being able to prevent it. Major Bruce complained, at an interview the other day, of such usage. We retorted his decoying our sentries from their posts, two rascals having left us a day or two before, by his or some other officer's means.

We expect they will begin to bombard us in a day or two; they cannot hurt but benefit us. They will, by such means, harden our men, and discourage their own. This we have experienced by their bombarding of Roxbury.

GENERAL GAGE TO LORD DARTMOUTH.

Boston, July 24, 1775.

A pamphlet, published by the Continental Congress, called a "Declaration of the United Colonies," has been sent in from the rebel camp, copies of which will no doubt be sent to England from Philadelphia. They pay little regard to facts, for the contents of it are as replete with deceit and falsehood as most of their publications. The rebellion being general, I know of no better plan to quell it than that I mentioned to your Lordship in a former letter. This Province began it, I might say this Town, for here the arch-rebels formed their scheme long ago. This circumstance brought the troops first here, which is the most disadvantageous place for all operations, particularly where there is no diversion of the rebel forces, but all are collected into one point. Was this Army in New-York, that Province might, to all appearance, be more easily reduced, and the friends of Government be able to raise forces to join the troops.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF PENNSYLVANIA AND VIRGINIA, ON THE WEST SIDE OF LAUREL HILL.

Philadelphia, July 25, 1775.

Friends and Countrymen:

It gives us much concern to find that disturbances have arisen, and still continue among you, concerning the boundaries of our Colonies. In the character in which we now address you, it is unnecessary to inquire into the origin of those unhappy disputes, and it would be improper for us to express our approbation or censure on either side, but as representatives of two of the Colonies, united among many others for the defence of the liberties of America, we think it our duty to remove, as far as lies in our power, every obstacle that may prevent her sons from co-operating, as vigorously as they would wish to do, towards the attainment of this great and important end. Influenced solely by this motive, our joint and earnest request to you is, that all animosities which have heretofore subsisted among you as inhabitants of distinct Colonies, may now give place to generous and concurring efforts for the preservation of every thing that can make our common Country dear to us.

We are fully persuaded that you, as well as we, wish to see your differences terminate in this happy issue. For this desirable purpose we recommend it to you that all bodies of armed men, kept under either Province, be dismissed; that all those on either side, who are in confinement, or under bail, for taking a part in the contest, be discharged, and that until the dispute be decided, every person be permitted to retain his possessions unmolested.

By observing these directions, the publick tranquillity will be secured without injury to the titles on either side. The period, we flatter ourselves, will soon arrive, when this unfortunate dispute, which has produced much mischief, and, as far as we can learn, no good, will be peaceably and constitutionally determined.

We are your friends and countrymen,

PATRICK HENRY,	JOHN DICKINSON,
BENJAMIN HARRISON,	BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,
RICHARD HENRY LEE,	CHARLES HUMPHREYS,

Given under the authority, and by order of the Council of Safety:

HENRY LAURENS, President.

To Clement Lempriere, Esq.

Ordered, That the foregoing Commission be engrossed, sealed, dated, and signed by the President, and by him delivered, sealed up, to Captain Lempriere, with orders not to be opened until he shall be arrived in sight of the Island of New-Providance.

Captain HATTER's Report to the Council of Safety, of the occurrences which took place on board of the Sloop Commerce, CLEMENT LEMPRIERE, Esq., Commander, in taking the Powder from Captain LOFTHOUSE, off AUGUSTINE Bar; and of the return voyage to CHARLESTOWN with the Powder.

1775. July 24.—Our voyage towards New-Orleans commenced.

July 25.—Took on board our stores of provisions, &c.

July 26.—Sailed over the bar, with the wind at N. E. and rain. At 6 P. M. anchored at South-Edisto.

July 27.—Fresh gales, with thunder squalls, and a great deal of lightning; weighed, and sailed up Port-Royal Creek, where we anchored.

July 28.—It continued to blow hard, with rain. We got through Port-Royal Creek, and came to at the Town, and landed our stores, in order to clean.

July 29.—We hauled on shore, and cleaned, and in the evening hauled her off again.

July 30.—Took on board our stores, and got ready to sail; fell down the river a little.

July 31.—Sailed from Port-Royal, with the wind at south, and turned down to Jenkins's Landing.

August 1.—Got under way, and turned through Skull Creek, and came to at Callaboge.

August 2.—Sailed out of Tybee, with the wind at south; turned to windward; at meridian observed in latitude $31^{\circ} 45'$.

August 3.—Still plying to windward, with the wind at south; latitude observed $31^{\circ} 28'$.

August 4.—Fine settled weather, wind southerly, beating to windward; latitude observed $31^{\circ} 09'$.

August 5.—Fresh breeze and thunder squalls, wind southerly; latitude observed $30^{\circ} 51'$.

August 6.—Fine settled weather, with fresh gales; latitude observed $29^{\circ} 55'$.

August 7.—Made the Matanzas at night; came to under the fort, in seven fathoms water, and rode all night. At 6 A. M. got under way, and run down towards the bar of Augustine, where we saw a sail at anchor off the bar. We ran down to her, and hailed her, and found her to be the Brigantine Betsy, commanded by Captain Alvere Loft-house, from London. We boarded her with our sloop, and upon strict search found on board of her a large quantity of gunpowder, of which we took one hundred and eleven barrels, one half barrel, and thirty small kegs. Said vessel had on board of her twelve soldiers from the shore, eight seamen, the Captain, two mates, and steward, which was in number twenty-three men; and our number was twenty-one whites and five blacks. Our situation was such on this occasion, that we thought it most prudent to bribe the men, which we did with one hundred Pounds currency; and the Captain accepted a draft for one thousand Pounds sterling, for the powder, drawn on Mr. John Edwards, of Charlestown; and at half past 11 A. M., after spiking up two pieces of cannon that were mounted on board said brigantine, we re-embarked our men, and made sail with a light air at E. N. E. The wind veered to the northward. At 4 P. M. we passed the River St. John's, and passed a small boat stretching to the southward.

August 8.—Turning to the windward, with the wind at N. E., squally, with rain; latitude observed $31^{\circ} 26'$.

August 9.—Fresh gales at N. E., plying to windward with all sail set, and a growing sea; latitude observed $31^{\circ} 50'$.

August 10.—Light breezes of wind; set squaresail and topsail, and made Tybee Tower, and we steered in at it through Skull Creek, and came to in Port-Royal Creek; latitude observed $31^{\circ} 50'$. Got under sail, and at 10 A. M., came to at Port-Royal, and despatched away an express to Charlestown; and at 3 P. M., we landed the powder.

August 11.—Fine settled weather, with the wind to the westward.

August 12.—Showery, and thunder squalls. At anchor at Port-Royal.

August 13.—Showery weather.

August 14.—Do. do.

August 15.—Showery and thunder squalls. An express from Charlestown arrived, with an account of the Governor's sloop being in pursuit of us.

August 16.—Squally weather, with a great deal of rain. Sundry companies of Militia and Light-Infantry came to Town from the different islands, to guard the gunpowder.

August 17.—Squally weather. Our express arrived from Charlestown, and brought with him a detachment of Artillery, in order to escort the gunpowder to Charlestown.

August 18.—Received on board of the Success ninety-one barrels of powder, and got in readiness to sail. At 10 A. M. Captain Cattell arrived in Town with sixty men of the Provincials, and offered to join us to protect the gunpowder, which we accepted of.

August 19.—Got all in readiness to sail, and at meridian we weighed anchor and sailed through Port-Royal Creek, and run down as low as Morgan's Island, when we came to with our small squadron, consisting of nine sail, and rode all night.

August 20.—At 6 A. M. we got under way, and sailed down towards Otter Island, and fell down to South-Edisto Inlet, to wait the flood. At 11 A. M. we weighed, and towed up towards Fenwick's Bluff, when we came to to wait the tide and water the vessel, in company with the different detachments. At midnight got under way again, and towed up.

August 21.—Towed up to Block Island, and down to Slan's Bluff, where we waited the tide, and cooked provisions. At 4 P. M. we run down to White Point, and came to to wait tide to New-Cut.

August 22.—Got under way, and towed up and through New-Cut, and down to Wappoo, and there waited tide to come through. At 4 P. M. we got under way, and run into the Cut and towed through, and came to anchor in Ashley River, and lay all the night.

August 23.—Got under way, and towed up Cummings's Creek, and at 6 A. M. we came to the Bluff, where we landed ninety-one barrels of gunpowder.

JOHN HATTER.

ELIZABETHTOWN (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, July 25, 1775.

SIR: Under the conduct of Sergeant Faulker, with a file of men, I have, by an order of our Committee, sent three persons as prisoners, who were apprehended here on this day on suspicion of being deserters from Gen. Wooster's camp. We have not been able to draw any confession out of them to the purpose; they differ widely in their stories, which renders them so suspicious that we have thought proper to send them to your Committee for further examination and inquiry.

By order of the Sub-Committee:

JONA. HAMPTON, Chairman.

P. S. The prisoners all agree that they came from New-Haven together, but differ as to the time; and one of them was lately seen by one of our members in the camp, which gives us strong suspicion of their being deserters from Waterbury's Regiment, now under marching orders.

CHRISTOPHER P. YATES TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Palatine, Tryon County, July 25, 1775.

SIR: Having been recommended by the Committee of this County to be Captain of a Company in Colonel Van Schaick's Battalion, to be raised in this County, permit me to acquaint you that, on their request, I did begin to enlist men immediately, in which I have been very successful, having already engaged fifty-one soldiers, for whom I have provided according to the instructions of your Congress, and make no doubt but I shall have the company full in ten days hence, of which I shall give you the earliest notice. I have wrote an account of the above to Major-General Schuyler, to the end that I may have orders to join the Regiment.

I am, Sir, with the greatest respect, your very humble servant,

CHRISTOPHER P. YATES.

To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire.

SIR JOHN JOHNSON TO MR. ALEXANDER WHITE.

Johnson Hall, July 25, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The bearers will deliver you some provisions and clothes, and Mr. Clement will give you a paper containing a ten Pound note, which I received from Mrs. White this morning. The Indians having desired some cash from me to expend when they came among the inhabitants of Canada, which I have not to give them, I must beg you to supply them, and charge it to Colonel Johnson. If you have forgot any thing, and I can be of service to you, I beg you'll mention it. God bless you.

Yours, &c.

J. JOHNSON.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Lebanon, July 25, 1775.

SIR: Yesterday I received, per express, a letter from General Schuyler, dated Ticonderoga, 18th July, a copy of part of which I herewith send you. "I find the troops from your Colony, under the command of Col. Hinman, destitute of tents, an article they much stand in need of, being now crowded into bad barracks, which I fear will be productive of disease. Should it be impossible to procure the materials for making tents in your Colony, they may possibly be furnished by the New-York Congress, which can make no material difference, as it will probably be a Continental expense."

On consideration that this Colony is so far exhausted of materials for making tents, that it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to furnish them in any tolerable season, and considering the much greater convenience, in point of conveyance, with which they may be had from New-York, I have thought proper to desire that your Province will furnish our troops, under command of Colonel Hinman, with such number of tents as will be necessary for their use. The complement of men to his said Regiment is one thousand, including officers.

You will please to inform me, per return of this express, whether my request may be complied with, as, on failure, we shall endeavour to exert ourselves in the best manner we can. I am, with great truth and esteem, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

Hon. Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire.

GENERAL THOMAS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Roxbury Camp, July 25, 1775.

SIR: There was information forwarded to Head-Quarters yesterday, P. M., of the sailing of thirteen ships from Boston. I sent one Captain Davis down the harbour to watch their motions, and he reports, on his return, that they put to sea, and stood their course about east-south-east, which appears as if they were bound to the southward; that course would lead them out by Cape Cod, and to the chops of the South Channel.

I am, Sir, with great respect, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS.

To his Excellency General Washington.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, FROM AN OFFICER IN BOSTON, DATED JULY 25, 1775.

As far as I can guess from a matter not perfectly known, we at present are worse off than the rebels. In point of numbers they so surpass us, that we are like a few children in the midst of a large crowd. Trusting to this superiority, they grow daily more and more bold, menacing us most insolently, and we fear, when the days shorten, and dark nights come on, they will put some of their threats in execution, unless other re-enforcements, and a fleet of men-of-war arrive soon. They know our situation as well as we do ourselves, from the villains that are left in Town, who acquaint them with all our proceedings, making signals by night with gunpowder, and at day out of the church steeples. About three weeks ago three fellows were taken out of one of the latter, who confess they had been so employed for seven days. Another was caught last week swimming over to the rebels, with one of their General's passes in his pocket; he will be hanged in a day or two.

Since we have been here, we have been re-enforced by four Regiments; but many of the men are very ill with fluxes, occasioned by the bad water which they got on landing; and the want of fresh provisions. No action has happened since the 17th of June. A few shot have been exchanged by scouting parties; one morning they beat in our advanced guard, and burnt the guard-house; and on the 19th instant they set fire to the Light-house, and one of our men-of-war lying but a mile from it. As it was calm we could not get at them, their whale-boats, in which they made their escape, outrowing any of our boats, and a small island lying between them and the ship, prevented her firing on them. They took from the Light-house a six pounder and a swivel.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON TO HIS FRIEND IN NEW-YORK, DATED JULY 26, 1775.

I have seen the Ministry, and conversed with the first personages near our Sovereign, and with confidence can assure you that I have not heard one word fall from the lips of those people that had the least tendency to enslave the Colonists. I find the language of humanity breathes forth; their bosoms seem to heave with compassion for a people under an unhappy delusion; observe, I use the common phrase here. Lord North's motion, as explained to me, and generally understood in England, was certainly the groundwork for a conciliatory superstructure, if not an ample compliance with the demands of America. Its implication I shall confine within the compass of a few word, viz: Great Britain to recede from external and internal taxation on each Colony giving, by way of requisition, money towards defraying that expense necessary for the defence of the Empire. Believe me the quantum, as I am informed, is not the object; but an acknowledgment of that superintending power always exercised by Great Britain over its external Dominions—a superintending power absolutely necessary for promoting the happiness of Colonies so widely differing in commercial interests. It is true Great Britain reserves a power to lay duties on such articles of commerce as interferes with its own manufactures; but the revenue arising from such duties, to be carried to account of the Colony where they are laid. It likewise reserves a power to compel any refractory Colony to fulfil its engagements. In our memory, good Sir, when some Colonies refused to contribute their quotas when the service of America required its united force, even some of the Assemblies and Continental Conventions complained of it, and declared that Parliament should interfere to compel the delinquent Colonies to do what was necessary.

I am informed here that Parliament has, by its Constitution, certain inherent rights, which it cannot divest itself of; that of a supreme legislative power over the extended dominions is one. It may, and in this case I am very well informed certainly will, give the Colonies such securities that it will not exercise it, except in the cases above mentioned. The inexpediency of exercising this power over the Colonies in all cases is manifest, that is, after the controverted points are settled. Viewing the dispute in the light I have here pointed it out, why will not America meet England on friendly and equitable ground, and settle the dispute by negotiation, rather than let the horrors of civil war carry devastation through your once happy peaceful land. Painful reflection. This dispute must have an end. If it is settled by the longest sword, the cause of quarrel will be forgot, and the terms of peace adequate to the success of the victorious. Why will the demands of America be left in so precarious a situation? The events of war are uncertain; the battle is not always in favour of the strong. Every thing that I see round me, indicates vigorous measures on the part of England. It is in peace with its neighbouring states; trade flourishing at home and tranquillity in every County; the Parliament at all events determined to support its authority; and I believe as willing to give generous terms to the Colonies.

I have but too great reason to believe America has had many false friends on this side the Atlantick, I mean those who convey from hence wrong accounts of the situation of affairs here, which made the Americans view them through a false medium. Local politicks influenced some, others oppose Government on any principles, and care not if America was deluged in blood, if their private purposes were answered. Why will not the friends of peace now stand forth, and endeavour to heal the wound before it becomes incurable? The spirit of England beats high. The most vigorous measures you may depend on will be pursued. If success attends the King's troops, you can easily foresee the consequences: a flourishing and once happy country reduced to the greatest distress; commerce, that source of wealth, banished the coast; civil discord diffused through all ranks of people; the bands of civil society dissolved; and anarchy, with all its baneful attendants, substituted in the place of good order. On the other hand, if the Provincials succeed, it must be in the course of many hard-fought battles. And pray, will success on their side be an equivalent for the loss they must sustain in the pursuit of it? It will not. The American trade must suffer; the farmer, the merchant, and the wealthy inhabitants who, by many years industry, have purchased a peaceful retirement from the busy world, must be reduced to the lowest ebb of distress. And for what? In pursuit of an object which could be obtained on easy and honourable terms.

Exert yourself, my dear friend, in your Country's cause. Promote, as far as you can, a reconciliation between the parent and her children. I wish not to see America lose a particle of its right: but I wish to see that right obtained in a manner consistent with the dignity of Britons and of Christians. It has been said American Petitions have not been received. Let not this opinion prevent another application in this mode. If it is done in time, and constitutionally, believe me, success will attend it. I love America; I have chosen it voluntarily for my residence; and I hope to spend the evening of my life in your western world. This is the impulsive cause of my writing so freely to you. I am convinced the language I use would not be acceptable to many on your Continent. It is the language of a real friend to America. Be not any longer duped by a discontented, disappointed faction on this side the Atlantic; nor the local politicks of false friends in America. May kind Providence dissipate the impending clouds that threaten your ruin; and may the Olive once more extend its branches over your Western world, is my sincere and constant wish.

Salute, with great truth, for me the partner of your happiness, and those tender branches you cherish with so much care and parental affection.

You have my sentiments fully on American affairs. I say nothing but what I can support; I never did, nor ever will.

MARINUS WILLETT AND OTHERS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, July 26, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Having freely accepted of the honourable appointment which you have conferred upon us, as officers to serve in defending the rights and liberties of our injured and oppressed Country, permit us to lay before you the great inconvenience which we must unavoidably suffer from the necessity we are under of providing ourselves with clothing, arms, &c., if there is not some adequate provision made to enable us to take the field. Were we possessed of fortunes sufficient to support ourselves, we should be far from troubling you with our solicitations upon this score, and should esteem ourselves extremely happy in having the opportunity of sacrificing both that and our lives in so glorious a cause; but as that is not the case, we are constrained to solicit your bounty, not doubting but you will consider the peculiarity of our situation, and grant us such relief as in your wisdom shall seem meet.

We are, gentlemen, in behalf and by order of the officers of our Regiment, your very humble servants,

MARINUS WILLETT, JAMES M. HUGHES,
JOHN BEEKMAN, WILLIAM GOFORTH.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read September 14, 1775.]

Ticonderoga, July 26, 1775.

SIR: I do myself the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatches of the 18th instant, (which were delivered to me last evening,) enclosing a copy of a speech intended to be made to the Six Nations, the Declaration of Congress, and a newspaper containing the Articles of War. It gives me great satisfaction to learn, that a thousand of the troops raised in the Colony of Connecticut are ordered to Albany.

You will perceive, Sir, by the enclosed, that I am not likely to have any other in time to act offensively, and the necessity of such an operation becomes daily more evident to me. It cannot be surprising, then, that I am chagrined that I have not yet any of the stores here (nor do I learn that they are arrived at Albany) for building craft to carry me across this lake, nor any of the intrenching tools. I have increased my carpenters, and they are constantly employed in procuring the materials for building boats; the moment I have sufficient craft and carriages for a few guns, I will pick my men and give them the best of the arms, and proceed to St. John's. Major Brown left Crown Point early on Monday morning, and as the winds have been favourable to carry him to the north end of the lake, I hope he is now near Caughnawaga. He is accompanied by a Canadian and three people from hence, and I trust that he will bring me more certain intelligence of the state of things in Canada than any we have yet had.

I am very happy that a Commissary-General and the other appointments have taken place; we really stood in great need of them. Mr. Livingston is at Albany, and I shall immediately give him directions for supplying the Army, that we may not be retarded in that department. I am very sorry to find so little pork in the Colony as is mentioned in the enclosed letter, and for the want of the arrival of fat cattle here, I am under the disagreeable necessity of expending part of the little stock of pork I have at this place and Crown Point.

I have not yet been able to execute your order relative to the men employed in taking and garrisoning these fortresses. I find it will be extremely difficult to ascertain their number with any degree of precision.

As an immediate Convention of the Indians at Albany is indispensably necessary, I shall take the liberty to desire Mr. Douw, and the Committee of Albany, to despatch the proper messengers to invite them down; and, as I cannot fix on a day for the meeting, shall leave it to them, and request them to give notice to the other Commissioners, that they may attend; and as, in all probability, I will not be present, I shall send the speech to Mr. Douw, to be delivered to his colleagues when they arrive at Albany. Mr. Francis cannot be too early at Albany; that gentleman might promote the business much, especially among the Mohawk Tribe.

A fracas has happened in Tryon County, between the well-affected and the Sheriff of the County. I enclose the account I have received of it. It is a very alarming circumstance, that four hundred men in that County, inimical to our cause, should be possessed of arms. I should be at no loss what measures to take, were it not on account of the delicate situation we are in with respect to the Indians. Perhaps these people might be induced to give up their arms (of which we are in great want) on assurances that they will be protected from insult.

I shall leave great part of the troops ordered from New-York at Albany, until I receive the necessaries for building, &c., to prevent the expense of feeding them at this place, unless any intelligence from Canada should make it necessary to have them here sooner.

The artificers that I am under a necessity of taking out of the troops here, will not work unless they are paid; I promised them the same that was allowed last war, only until the determination of Congress.

I feel very sensibly the attention of Congress in the appointments I recommended, and in their assurances to give me every support to enable me to do my duty; in the discharge of which, I shall arduously strive to merit a continuance of their countenance.

I have ventured on the measure of calling the Indians, as they cannot be collected sooner than the first of September, if so soon, and in that time I supposed every necessary might be prepared for them.

I am, Sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., &c.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GEN. SCHUYLER.

[Read in Congress September 14, 1775.]

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 15, 1775. }

SIR: We have received your letters, and written to the Continental Congress on these subjects. We shall, with all despatch, send the officer you mention. We have already ordered to Albany tents for one Regiment. Our troops can be of no service to you; they have no arms, clothes, blankets, or ammunition; the officers no commissions; our treasury no money; ourselves in debt. It is in vain to complain; we will remove difficulties as fast as we can, and send you soldiers, whenever the men we have raised are entitled to that name. The intrenching tools shall be sent soon—some immediately—and all the pork that can be had, about one hundred barrels. Use, we pray you, the troops at Ticonderoga as well as you can.

We are, very sincerely, your countrymen and friends.

By order: HENRY WILLIAMS, Chairman.

P. S. General Burgoyne has not been seen at Boston since the 17th ultimo; and it is currently reported and believed that he is gone to Quebeck.

SCHENECTADY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

[Read in Congress September 14, 1775.]

Schenectady Committee-Chamber, July 23, 1775.

HONoured SIR: By an express just arrived from Caughnawaga, we beg leave to acquaint you that there has been a great alarm on the Mohawk River, with the Sheriff, Alexander White, who has repeatedly insulted the inhabitants, and at last brought it to such a height, by heaping one crime on the top of another, that the people assembled together in order to take him prisoner. He took shelter under the protection of Sir John Johnson, who has about four hundred men assembled for that purpose. Sir John Johnson hath given his word of honour that the Sheriff is gone off; and by all accounts he is gone by way of Sacadago, and so try to make his escape that way to Canada. He doubtless is possessed of letters of consequence. We therefore think proper to give you the earliest notice, as your people may perhaps fall in with him, if they keep a watchful eye. His pilots are two Indians. There is a Sub-Committee from this Board, jointly with one from Albany, gone up to Caughnawaga to see how matters stand.

We have the honour to be your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

CHRIST. YATES, Chairman.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 26, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I have just received a letter from Mr. Williams, as Chairman of your Committee of Safety, in the recess of the Congress. The difficulties you labour under with respect to equipping the troops for the field, are really very distressing. But yet I should hope that at least some part of the troops might be furnished with arms, clothing, and blankets, and such might be sent up. Would it not be proper that those raising at Albany should have clothing sent to them, if you have any at New-York beyond what will clothe such as have arms?

For want of a variety of the articles which I begged might be sent up, I cannot by any means prosecute the intentions of the Continental Congress. If, therefore, they are not yet sent, pray let no delay be made, lest we should lose an opportunity of doing a service very essential to the Colonies—to this in particular, and in which delay will be fatal.

I am informed by the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., that the Congress has recommended to you the appointment of an Adjutant-General or Brigade-Major for this Department. An active man and a good disciplinarian is much, very much wanted indeed, to fill the first mentioned office. I beg that whoever you may appoint, you will order him without delay to join me. I stand in great need of his services.

Could not a gentleman be got to accept of a commission as commander of the Artillery? Perhaps if rank was given, it would induce some good man to undertake it. Such an officer is so evidently necessary, that I hope this recommendation will claim your attention.

I am very sensible of your spirited exertions in this critical day; and if I press you for farther assistance with a seeming importunity, it is because the force of necessity obliges me to it; it is because I wish to see my countrymen about me, that I may have their testimony of my conduct.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect and with the best wishes, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

The Provincial Congress of New-York.

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

Cambridge, July 26, 1775.

SIR: I am directed by his Excellency General Washington to inform you, that yesterday afternoon three men-of-war, with a number of transports, sailed from Boston. They steered E. S. E. after they got out, but we cannot yet learn their destination, or whether they have taken off any part of the troops of the enemy. As their designs are so much unknown to us, and it is possible they may move to New-York, the General thought proper to apprize you of it, that you may be prepared for such an event. This he would have done with his own hand, but he has been much indisposed for some days past.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most humble servant,

JOSEPH REED, Secretary.

JAMES CHRISTIE, JUN., TO THE PUBLICK.

Baltimore, July 27, 1775.

However disagreeable it is to every one to have their private and confidential letters exposed to publick view, yet I am in some measure compelled, by the necessity of my situation, to publish the following letter, written by me on the 22d of February last, to my friend and relation, Colonel Christie, at Antigua. I confess the whole of the proceeding respecting this unfortunate affair has been published very candidly by the Committee; yet it is to be observed, that only that part of my letter is published where I gave my opinion of politicks. My letter, therefore, has been considered by many as a letter on publick affairs only. Many representations, too, have been propagated to our disadvantage.

The most superficial reader must perceive, from the date of the letter, that it was written at a time when we had heard nothing of their determinations in England on our publick affairs; and this letter was intercepted at a time when, perhaps, the affairs of this country did not necessarily require such a breach of trust, and such an invasion of private rights.

The most superficial reader will easily observe, that this is by no means a letter of politicks, or on publick affairs, but merely on my private business, on the affairs of our family, and those of our relations. In times like these, it is almost impossible to avoid mentioning politicks amidst the most private concerns; but I submit it to the candid, whether the opinions I have mentioned did not arise naturally and of course from the subject. As to the sentiments themselves, I can only say, that though mentioned to an officer, yet it was in confidence, to a relation and a friend, without any expectation that they would ever give offence to any, or even be productive of any publick measures whatever.

I have only to regret, that in expressing my opinion of measures which I then could not approve, because I did not then think them promotive of the interest or happiness of this country, I should have used expressions which have given offence. With the humane, perhaps, my situation at that time will plead my excuse.

JAMES CHRISTIE, JUN.

JAMES CHRISTIE, JUN., TO LIEUT. GABRIEL CHRISTIE.

Baltimore, February 2, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I duly received your favours of the 13th and 22d November, and should probably have wrote you before now, had I not met with the greatest misfortune in the power of fate to inflict on me, in the loss of the wife of my soul, on the 15th of December last, that has almost put it out of my power to mind any thing for some time past; and all my fortitude is scarce sufficient to bear me up; however, I must submit. She had been brought to bed of a girl about twenty days; the dear little infant died a few days after its mother.

I some time since remitted twenty-two pounds eight shillings sterling, to be paid your mother for the boy's passage, (being twenty pounds, and interest on it at six per cent. since I received the money,) and which, on the whole, leaves them about seven pounds currency in my debt, which I shall soon receive for rent. Charles's expense for clothing, schooling, &c., when ashore, runs high, but I think he may now pay for himself. Gabriel has been with me three or four months, and so far has behaved to my satisfaction; and I would flatter myself he may easily be broke of the idle, indolent habit he has been acquiring. He applies well to any thing I put him to, and after a while I hope may do.

As your brother's correspondence and mine has been suspended since a letter I wrote him about the boys, soon after receipt of yours, I wrote my sister about John Greame's mandamus, and to get me the preference of it. I have thought nothing more about it, and am now quite undetermined. At present I think of going to Britain, so soon as my affairs will admit of it, and leave my little boy at Sirling; and, if things turn out to my liking, perhaps I may remain, and set myself down either in London or Glasgow. When I may get away is wholly uncertain—I would hope some time next fall. We are in such terrible confusion with our politicks, there is no depending on any thing; and that, added to other things, makes me wish myself out of the Province. We are little behind the New-Englanders, mustering, purchasing arms, ammunition, &c. We have some violent fanatical spirits among us, who do every thing in their power to run things to the utmost extremity; and they are gone so far, that we moderate people are under the necessity of uniting for our own defence, after being threatened with expulsion, loss of life, &c., for not acceding to what we deem treason and rebellion.

The Provost and family are all well. I believe he has nothing lately from James. He has made inquiry about negotiating bills on him in Bengal, and finds it may be done at a disadvantage of twenty per cent., and thirty per cent. more, if the bills are protested; on the whole, fifty per cent., in case of protest. Whether he will attempt it or not I know not. Our publick affairs vex him, and he wishes himself away; but I know not when, or if ever that will happen. A part of your or any other Regiment, I believe, would keep us very quiet. Do you expect to remain long in the West-Indies? I shall hope to hear from you soon, and am, very truly, dear Sir, yours,

JAMES CHRISTIE, Jun.

Lieut. Gabriel Christie, of the 60th Regiment, Antigua.

PHILADELPHIA MILITARY ASSOCIATION.

Philadelphia July 27, 1775.

Whereas, the Officers of the Military Association for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia have settled the Pay of the following persons employed by them, at the rates hereafter mentioned:

An Adjutant to receive seven Shillings and six Pence per day; a Sergeant-Major thirty Shillings per week; a Drummer twenty Shillings per week; a Fife-Major twenty-five Shillings; and a Fifer twenty Shillings per week:

And as extravagant demands have been made by some of the persons employed in the forementioned capacities, and threats made use of in case of non-compliance with their demands, that they would leave their present employ and go into the service of other Associators in this or the neighbouring Provinces, the foregoing Regulation is published, for the information of officers who are not of this Corps. And it is earnestly requested that no officers employ any of the persons acting in the foregoing capacities in this City and Liberties, without their producing a discharge from the officer or officers under whom they now do duty. NEW-BRUNSWICK (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

City of New-Brunswick, July 27, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour of the 21st instant came safe to hand; the contents of which was duly observed.

Application was immediately made to Mr. Merrill, who says, about three weeks past a person coming from Egg-Harbour, when within the Hook, saw a boat standing down our bay, that he thought was loaded with flour, which boat, he believes, went along side the man-of-war. This is all he ever heard or knows of the matter. Every other inquiry in our power has been made, but can make no further discovery.

All intelligences and discoveries of every action inimical to American liberty, and every matter of instruction for our better preservation and protection, will be paid due regard to and cheerfully received from you by the Committee of this City.

Assure yourselves, gentlemen, that this Committee has and ever will be ready to render to their country every service in their power, and will continue to give a strict attention to, and duly observe all resolutions formed by the Continental Congress.

We are, with esteem, gentlemen, your obedient humble servants.

JOHN DENNIS, Chairman.

To Mr. Henry Williams, Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

NEW-YORK CONGRESS TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 27, 1775.

SIR: In compliance with the request of Congress, which you did us the honour to mention in your letters of the 17th and 19th of July instant, we have appointed William Duer, Esquire, Deputy Adjutant-General, and taken the liberty to give him, in his commission, which we received yesterday, the rank of Colonel.

We beg leave to submit to the wisdom of Congress, whether or not it will be proper to have a Major of Brigade appointed also; and should it be deemed necessary, we would readily decline the honour of nominating a person to fill that office, having full confidence in the wisdom and integrity of our Delegates, and being well convinced that they will recommend no man who is not endued with every qualification necessary to discharge any trust which you may think proper to repose in him.

We are, with great respect, Sir, your countrymen and servants. By order:

P. V. B. LIVINGSTON, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read September 14, 1775.]

Ticonderoga, July 27, 1775.

SIR: Since my last of yesterday, Captain Halsey, who has commanded the sloop since she was left by her former commander, arrived at this post. He reports that the Schooner Liberty is returned from her cruise towards the north end of Lake Champlain; that about Isle-la-Motte she fell in with two canoes, containing three Frenchmen and as many Indians; that they informed the Captain that Governour Carleton had in vain attempted to prevail upon the savages to act against us; that the Canadians would be neuter, perhaps act in our favour; that a picket fort, surrounded with a ditch, is erected at St. John's; that preparations were making for mounting cannon; that the Regular Troops at that place consisted of about four hundred and fifty men; that two men from Crown Point, who were carrying an Indian boy, on his return from Mr. Wheelock's school, into Canada, had been made prisoners and detained; and that a scouting party of Regular Troops has been almost as far south as Mr. Gilleland's, about thirty-five miles from hence.

Captain Baker, who left Crown Point with the party to carry the Indian boy, but separated from them, fell in with some Indians at Missisque. Their information confirms the above. His is enclosed.

In this situation of affairs, no manœuvre appears to me more necessary than an immediate movement to St. John's, which will determine what we are to expect from the Canadians; and this known, any future military operations in this quarter may be regulated by it. But how to get there? All the craft I am possessed of (and I have already bought or engaged all the pettiangers belonging to the inhabitants here) will not carry at the most more than five hundred and fifty men; nor are any of the stores mentioned in a former letter of mine, as yet arrived here. It is probable, from the letter which I yesterday transmitted to you, that they have not yet left New-York, and without them I cannot proceed, even if I had boats; for as my whole stock of powder will be less than three tons when that from Philadelphia arrives, I must necessarily not fire a gun without certain execution, and therefore want the intrenching tools, which are part of the articles, to make the approaches up to their very ditch; and that cannot be done with the few tools I have here.

Although you will perceive by the enclosed return, that my stock of provisions is very scant, yet I shall not be detained on that account, as it may follow me. I shall make all the despatch I possibly can, and move the moment I am in a condition for it.

It appears to me highly necessary that more powder should be sent up; for if even I should be fortunate enough to succeed against St. John's with the little I have, it cannot be expected that much would be left. But if I should be under the disagreeable necessity of retreating, the want of it might be followed with the loss of this fortress and command of the lake.

I am, Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

An Account of the voyage of Captain REMEMBER BAKER, begun the 13th day of JULY, and ended JULY 25, 1775, on LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

On the 16th instant an Indian trader informed him that general orders were given out by Governour Carleton not to fire on our people, nor to pass the line, nor even to fire on our parties, if they were even to come to St. John's, but to take them, if possible; but that it proved to be false. This information he received from Esquire Metcalf and one Sear.

On the same day he sent two lads with an Indian boy over the line; that they did not return, but has been since informed by Frenchmen and Indians, that they were taken.

Messrs. Sear and Metcalf informed him that the Regulars were intrenched at St. John's, with twelve cannon mounted, and four hundred and fifty men; that they keep scouts out in a large birch canoe.

That he was in company with Indians of two Nations, St. Francois and Conesadaga, and was treated with great civility, and was supplied with provisions by them. They informed him that seven Nations had agreed not to fight the Yankees, and have sent three men to Boston to confirm it with the Congress. The Towns are Lolet, Conesadaga, Panomsut, Caughnawaga, St. Francois, Wesunkanaugh, and Wolenuck; that each Town had appointed one captain and one governour, who had convened and made a governour over the whole.

REMEMBER BAKER.

Ticonderoga, July 26, 1775.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 27, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Since my letter of yesterday I have received such intelligence as makes it indispensably necessary that not one moment's delay should be made in forwarding me the stores mentioned in the estimate I delivered you on the 3d of July. I have a number of carpenters, and no materials to employ them. A thousand of the Connecticut Troops are ordered to join me; and I do most, most earnestly entreat that such of the men raised in this Colony as are furnished with arms, may be sent to Albany without any delay. General Montgomery is there to forward them to me.

I am, gentlemen, with great esteem and respect, your most obedient humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

The New-York Provincial Congress.

GEN. WASHINGTON TO JOHN AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON.

Camp at Cambridge, July 27, 1775.

DEAR BROTHER: On the 2d instant I arrived at this place, after passing through a great deal of delightful country, covered with grass, (although the season has been dry,) in a manner very different from our lands in Virginia.

I found a mixed multitude of people here, under very little discipline, order, or government; the enemy in possession of a place called Bunker's Hill, on Charlestown Neck, strongly intrenched, and fortifying themselves; part of our own Army on two hills, called Winter and Prospect Hills, about a mile and a quarter from the enemy on Bunker's Hill, in a very insecure state; another part at this village; and a third part at Roxbury, guarding the entrance in and out of Boston. My whole time since I came here, has been employed in throwing up lines of defence at these three several places, to secure, in the first instance, our own Troops from any attempts of the enemy; and, in the next place, to cut off all communication between their Troops and the country. To do this, and to prevent them from penetrating into the country with fire and sword, and to harass them if they do, is all that is expected of me. If effected, it must totally overthrow the designs of Administration, as the whole force of Great Britain in the Town and Harbour of Boston, can answer no other end than to sink her under the disgrace and weight of the expense. The enemy's strength, including marine forces, is computed, from the best accounts I can get, at about twelve thousand men; ours, including sick and absent, at about sixteen thousand; but then we have to guard a semicircle of eight or nine miles, to every part of which we are obliged to be equally attentive; whilst they, situated as it were in the centre of the semicircle, and having the entire command of the water, can bend their whole force against any one part of it with equal facility. This renders our situation not very agreeable, though necessary. However, by incessant labour, Sundays not excepted, we are in a much better posture of defence now than when I first came. The enclosed, though rough, will give you some small idea of Boston and the bay on this side, as also of the post they have taken on Charlestown Neck at Bunker's Hill, and of our posts.

The enemy are sickly, and in want of fresh provisions. Beef, which is chiefly got by slaughtering their milch cows in Boston, sells from one shilling to eighteen pence sterling per pound; and that it may not become cheaper, or more plenty, I have driven all the stock within a considerable distance of this place, back into the country, out of the way of the men-of-war's boats. In short, I have done, and shall continue to do, every thing in my power to distress them. The transports have all arrived, and their whole re-enforcement is landed, so that I can see no reason why they should not, if they ever attempt it, come boldly out, and put the matter to issue at once. If they think themselves not strong enough to do this, they surely will carry their arms (having ships-of-war and transports ready) to some other part of the Continent, or relinquish the dispute; the last of which, the Ministry, unless compelled, will never agree to do. Our works and those of the enemy are so near, and the space between us so open, that each sees every thing the other is doing.

I recollect nothing more worth mentioning. I shall therefore conclude, with my best wishes and love to my sister and the family, and compliments to any inquiring friends. Your most affectionate brother,

GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge Camp, July 27, 1775.

SIR: Yesterday a deputation from the Provincial Congress of New-Hampshire attended me, with a request that three companies raised in their Province, and now posted on Connecticut River, at and between the two Colonies, commanded by Captain Timothy Bedell, James Osgood, and John Parker, might be continued for the security of the frontiers of that Province on the Continental establishment. As it did not appear to me that their request could be complied with, and as I apprehend you may have more immediate occasion for them than I have, I thought it proper to give you the earliest notice where they are, that if you think proper you may order them to join the Troops under your command; in which case you will please to write to Matthew Thornton, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress. Each company consists of sixty-five men, including officers, and are reported to me as able-bodied, stout, active fellows, used to the woods, capable of any duty, and having an acquaintance with Canada. But you will please to remember that they must continue under their own officers, to whom they are attached, and subject only to superiour command. We have had no transaction of any consequence since I wrote you last. Our Army is in good health and spirits, well supplied with all kinds of provisions. The situation of the enemy is directly the reverse, and we have reason to think desertions will be very great; four have come out within the last twenty-four hours.

I am, Sir, with much esteem, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Philip Schuyler, Esq., Major-General, Ticonderoga.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp at Cambridge, July 27, 1775.

SIR: Nothing material has occurred in either camp since I had the honour of addressing you on the twenty-first instant by express. But on Tuesday, three men-of-war and nine transports sailed out of Boston Harbour, and stood a course about east-south-east.

One Groves, who came out of Boston the same evening, informed the officer at one of the out-posts, that the transports had on board six hundred men, and were bound to Block-Island, Fisher's-Island, and Long-Island, to plunder them and bring off what cattle they may find. The fellow returned again into Boston, under such suspicious circumstances, that it has led me to doubt the truth of his intelligence. A deserter, who came in afterwards, informs me that it was given out in their camp that they were either gone for Indians or fresh provisions, and that each transport had but twenty men on board. Upon this intelligence I immediately wrote to Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, and to General Wooster, that they might use proper precautions for removing the cattle off those islands and the coasts, and to prevent any surprise. As we are confirmed by every account in the scarcity of fresh provisions in the enemy's camp, and particularly by this deserter, who says they have had none since the battle of Lexington, it is very probable this voyage may be only intended for a supply; but as it may possibly be otherwise, I thought it best to transmit the intelligence to the honourable Congress, that they may forward it to the southward, or take such other step as they may judge proper.

Since writing the above, three men (deserters) have come out, which make four in twenty-four hours. Their accounts correspond with those of the first who came out, and which I have related above.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp at Roxbury, July 21, 1775.

SIR: I have the pleasure to inform your Excellency that Major Vose, of my own Regiment, besides securing the barley on Nantasket, yesterday morning landed on the Light-House Island with six or seven boats; the Light-House was set on fire and the wood-work burnt. The party brought off three casks of oil, all the furniture of the Light-House, about fifty pounds of gunpowder, a quantity of cordage, &c., an inventory of which will be forwarded to your Excellency. Some of the brave men who effected this with their lives in their hands, have just now applied to me, to know whether it was to be considered as plunder or otherwise. I was not able to determine this matter, but told them that I would lay the matter before your Excellency. I would beg leave to add, that these brave men were, some of them, at Grape-Island, Deer-Island, and at Long-Island, when each of those islands were stripped of their stock, &c.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,
W. HEATH.
To his Excellency General Washington.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 22, 1775.

(Parole, Nantasket.)

(Countersign, Mississippi.)

A Court of Inquiry to sit forthwith; President, Doctor Foster; Doctor Warren and Doctor Eustace, members; to examine into a complaint exhibited by Mr. John Spalding, Surgeon to Gen. Putnam's Regiment, against Mr. Penuel Chiney, Surgeon's-mate of the said Regiment; all evidences to attend the Court.

Captain Israel Putnam, and Lieutenant Samuel Webb, being appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Putnam, they are to be obeyed as such.

Regularity and due subordination being so essentially necessary to the good order and government of an army, and without it the whole must soon become a scene of disorder and confusion, the General finds it indispensably necessary, without waiting any longer for despatches from the General Continental Congress, immediately to form the Army into three grand divisions, and of dividing each of those grand divisions into two Brigades. He therefore orders that the following Regiments, viz: General Ward's, Gen. Thomas's, Colonel Fellows's, Colonel Cotton's, Colonel Danielson's, and Colonel D. Brewer's, compose one brigade, and be under the command of Brigadier-General Thomas; that General Spencer's, Colonel Parsons's,

Colonel Learned's, Colonel Walker's, Colonel J. Read's, Independents, compose another brigade, to be commanded by Brigadier-General Spencer. That these two brigades compose the right wing or division of the Army, and be under the command of Major-General Ward, and remain at Roxbury and its southern dependancies. That Colonel Stark's, Colonel Poor's, Colonel Reid's, of New-Hampshire, and Colonel Nixon's, Colonel Mansfield's, Colonel Doolittle's, of Massachusetts, be formed into another brigade, under the command of Brigadier-General Sullivan, and posted on Winter Hill. That Colonel Varnum's, Colonel Hitchcock's, Colonel Church's, of Rhode-Island, and Colonel Whitcomb's, Colonel Gardner's, Colonel J. Brewer's, Col. Little's, of Massachusetts, be formed into another brigade, and commanded by Brigadier-General Green, and posted upon Prospect Hill, and these two brigades compose the left wing, or second division of the Army, under the command of Major-General Lee. That General Putnam's, Colonel Glover's, Colonel Frye's, Colonel Bridge's, Col. Woodbridge's, Colonel Sergeant's, be formed into another brigade, under the command of the senior officer therein, and until the pleasure of the Continental Congress be known, these two brigades to be under the command of Major-General Putnam; also a corps-de-reserve for the defence of the several posts north of Roxbury, not already named.

The arrangement now ordered to take place is to be made as speedily as possible, and the Majors-General are to see it done accordingly; some inconveniences may arise to certain individuals by this change, but as the good of the service requires it to be made, an alert and ready compliance is expected.

All applications from henceforward, by officers or soldiers, for leave of absence, are to be made to the Major-General commanding each division, who is to judge of the propriety of the application, and grant furloughs where they see cause, without applying to the Commander-in-Chief, provided it be not contrary to General Orders.

General Heath's Regiment is to take post at No. 2, in lieu of General Ward's; Colonel Patterson's remains at No. 3; Colonel Scammons's to occupy No. 1, and the redoubt between that and No. 2; Colonel Prescott's Regiment to take post at the redoubt upon Sewell's Point; Col. Gerrish's Regiment to furnish the Companies for Chelsea, Malden, and Medford.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 23, 1775.

(Parole, Brunswick.)

(Countersign, Princeton.)

As the Continental Army have unfortunately no uniforms, and consequently many inconveniences must arise from not being able always to distinguish the commissioned officers from the non-commissioned, and the non-commissioned from the privates, it is desired that some badges of distinction may be immediately provided; for instance, the Field-Officers may have red or pink coloured cockades in their hats, the Captains yellow or buff, and the Subalterns green; they are to furnish themselves accordingly. The Sergeants may be distinguished by an epaulette, or stripe of red cloth sewed upon the right shoulder, the Corporals by one of green.

The people employed to make spears, are desired by the General to make four dozen of them immediately, thirteen feet in length, and the wood part a good deal more substantial than those already made; those, particularly, in the New-Hampshire lines, are ridiculously short and light and can answer no sort of purpose; no more are therefore to be made on the same model.

The commanding officers of the different works and posts are once more enjoined to furnish themselves with a sufficient number of gabions and fascines, which are to stop up the entrances of their respective redoubts and lines, and to repair their works, which may either be damaged by the weather or the fire of the enemy. It is observed that several of the entrances of the redoubts are still left open without any sort of defence, the commanding officers of each redoubt are therefore ordered to cut a wide deep ditch at the entrances, and throw a bridge of strong plank across; this is to be done without delay.

John Davis, of Captain Foster's Company, in Colonel Gridley's Regiment of Artillery, tried for "desertion and suspicion of intending to go to the enemy," is acquitted by the General Court-Martial.

Ensign Trafton, accused by Colonel Scammons of "abusive language to the said Colonel Scammons while under arrest," tried by a General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Nixon was President. The Court are unanimously of opinion that the prisoner is not guilty, and do therefore acquit him with honour.

Lieutenant Trafton to be forthwith released from his arrest.

Michael Bury, of Captain Parker's Company, and Col. Prescott's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for "refusing his duty and enlisting in another Company." The Court condemn the prisoner, and order him to receive thirty-nine lashes. The General orders the sentence to be put in execution at the head of the Regiment the delinquent belongs to.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 24, 1775.

(Parole, Salisbury.)

(Countersign, Cumberland.)

It being thought proper to distinguish the Majors from the Brigadiers-General by some particular mark, for the future the Majors-General will wear a broad purple ribband.

Notwithstanding the General Orders marking the distinctions of General Officers, Aids-de-Camp, &c., the Generals are frequently stopped by the sentinels, which can only happen from the Captains having neglected to read the orders to their respective Companies. If any General Officer, Aid-de-Camp, or Major of Brigade, is again stopped through the ignorance of the sentinels, the Captains will be responsible.

As any attempt the enemy, from their late disappointments, may have the rashness or the hardness to make, will be violent and sudden, the General expects the officers and soldiers will be not only resolute but alert to defeat; and in a particular manner he enforces his orders to every field-officer, upon no account (duty excepted) to lay out of camp, but upon every occasion to shew by their example that activity and steady courage so necessary to defeat an enterprising enemy.

Notwithstanding the orders of the eleventh instant, expressly forbidding all officers and soldiers from quitting their guard before they are regularly relieved and dismissed, the General is informed such unsoldierlike practices are still committed; he therefore admonishes all officers and non-commissioned officers, not to suffer any person to quit their guard upon any pretence, care to be taken the men are properly supplied with provisions before they mount guard.

Report being this morning made to the General, that the main guard room is kept abominably filthy and dirty; for the future, one commanding officer is not to relieve another upon that guard, until he is assured that the officers and men's apartments are clean and in decent order.

The Surgeon of every Regiment in the lines, redoubts, or in or near Cambridge, to deliver to-morrow, at twelve at noon, to the Adjutant-General at Head-Quarters, an exact return of the sick in the Regiments they respectively belong to; the names, rank, and disorder of each officer, non-commissioned officer, and soldier, to be mentioned in the return. The returns of the Surgeons of the corps stationed in and near Roxbury, to be made to the commanding General at Roxbury, Tuesday noon, in the manner and form directed by the above order, and the General commanding at Roxbury will transmit them to Head-Quarters at orderly time, Wednesday.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 25, 1775.

(Parole, Halifax.)

(Countersign, York.)

Continual complaints being made that soldiers of regiments and companies, after enlisting in one company and regiment, have gone and enlisted in another, insomuch that it would engross the General's whole time to hear the disputes upon this subject; for the future, any officers who have any dispute in regard to the men re-enlisted, are to apply to the Brigadier commanding their Brigade, who will order a Court-Martial of the Brigade to hear and determine the matter.

The General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Nixon was President, to be dissolved this evening, and another General Court-Martial of the line to sit to-morrow morning at the usual time and place, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them. All evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 26, 1775.

(Parole, Amsterdam.)

(Countersign, Auboy.)

It is recommended to the commanding officers of corps, that all coverings made of boards be built in the form of barracks, and in the most advantageous manner, at the same time so contrived as to be warm and comfortable in cold weather.

All passes to be discontinued for the future, and no person to be admitted into the lines unless introduced by an officer who can vouch for him, or by order of the officer commanding in the lines.

It being represented that the present hospital is not large enough to contain the sick, Lieutenant-Governor Oliver's house is to be cleared for that purpose, and care to be taken that no injury is done to it.

Notwithstanding the strict and repeated orders that have been given against firing small-arms, it is hourly practised. All officers commanding guards, posts, and detachments, to be alert in apprehending all future transgressors.

Captain Clarke, of General Putnam's Regiment, confined in arrest for "neglect of duty when upon guard," tried by a late General Court-Martial, is acquitted, and is immediately to be released from his arrest.

Levi Woods, soldier in Captain Nutting's Company, in Colonel Prescott's Regiment, confined for "absenting himself without leave, and refusing to take the oath, and threatening to leave the Army." The Court-Martial, upon the prisoner's pleading guilty, and promising to behave obediently for the future, recommended him to the General's mercy; who is pleased to pardon the prisoner.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, July 27, 1775.

(Parole, Bedford.)

(Countersign, Guilford.)

John Trumbull, Esq., being appointed Aid-de-Camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, he is to be obeyed as such.

A Court of Inquiry to sit to-morrow morning at eight o'clock in the tutor's chamber, (Mr. Hall), to examine into a complaint, exhibited upon oath in the publick newspapers, against Mr. Benjamin Whiting, now a prisoner in the college. All evidences, and persons concerned, to attend the Court.

For the future, when any deserters come to any of the out guards, they are, with the least delay, to be sent by a corporal's guard to the next guard in the lines, who is immediately to escort them in the same manner to the Major-General commanding that division of the Army, who, as soon as he has examined them, will forthwith send them under a proper escort from his guard to the Head-Quarters. Some deserters being made drunk, who came last night from the enemy, before they reached Head-Quarters, it will be considered as a breach of orders in any person who gives rum to deserters, before they are examined by the General.

A subaltern officer's guard to be mounted to-morrow morning at eight o'clock, at a certain distance from the Small-Pox Hospital; the officer to come this evening at six o'clock to the Adjutant-General for orders.

COLONEL HURD TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Haverhill, Cohoos, July 27, 1775.

SIR: Though I am not of any Committee of Correspondence, yet, as a member of the Provincial Congress, I take this opportunity to acquaint you that the bearer, Colonel Bayley, goes down to Exeter and Cambridge (and will call on you in his way) expressly on purpose to accompany an Indian, by name Louis, of the Caughnawaga Tribe, who is just come in here from Montreal by way of the Lake Memphremagog and Upper Cohoos; the same who sent us these advices in the letter which I carried down and communicated to the Congress at the last session. He has all along appeared friendly to the New-England people, is very intelligent, and has the character among the Indian traders of an honest fellow, who has always stood by and made good his word.

Though no very remarkable occurrence has taken place in Canada that he informs of, yet the account he gives of the present disposition of the Indians and Canadians, and the situation of the Regular Troops there, seems so interesting, we have thought his information might be of service to the American cause. That your Committee of Safety, as well as the gentlemen of the Massachusetts and the Generals at Cambridge, would not be displeased with an opportunity to converse with him, for which reason we have persuaded Louis (having given a few small presents, and engaging some pay for his time) to make a journey down the country, paying a visit first to you, or your Committee at Exeter, and thence to the Army at Cambridge; and Colonel Bayley is so good as to undertake conducting him, having formerly some acquaintance with him. His time is short; he says he could not leave Montreal without a pass from the Governour, and a promise to return in about twenty days, as if going out upon a hunt. He speaks very good French, and English tolerably well, so as to be easily understood. By what we have learnt from him, our people are much easier in their settlements on these frontiers than they have been heretofore. For further particulars I must refer to Colonel Bayley. My best respects attend you and the gentlemen of the Committee; and am, Sir, your most humble obedient servant,

JOHN HURD.

The Honourable Matthew Thornton, Esq.

P. S. Captain Bedell has mustered his Company and paid them their month's advance; he would have readily attended on this Indian to wait upon your Committee, had not Colonel Bayley offered.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED LONDON, JULY 28, 1775.

I am grieved to the soul at seeing our political disputes arrive to so terrible a crisis. The 25th instant we received the account of the battle of Charlestown, near Boston; we have only the Government account, none from the Provincials. However, General Gage makes out two hundred and twenty-six killed, and eight hundred and twenty-eight wounded, of the Regulars. It is shocking to humanity to think that so much blood should be spilt through the obstinacy of a few men, who now plainly see they are exhausting the blood and treasure of this Kingdom to no purpose. We are anxious here to have some certain account from the Provincials of that battle. The Ministry do not now scruple to say, these bloody measures originate from the King himself, who absolutely persists in the plan of reducing the Americans at all events. It is generally thought that Lord North was against sending out Troops, but as to the others, I fancy they see the improbability of executing their plan, and therefore prudently (but basely) endeavour to throw the whole odium on their Royal Master's head.

People here are very anxious to hear the resolves of the Congress; and those who a week ago thought General Gage had Troops enough to march through America, now alter their tone, on finding the dispute for a mile of ground cost him one thousand and fifty-four men wounded and slain; they begin to think Gage must be content to keep possession of Boston, and that the New-Englanders are men of more courage than they dreamed of. We have received accounts from Georgia, that the people of that Province have acceded to the resolves of the Continental Congress. I wish it may be true, as the Tories here promised their cause great support from that Province keeping their ports open. It is said a Regiment of Highlanders is to be sent out, and ten thousand Hanoverians—I don't know how true; but this you may depend on, that several more ships are put into commission; and are intended for America; also I know it as a fact, that a great deal of ammunition and warlike stores were lately sent to Boston, from which you may judge of the disposition of our rulers.

P. S. I was this day in company with a boat-builder, who informed me that Government has contracted for a considerable number of flat-bottomed boats to be finished in the three weeks, and that he has engaged to build twelve by that time.

EXTRACT OF ANOTHER LETTER FROM LONDON, DATED JULY 29, 1775.

As in all probability the means of communication between us will soon be stopped, I am constrained to write even when I have nothing of importance to communicate. We have at length got an account from Government of the battle of the 17th of June, for which, garbled as it is, we are indebted to the ingenuity of some, who, suspecting that they had been in possession of the news some days, sat down and wrote an account of a battle, such as they thought likely to be fought, and sent it to the papers; which was published the next morning. As it defeated the Regulars with great slaughter, and as it was wrote with great semblance of truth, it threw Administration into confusion. They huddled up an account immediately, and sent it to the Gazette, which in course was to be published about eight o'clock that evening; but by the time the impression was thrown off, they found themselves so much dissatisfied even with the account of their own making, that they sent and had it destroyed, and prepared that which they have now given us; by which means the Town was kept waiting till two o'clock in the morning, before the Gazette was published. This account, favourable as it no doubt is, compared with the truth, (for we as yet have had none from the Provincials,) has had a wonderful effect. The minds of people on the side of Government, even of those that were most sanguine, begin to be soured. Those who made no doubt of the success of the Troops, cannot help expressing their discontent; and they who used to speak most contemptuously of the Provincials, complain now that Administration should send such a handful of men to be devoured by such multitudes. What will be done next is somewhat problematical. 'Tis said orders are despatched to General Gage not to hazard another battle till he is re-enforced. Query, Will the Provincials let him alone? Government has sent many thousand stand of arms to Quebeck, in hopes of getting the Canadians to take up arms against you; and they talk of sending a Highland Regiment of one thousand men complete. This, and many other things they talk of, together with the men-of-war, must create a deal of expense; and whether Lord North will be hardy enough to meet Parliament with a requisition of so much money, and whether Parliament will grant it, is another question. Parliament is prorogued to the 14th of September, and it is not improbable they may not choose to meet it till some time in November, as usual. In the meantime, your Provincials have gained immortal honour. I should have told you that it has been advised to order General Gage to relinquish Boston, after burning it, and to fortify himself on Rhode-Island; whence, by means of his ships and men, to make descents upon your coast, laying waste where you are least prepared to oppose him. God give you wisdom, fortitude, and success.

TO THE PRINTER OF THE MORNING CHRONICLE.

London, July 28, 1775.

Our present disputes with the Colonies in America have engaged the attention of all ranks of people in this Country; from the Senate to the cellar, all have given their opinions thereon, and they have been as different as the several stations they hold in life, or the colours of their complexions.

It is an argument made use of by the friends to America, that Britain has, ever since her first settlement there, ruled her with an arbitrary curb of power, and imposed shackles on her trade and commerce unfiting the sons of Englishmen to bear. The present spirit which appears amongst them to redress their grievances, is no way wonderful, they say, but that it is matter of astonishment that they have borne their ill-treatment thus long. The partisans of Government, one and all, cry out, that the liberty granted hitherto to the Americans has most assuredly caused the present disturbances, and if they had been kept all along under due subjection, and not indulged in that unlimited power they have very improperly been indulged in, things would not have worn the face they now do, and that Government may thank themselves for having such disagreeable work cut out for them, and which might easily have been prevented, in crushing that power in the beginning which the people of America have for some time past assumed.

'Tis a principle in politicks with the Ministerial party, that power ought not to be given to the people. An opinion like this could never be propagated by any man who was not more than suspected of being corrupt. Such doctrine, I think, cannot be too often exposed, nor do I think an Englishman can spend his time better at this juncture, than to inquire into the nature of power, and impartially consider in whose hands it may prove most dangerous, and where it may be most effectual for the security of that invaluable blessing, liberty.

Many states, I think, may be named where the governing and ministerial part have, by force or fraud, at some time or other, overturned the liberties of the people, and set up absolute dominion; but I believe it will be very difficult to shew where liberty, and fulness of power in the people, have encouraged them to disturb the peace of their Country. Some may, perhaps, mention the United Provinces; but they cannot be produced as a proof, for it was oppression that made them revolt. If we look at home, I hope I may be allowed to say, (without incurring the name of disaffected,) that the exaction of ship money, the proceedings of the Star Chamber, and the imprisonment of members, are very evident proofs, that it was not an overflow of liberty, or too great power in the people, that excited them to rebel.

Should we look into the Governments of antiquity, we shall find many proofs in favour of the people. In the great state of Rome I believe we shall find, upon the most exact scrutiny, that every popular commotion was preceded by some act of oppression from the Senate, and that the power of the people was always obstructed in its legal operation before they appealed to arms. It was therefore the spirit of liberty to regain their power, not a wantonness in the people, that occasioned such an appeal. The case was the same in the Revolution of England. King James usurped the power of the people, and invaded their liberties, which made it necessary for them to apply to foreign assistance; and this necessity proves it was not the power of the people which brought about that happy event; for had it been the power of the people, it would have operated sooner, and prevented King James from carrying on his injurious proceedings, which not having power enough to do, rather than acquiesce under them, they chose to submit their lives and fortunes to the uncertain chance of war. It was therefore a want of power in the people which made the Revolution necessary, not a fulness of their power which accomplished it. It was the act of a distressed people, not a free people; for surely a state cannot be free if the people have not the means of making themselves so without committing hostilities. Liberty, therefore, cannot be established by the grace and promises of a Prince, since assurances given from one person to another, can only give a claim, which I presume nobody will call possession.

From hence it is evident, that liberty cannot be established upon any power lodged in the Crown: on the contrary, experience, as well as reason, shews, that liberty can never be secured without lodging a power in the people sufficient in time of need to restrain and limit the acts of the Crown. The power must be free, independent, and uncorrupt; not subject by any force or fraud to be withdrawn from the service and protection of those for whom it was formed. For this power did our ancestors fight, and for the establishment of it was the Revolution effected; not a right only to assert one liberty (for that the law of nature gives to all mankind) but a means to secure them, which the people of England are in possession of; and this power, by the Constitution, is lodged with their Delegates, by whom alone they can act. 'Tis plain, therefore, that 'tis not the possession of power, but the want of it, that has caused the present disturbances in America. 'Tis for a proper portion of that power that they are contending; a power that may be able to make head against any oppressive or arbitrary acts of the Crown. And surely, without meriting the name of malecontent, we may heartily wish that their efforts may be crowned with success.

AN ENGLISHMAN.

YORK COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee and the Officers of the Militia Companies of York County, at York, the 28th and 29th days of July, 1775:

Present, forty-five County Committee-men, besides the said Officers, James Smith, Esq., in the Chair.

The Committee and Officers divided the County into five Districts, or Divisions, and formed five Battalions. The Committee then, with the Officers of the Militia Companies of the respective Districts and Battalions, appointed Judges, and proceeded to vote by ballot for Field-Officers to be commissioned; when James Smith, Esq., was chosen Colonel; Thomas Hartley, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel; and Joseph Donaldson and Michael Swoope, Esqs., were chosen Majors of the First Battalion: Robert McPherson, Esq., Colonel; David Kennedy, Lieutenant-Colonel; Moses McClean and Hugh Dunwoodie, were chosen Majors of the Second Battalion: Richard McCallister, Esq., Colonel; Henry Slegel, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel; and John Andrews and Joseph Jefferies, were chosen Majors of the Third Battalion: William Smith, Esq., Colonel; Francis Holton, Lieutenant-Colonel; and Jacob Gibson and John Finley, were chosen Majors of the Fourth Battalion: and Matthew Dill, Esq., Colonel; William Rankin, Esquire, Lieutenant-Colonel; and Robert Stevenson and Gerhard Gress, Majors of the Fifth Battalion.

The Committee, and the Officers of the said Militia Companies, thereupon proceeded to vote for Field-Officers for the Battalion of Minute-men for York County, proper to be commissioned; when

Richard McCallister, Esquire, was chosen Colonel;

Thomas Hartley, Esquire, was chosen Lieutenant-Colonel; and David Grier, Esquire, was chosen Major, of said Battalion.

The Committee then proceeded as follows:

Resolved, That in conformity to the direction of the Assembly of this Province, and with a regard to the regulations of the Continental Congress, we do direct that five Companies of Minute-men be formed out of the several Districts of this County, that is to say, one Company in each Division by draughts or Volunteers from the several Militia Companies, each Company to consist of a Captain, two Lieutenants, and an Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a Drummer and Fifer, and sixty-eight or more Privates; and it is expected, that if there be a defect of Arms for these men, when there is a necessity of going into service, that the respective Battalions to which they belong will furnish them with the necessary Arms.

That if the County Committee-men and Assistant Committee-men, or a majority of them in any District, are at any time of opinion that an additional Company or Companies of Minute-men can be raised in their District, they may order the same to be done, which Company or Companies are to be under the same Field-Officers, orders, rules, and regulations, with the said other Companies of Minute-men. The whole Battalion of each Division or District are directed to meet some time in the next week, or in the week following, and draught the Volunteers or proper persons as Minute-men for the respective Companies, who are to sign an attestation similar to that mentioned in the proceedings of this Committee. The subscribers are then to proceed to choose the Officers of the respective Companies, and make return of their names to the Field-Officers of the said Battalion of Minute-men, in order that they may be commissioned.

Resolved, That in order to prevent confusion and disorder, that no new Companies of Militia be formed in any Township, without the consent of the Committee-men of the Township, and three or more of the County Committee-men.

N. B. The Companies of Yorktown, Manchester, Windsor, Codorus, York, and Hellam Townships, form the First Battalion; the Companies of Cumberland, Hamilton's Baun, Strabane, Menallen, Mount-Joy, and Tyrone Townships form the Second Battalion; the Companies of Heidlebergh, Berwick, Paradise, Mount-Pleasant, Manheim, and Germany Townships the Third Battalion; Chanceford, Shrewsbury, Fawn, and Hopewell Townships the Fourth Battalion; and the Companies of Dover, Newberry, Monaughan, Warrington, Huntington, and Reading Townships the Fifth Battalion.

MEETING OF THE FREEHOLDERS OF SOMERSET COUNTY, NEW-JERSEY.

At a meeting of the Freeholders of the County of Somerset, in the Province of New-Jersey, assembled at the Court-House in said County, on Friday, the 28th day of July, 1775, pursuant to advertisements of the late Committee of Correspondence, Hendrick Fisher, Esq., Chairman, John Leferty, Secretary.

The said Freeholders being informed that the late Committee of Correspondence for this County expired the 15th day of July instant, and being convinced of the necessity of choosing a new Committee of Correspondence for the County, do Resolve, That a new Committee of Correspondence, to consist of seventeen persons, be chosen for this County by ballot.

Adjourned for an hour.

Met according to adjournment; when the following gentlemen were elected a Committee of Correspondence for this County, viz: The Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon, Jacob Bogart, John Gaston, Gisbart Bogart, Gabriel Ogden, Garret Voorhees, Cornelius Van Muliner, Thomas Berry, Stephen Hunt, Rowland Chambers, Matthew Ten Eyck, William Annin, Ruloff Van Dicke, Jacob Bergen, Hendrick Van Middlesworth, Lucas Voorhees, and Ebenezer Tingley.

Resolved, That it be recommended, and it is hereby recommended to every Township in this County, to assemble as soon as possible, and choose for their respective Townships nine persons, to be a Committee of Inspection, to take cognizance of all violations of the measures recommended by the Representatives of the people in their District. And this County do further recommend, that every Township Committee do choose from among themselves three persons, who shall meet when called upon, with an equal number of persons from every Township Committee, and form a General Committee of Inspection for the County, in case of an appeal, or when matters of importance require the sense of the County, or when a Township Committee choose not to decide on a case by themselves.

Resolved, That the Chairman of the late Committee of Inspection for each Township do notify a meeting of the inhabitants of their Township, for the purpose of choosing the aforesaid Committee of Inspection.

Resolved, That the County do earnestly recommend to, and they do hereby instruct their Committee of Inspection, to be vigilant and active in the discharge of their duty, in taking cognizance of every person of whatsoever rank or condition, who shall, either by word or deed, endeavour to destroy our unanimity in opposing the arbitrary and cruel measures of the British Ministry; and so deal with him or them as to the particular Committee of Inspection where the offender resides, or to the General Committee of Inspection, (if an appeal or other reason require the same to be called,) shall seem most conducive to prevent any injury to the glorious cause of American freedom.

Resolved, That the Committee of Correspondence above chosen, and the Committees of Inspection to be chosen for the different Townships of this County, do continue until the first Monday in May next; after which, the Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence shall within three weeks call a meeting of the County. And in all cases when it shall be thought necessary to have the County assembled, the Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to give as publick notice thereof as possible; and this County do agree to defray the expenses thence arising.

Ordered, That the foregoing Resolves and Proceedings be published in one of the New-York newspapers.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read September 14, 1775.]

Ticonderoga, July 28, 1775.

SIR: I am happy to enclose you copies of two papers that corroborate the accounts we have had of the friendly sentiments of the Indians. Every instruction I have given to people who were likely to fall in with any of them, enjoins an attention to that capital point.

Your favour of the 21st instant, enclosing a resolution of Congress of the preceding day, is duly come to hand. My last letter will evince that I keep in view the object which was the subject of your orders of the 29th ult., and which, I hope, notwithstanding the difficulties I have to struggle with, to carry into the wished-for execution.

The fourth paragraph of the letter from the Committee of Albany may need an explanation. On my arrival at Albany, I found that a great number of the gentlemen who had warrants sent them from the New-York Congress to entitle them to commissions in the troops to be raised, refused to accept them. I therefore advised that the Albany Committee should endorse on those warrants the refusal, and nominate such other gentlemen as they thought proper, which I hoped would be satisfactory to the New-York Congress, as ultimately the officers must be recommended by the Deputies from Albany.

It would tend to facilitate matters and promote the service, if some honourable mention was made of the Albany Committee in the instructions to the Commissioners of Indian Affairs. I mention this merely on account of their assiduity to promote the publick weal.

The Troops here begin to be sickly, occasioned by their being crowded too close in barracks. I wish their tents were come up.

I am, Sir, most respectfully, your obedient and very humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I have taken the liberty to desire some of the Caughnawaga Indians to meet me at this place. Thompson's, mentioned in the speech sent me by the Albany Committee, is about thirty miles below where Fort Stanwix was erected.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

[Read before Congress September 14, 1775.]

Albany Committee Chamber, July 26, 1775.

SIR: We have just received yours of the 22d instant, enclosing a packet to the President of the Provincial Congress; and be assured that we shall implicitly follow your directions in forwarding it.

Your information of the intention of the Canadian Indians is corroborated by the intelligence we yesterday received from two Sachems of the Oneida nations, with whom we had a short conference, (copy of which proceedings you have here enclosed,) which was concluded by some presents in token of our friendship.

You may rest assured, that nothing will be wanting on our parts to encourage the levies of the companies to be raised in our County; as nothing could (at this time) afford us more real happiness than to see our Regiment in complete order.

We have, agreeably to your request, filled up the arrangement of officers, and transmitted it down to the Provincial Congress by our Deputies, who are gone to attend the same.

We have the pleasure to inform you that the apprehensions of the inhabitants of Tryon County, respecting the Indians, is entirely removed; and the unhappy dispute between the inhabitants of the upper part of the County with Sir John Johnson and the Sheriff of that County, amicably accommodated upon the two following points:

First: The Sheriff is to leave the County, and not to return to it again. And Secondly: Sir John Johnson is not to take any active part against the people, in the disputes at present subsisting between Great Britain and the American Colonies.

We last Sunday received the powder which has been so long expected from the Continental Congress, which we have stored, and shall be forwarded to you as soon as a guard can be obtained to accompany it to Lake George.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants. By order of the Committee: ABRAHAM YATES, Jr., Chairman.

The Speech of ONEYNYOAGAT and THUEGWENDACK, two ONEIDA INDIANS.

[Read in Congress September 14, 1775.]

BROTHERS: We were not sent down as messengers this way, but were sent to the German Flats to undeceive the people in a report that prevailed among the inhabitants of the German Flats, that the Five Nations were coming down to cut them off, and to assure them that they were peaceable; and that the people of the German Flats had sent men to the Oneida nation, to inquire concerning the truth of the news they had heard upon which they were sent down. When they came down to Thompson's, they found it was true that the Germans had fled, and were busy making a Fort at the German Flats.

They told the Germans, Have we not lately had a Council fire at the German Flats? therefore they should not give ear to any false reports, for they would always give notice of any bad news; and assured them that there was now no bad news, and the Five Nations were friendly, and that the head men were now gathered at a Council at Onondaga. They advised the people strongly not to credit any false reports, and that the people at the German Flats advised them to come down to this place and acquaint the great men here.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, July 28, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 21st is duly received. I am myself surprised at the information you give respecting the cows. On consideration of the circumstances you mention, I have wrote to Major Sheldon to stop their proceeding; and directed him to dispose of them in the best manner he can. When the provision of milk was ordered by this Colony for the use of its soldiers, our ideas extended no farther than their being employed near Boston. In a country like that, abounding with every necessary for diet, it was thought milk might be as easily procured as any other article, and might be for the health and benefit of the Troops. When the necessity of this case, with the particular circumstances attending it, is duly considered, I hope the want of this article among soldiers, who are each man contending for every thing that is dear and sacred to every individual, will occasion no murmuring or uneasiness.

I am unhappy to hear you are so unprepared to take benefit from any favourable dispositions of your Canadian neighbours; but I please myself with the confidence I have in your zeal, vigour, and activity, and with a hope that all obstacles will speedily be removed, and that a happy issue may soon attend your meditated enterprise.

I am, Sir, &c.

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, July 28, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you yesterday by way of New-York, and in two hours afterwards was favoured with yours of the 15th and 18th instant, with their respective enclosures. I was extremely glad to find your first apprehensions of an incursion by the Indians in some degree removed by the later advices; at the same time, I think it is evident from the spirit and tenour of Colonel Johnson's letter, that no art or influence will be left untried by him to engage them in such an enterprise. Should he once prevail upon them to dip their hands in blood, mutual hostilities will most probably ensue, and they may be led to take a more decisive part. All accounts, I think, agree, that the Canadians are not very active to engage in this unnatural contest; but I am persuaded you will not abate in the least your vigilance to expedite every movement in that quarter, notwithstanding their present pacifick appearances. I am much easier with respect to the publick interest since your arrival at Ticonderoga; as I am persuaded those abilities and that zeal for the common welfare, which have led your Country to repose such confidence in you, will be fully exerted. From my own experience, I can easily judge of your difficulties to introduce order and discipline into troops who have, from their infancy, imbibed ideas of the most contrary kind. It would be far beyond the compass of a letter for me to describe the situation of things here on my arrival; perhaps you will be only able to judge of it from my assuring you, that mine must be a portrait at full length of what you have had in miniature. Confusion and disorder reigned in every department, which in a little time must have ended either in the separation of the Army, or fatal contests with one another. The better genius of America has prevailed, and most happily, the Ministerial Troops have not availed themselves of these advantages, till I trust the opportunity is in a great measure past over. The arrangement of the General Officers in Massachusetts and Connecticut, has been very unpopular—indeed, I may say, injudicious; it is returned to Congress for farther consideration, and has much retarded my plan of discipline. However, we mend every day, and I flatter myself that in a little time we shall work up these raw materials into good stuff. I must recommend to you what I endeavour to practise myself—patience and perseverance. As to your operations, my dear Sir, I can suggest nothing which your own good judgment will not either anticipate or control from your own immediate view of things, and the instructions of the Continental Congress.

The express from hence to England, with the account of the commencement of hostilities at Lexington, has returned. It was far from making the impression generally expected here. Stocks fell but one-and-a-half per cent. General Gage's accounts had not arrived, and the Ministry affected to treat it as a fiction. Parliament had been prorogued two days, but it was expected it would be immediately recalled. Our enemy continues strongly posted about a mile from us, both at Bunker's Hill and Roxbury; but we are not able to get any information of their future intentions. Part of the Riflemen are come in, and the rest daily expected.

I did not expect your Returns would be very complete at first, but I must beg your attention to reforming them as soon as possible. And I beg leave to add, that I would have you scrutinize with exactness into the application of provisions and stores. I have the utmost reason to suspect irregularities and impositions here; you will be fortunate if the contagion does not reach you.

General Lee has removed about four miles from me; but I shall take the first opportunity to make your kind wishes known to him. Colonel Reed and Major Mifflin join me in their best wishes for your health and success.

I am, dear Sir, yours, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler, Ticonderoga.

Enclosed is a copy of mine of yesterday, referred to in this.

COL. JOSEPH REED TO COLONEL BALDWIN, AT CHELSEA, ENCLOSING A LETTER FROM DR. CHURCH.

Head-Quarters, July 28, 1775.

SIR: In full confidence of your prudence and secrecy as a soldier, a man of honour, and a friend to your Country, the General has directed me to communicate to you a scheme he is about to put in execution to obtain constant and authentick intelligence from Boston. The plan is this: the enclosed letter will be delivered by you to one Dewksbury, who lives about four miles from you towards Chesley Point; he will deliver it to a waterman, whom he can depend on, who will convey it to one John Carnes, a grocer, in the south part of Boston. The answers, and such intelligence as he can procure, will be forwarded to you through the same channel, which you are to transmit to his Excellency by express immediately. As the success of the project, and the life of the man in Boston, may depend upon your conduct, let it not escape you to the nearest friend on earth; and, for fear of accident, destroy this letter as soon as you are sufficiently master of its contents. When you see Dewksbury give him the above caution in the strongest terms, and so to pass from him to the other. Your good conduct and discretion in this matter will not fail to be duly noticed. I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

J. REED, Secretary.

To Colonel Baldwin.

LOAMMI BALDWIN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Chelsea, July 28, 1775, half after 4 o'clock.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Agreeable to your order, I send the following observation taken by the sentry posted upon Powderhorn Hill, from about seven o'clock, A. M., to two o'clock, P. M.: One ship gone out, three ships and two tenders coming in; about twelve boats from Boston to Charlestown, light loaded or almost empty; three boats passed from Charlestown to Boston very heavily loaded with men.

I would beg leave to ask your Excellency whether it was the intent and meaning of your orders to send an express to Head-Quarters every day when there is nothing more occurs than has for two days past.

These from your Excellency's most obedient servant,
LOAMMI BALDWIN, Lieut. Col.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL GATES.

Council Chamber, Watertown, July 28, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 21st instant to the Speaker of the honourable House of Representatives, was by them referred to this Board, who are of opinion, that the jails of Worcester, Springfield, and Northampton, are the most suitable places for securing the prisoners, and therefore recommend that they be sent to one or more of those places. I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

PEREZ MORTON, Sec'y pro tem.

Horatio Gates, Esq., Adjutant-General in the American Army.

ORDERS TO CAPT. BAKER FOR THE REMOVAL OF PRISONERS.

You are to proceed with the detachment under your command to Worcester, taking under your care two Sergeants, two Corporals, twenty-one private Soldiers of the Ministerial Army, and twelve Tories, who have been aiding and abetting General Gage and his adherents; you are to deliver them to the Chairman of the Committee at Worcester, who is hereby enjoined to order a detachment from the Militia of that Town to escort them to Springfield, and deliver them to the Committee there, where they are to be secured, so as to be forthcoming whenever exchange of prisoners, or a happy reconciliation between Great Britain and her Colonies, shall take place.

Given at Head-Quarters at Cambridge, this first day of August, 1775.

HORATIO GATES, Adj. Gen.

N. B. One of the Marines left wounded at Cambridge, which reduces the number to twenty Privates.

Worcester, August 3, A. D. 1775.

Received of Joseph Baker, Jun., Commander of the detachment who escorted the prisoners (lately taken at the Light-House) to Worcester, two Sergeants, two Corporals, eighteen Privates, and twelve Tories.

WILLIAM YOUNG,
Chairman of Comm. of Correspondence.

N. B. There appears to be a mistake of two Privates in the number given in the General Orders.

Received this seventh day of August, Anno Domini 1775, of Mr. William Young, Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence for the Town of Worcester, two Sergeants, two Corporals, eighteen Privates, and eleven Tories, which were ordered to be delivered to the Committee of Correspondence for the Town of Springfield by Horatio Gates, Adjutant-General.

NATHANIEL BREWER,
Chairman of Springfield Committee.

N. B. The Tories in number were twelve, one of whom was left sick at Worcester, as the Chairman of Worcester Committee informs.

CAPT. BEDELL TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Haverhill, July 28, 1775.

SIR: When I was with the Committee, and received my order for this department, I was willing to serve as a Captain, though I had the command of three companies; but I have this day received certain account from Crown Point, that an army was forming for an expedition against the Regular Troops in Canada, and orders sent to raise men under Colonel Allen on this river. I do expect the orders will be sent to me to march that way; at the same time shall expect to have a Regiment, except some old experienced officer should offer; otherwise shall decline, as I never meant to enter the service as a Captain to serve out of the Government. We can raise a Regiment in this part of the country. Colonel Bayley, who attends service, will inform as to news. As there is no person appointed as a Committee of Supplies here, it is necessary we should have some money; and I desire it may be sent by Col. Bayley, and what is sent by him I will be accountable for, taking his receipt for what is sent. I imagine that one hundred Pounds is as little as will answer. These from yours at command,

TIM. BEDELL.

To the Hon. Matthew Thornton, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CONVENTION OF VIRGINIA.

Williamsburgh, July 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I am a man who has spent some part of my life between the barracks and camp, therefore have contracted a natural love for military parade. To indulge my foible, I went the other day to see one of your independent companies go through the Prussian exercise, as they called it; when, behold, all that I saw was their forming six deep, by the rear half files facing to the right about, and marching eighteen paces to the rear. This, with rest, order, open your files to the right and left, with the slow parade motions of prime and load, was (as I understood) to constitute the whole; and you may call it Prussian exercise, if you please, but if I have any judgment, it is mere burlesque on all exercise. Upon inquiry why the regular Prussian discipline was not adopted, I was told by the man that was to teach them, that he could not tell off a Battalion; that is, he could not put them through their firings. If this be the case, as I have great reason to believe it is, (not only so with that company, but many others in the Colony,) that many who pretend to teach the Prussian exercise never saw a Battalion told off in their lives, according to the Prussian method of firing, and if they did, their low stations in the ranks rendered it impossible for them ever to know any thing but what belonged to their own sub or grand division. If so, what must those companies propose to themselves by the mode of exercise they have adopted, in case of emergency? Each company might be formed into a battalion, and to lead a body of brave men, with such counterfeit discipline, to face a disciplined enemy, would, in my opinion, be downright murder. Let us not plume ourselves with this conceit, that we shall always have the bush to fight behind; for, in the different services of war in this Country, there will be passes to be guarded or forced; bridges to be crossed or defended; trenches to be guarded or formed; streets to be cleared; and sometimes squares to be formed: in all which cases, bushing it would be of little or no use; and to send undisciplined Troops on such service would be absurd indeed. The native courage of the Americans, and their knowledge of the woods, with an early use of fire-arms, has rendered them superiour in the woods to any Troops in Europe, and, if under regular discipline, might be as famous in the field. But it may be observed and said, we want men of knowledge in such cases to instruct us. First, clear yourselves of those caterpillars that poison the military blossoms of your first endeavours, and leave only a smoky webful of excrements behind. Next, advise those bookish theorists to lay by their Christ-Cross-Row; for he who learns the trade of war by book, will find himself to seek when on actual service. Then give proper encouragement to men of abilities, (for such there are amongst ye,) who may lay a foundation for ye that may make ye one day or other become as great in arms as Rome of old. Knowing I must rise or fall with this Country in the general struggle for liberty, were I to lie dormant on the occasion, I should count myself highly culpable, for the gracious acceptance of the poor widow's offering emboldens me to cast in my mite. My station, when in the Army in Europe last war, rendered it necessary for me to be thoroughly acquainted with all parts of the Prussian infantry and artillery exercise; I therefore freely offer my poor service to the publick. Those gentlemen who choose to employ me, may hear of me by directing a line to the care of Mr. Edmund Day, of Southampton, or Mr. Elisha Copeland, of Nansemond County for; the publick's humble servant,

ROBERT WASHINGTON.

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL.

At a Council held at Philadelphia, on Saturday, 29th July, 1775. Present:

The Honourable John Penn, Esquire, Governour; William Logan, Benjamin Chew, James Tilghman, Andrew Allen, and Edward Shippen, Jun., Esquires.

The Governour laid before the Board a Petition from Mons. Dominique Du Casse, Commander of the Schooner Mary, belonging to the inhabitants of Martinico, which was read, and follows in these words viz:

"To the Honourable JOHN PENN, Esquire, Licutenant-Governour and Commander-in-Chief of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, and three lower Counties of NEW-CASTLE, KENT, and SUSSEX, on DELAWARE:"

"The Petition of DOMINIQUE DU CASSE, Master of the Schooner MARY, belonging to MARTINICO, now in the Port of PHILADELPHIA, humbly sheweth:

"That on or about the sixteenth day of June last, your petitioner sailed from the Island of Martinico, bound on a voyage to Miguilan; that in prosecution of the said voyage he met with many hard and severe gales of wind, attended with very great and heavy seas, in which the said Schooner, through violent straining, was rendered very leaky, and made it impossible for him to proceed on the said voyage; and your petitioner was under the necessity of coming into this Port of Philadelphia, in order to repair his said vessel; the particulars of all which appears by your petitioner's protest, duly made since his arrival here, herewith exhibited to your Honour. He therefore prays your Honour to permit him to repair the said Schooner, and sail from this Port of Philadelphia, in prosecution of his said intended voyage. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

DOMINIQUE DU CASSE.

"Philadelphia, July 12, 1775."

At the same time was laid before the Board the Captain's Protest referred to in the above Petition. And the Board taking the said Petition and Protest into consideration, and finding, upon due examination and inquiry, that the facts set forth in them are true: It is ordered, that the said Schooner be examined, and the necessary repairs made on her, and that she be then permitted to prosecute her intended voyage, provided that she takes on board no Goods, Wares, or Merchandise, whatever.

Messrs. Meredith and Clymer are appointed to inspect the repairing of the said Schooner, and to transact the business relating to her, as factors or agents for the Master, during his continuance in this Port.

JOHN ADAMS TO JOSIAH QUINCY, BRAINTREE, MASS.

Philadelphia, July 29, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I had yesterday the honour of your letter of July the eleventh, and I feel myself much obliged by your kind attention to me and my family, but much more by your care for the publick safety, and the judicious and important observations you have made. Your letters, Sir, so far from being "a burden," I consider as an honour to me, besides the pleasure and instruction they afford me. Believe me, Sir, nothing is of more importance to me, in my present most arduous and laborious employment, than a constant correspondence with gentlemen of experience, whose characters are known. The minutest fact, the most trivial event, that is connected with the great American cause, becomes important in the present critical situation of affairs, when a revolution seems to be in the designs of Providence, as important as any that ever happened in the affairs of mankind.

We jointly lament the loss of a Quincy and a Warren; two characters as great in proportion to their age, as any that I have ever known in America. Our Country mourns the loss of both, and sincerely sympathizes with the feelings of the mother of the one, and the father of the other. They were both my intimate friends, with whom I lived and conversed with pleasure and advantage. I was animated by them in the painful dangerous course of opposition to the oppressions brought upon our Country, and the loss of them has wounded me too deeply to be easily healed. Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori. The ways of Heaven are dark and intricate, but you may remember the words which, many years ago, you and I fondly admired, and which, upon many occasions, I have found advantage in recollecting:

"Why should I grieve, when grieving I must bear,
And take with guilt, what guiltless I might share?"

I have a great opinion of your knowledge and judgment from long experience, concerning the channels and islands in Boston harbour; but I confess your opinion that the harbour might be blocked up, and seamen and soldiers made prisoners at discretion, was too bold and enterprising for me, who am not very apt to startle at a daring proposal; but I believe I may safely promise you powder enough, in a little time, for any purpose whatever. We are assured, in the strongest manner, of saltpetre and powder in sufficient plenty another year of our own make. That both are made in this city, you may report with confidence, for I have seen both, and I have seen a set of very large powder works, and another of saltpetre.

I hope, Sir, we shall never see a total stagnation of commerce for any length of time. Necessity will force open our ports; trade, if I mistake not, will be more free than usual. Your friend, Dr. Franklin, to whom I read your letter, and who desires his kind compliments to you, has been employed in directing the construction of row-gallies for this city. The Committee of Safety for this Province have ordered twenty of them to be built; some of them are finished. I have seen one of them; it has twelve oars on each side. They rowed up the river the first time, four miles in an hour, against a tide which ran down four miles an hour. The Congress have recommended to the Colonies, to make provision for the defence of their navigation, in their harbours, rivers, and on their sea-coasts. Of a floating battery I have no idea—am glad you are contriving one.

You tell me, Sir, that General Lee complained that "he did not find things as the Massachusetts Delegates had represented them." What General Lee could mean by this, Sir, I know not. What particular he found different from the representation, I do not know; nor do I know which Delegate from the Massachusetts he received a mistaken representation from. I think he should have been particular, that he might not have run the risk of doing an injury. If General Lee should do injustice to two of the Massachusetts Delegates, he would commit ingratitude at the same time; for to two of them he certainly owes his promotion in the American Army, how great a hazard soever they ran in agreeing to it. I know him very thoroughly, I think, and that he will do great service in our Army, at the beginning of things, by forming it to order, skill, and discipline. But we shall soon have officers enough.

Your friend and humble servant, JOHN ADAMS.

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We have received your letters of the 18th and 22d instant, and though sensible of the inconveniences arising from a scarcity of arms, are much at a loss respecting the best measures for a supply. As we have good reason to believe that an application to the Congress to recommend a loan of the Jersey arms would not succeed, we have agreed not to make it. No Colony has as yet given the Congress any trouble on that head, and we are unwilling that New-York should be the first. We advise, however, that accurate accounts of disbursements for arms be kept, so that, should any charges of that kind be made against the Continent, our Colony may be prepared to support their claim. Besides, it is easy to foresee that New-Jersey, under the present circumstances of publick affairs, would very reluctantly part with their arms, and be displeased with any recommendation for that purpose.

Permit us to recommend to your most serious attention the necessity of laying your hands on all the powder that is or may be imported into the Colony. We think none should be permitted to go out of the Province, but by the express direction of the Congress, or your Committee, and that magazines of that article should be formed in different parts of the Province, and not that the whole be risked in one place.

We hope our Province will depend for defence on their own exertions, and without delay put the Militia on the footing recommended by the Congress.

The Delegates of New-Jersey are charged with the transportation of two tons and a half of powder to Dobbs's Ferry, where the Congress desire you to have a boat ready to receive and forward it to General Schuyler.

As to a treaty or conference with the Five Nations, the Congress has already provided for it, and consequently it would be improper to lay the papers you sent us on that subject before the Congress.

We are, Gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and humble servants,

PHIL. LIVINGSTON, JOHN JAY,
LEWIS MORRIS, JAS. DUANE.
GEO. CLINTON,

To the Committee of Safety of the Colony of New-York.

P. S. We recommend to collect all your accounts against the Continent, with all convenient speed. It is probable that a Committee will be appointed to examine them. Mr. Hazard is appointed Deputy Postmaster for New-York. The Continental money is signing, and will be ready next week.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Committee Chamber, City of Albany, July 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. George Sullivan was brought before this Committee by Colonel Waterbury, of the Connecticut Troops lately arrived here from New-York, in consequence of a letter from General Wooster, a copy whereof we enclose you. We have examined Mr. Sullivan and the circumstances of his case, and from the proofs before us we cannot find any grounds to warrant the accusation; and having finished his intended business, as he says, designs to embark in the first sloop for your city, when a re-examination may be made, if you see cause.

We are, Gentlemen, your most humble servants,
ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., Chairman.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, July 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I lately received a commission from the Continental Congress, a copy of which I shall enclose you, appointing me Deputy Commissary-General for this Province. I must therefore request you to order all the stores which are purchased by order of Congress for the Army in this Colony, to be consigned to me or my assistant Deputy at Albany; and also, that I be furnished with an account of all stores and provisions which are now ordered to be purchased.

I was at Ticonderoga last week. The fortress there is in a most ruinous situation. For want of many officers, such as Quartermaster, Muster-master, Surgeon, &c., the General is under the necessity of acting in all those departments. I dread the consequence, should he be attacked by any considerable army; and if he is defeated, the garrison must all fall victims, for retreat they cannot, for want of batteaus. He had neither carpenters to build boats, nor materials to make them of. Two saw-mills are now cutting boards, with one saw each. I yesterday, by request of General Schuyler, sent up twenty carpenters, and shall from time to time furnish him with such articles as he shall order and I can procure, although they should not belong to my department, until proper officers are appointed.

I remain, Gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient humble servant,

WALTER LIVINGSTON, Dep. Com. Gen.

To the Provincial Congress of New-York.

DIRCK G. BRINCKERHOFF TO THE NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

July 29, 1775.

SIR: Agreeable to the Resolve of the Provincial Congress, of the 29th of May last, a Committee has been chosen for the Precinct of Rombouts, and have met and appointed persons out of said Committee to tender the Association, who have done their endeavours to tender the same to the inhabitants of this Precinct. But as the shortness of the time since we received the Resolve of the Congress has rendered it almost impossible to tender the same to every inhabitant of this Precinct personally; and as a number of persons to whom it has already been tendered are not convinced about signing the same, and have desired further time to consider of it; and others are daily more and more convinced of the propriety of signing the same, and are ready to sign, but for want of an opportunity cannot: the Committee have taken it into their consideration, and humbly desire further time till the 15th of August next, when an actual return will be made to the Committee of the persons who have signed the same, and a list of the names of the persons refusing, and will be immediately transmitted to the honourable Provincial Congress at New-York. By order of the Committee:

DIRCK G. BRINCKERHOFF, Chairman.
To P. V. B. Livingston, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JAMES WARREN.

Cambridge, July 29, 1775.

SIR: I have this instant received a letter from Chelsea, of which the enclosed is an extract. As the inhabitants are coming out in a different manner than proposed by your Assembly to the Selectmen of the Town of Boston, I have not delayed a moment's time in giving you the earliest information of it, and request that you may take the matter into consideration, and determine what is proper to be done on the occasion. If you think it proper to receive them in this manner, query whether it may not be proper to appoint some person to attend the movement.

I am, in haste, with great respect, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Honourable James Warren, Speaker of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts.

LOAMMI BALDWIN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Chelsea, July 29, 1775, Two o'clock, P. M.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: About twelve o'clock this day we were all alarmed by the approach of a boat to Winnisimit Ferry, and by a signal soon found them to be friends, who landed with their household goods. There were several of my intimate acquaintance. I have taken the names of all the passengers, and stopped the letters, which I now send for your inspection, and beg your Excellency would send them back to me again as soon as possible, as the bearers are some of them in waiting, and others are to call again to-morrow for theirs. Please to keep the enclosed letters in their respective covers.

I would beg your Excellency would send me some assistance, as the boats are to continue passing, (that is, if we can believe General Gage,) and something may escape for want of proper assistance, that may turn to our disadvantage.

Our officers are very sick here. I have much upon my hands and mind, since I received Mr. Reed's letter last night. I hope and earnestly expect some assistance, and your Excellency's orders, as soon as the necessity of the matter requires.

In great haste, I am, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

LOAMMI BALDWIN, Lieut. Col.

P. S. Should be much obliged to your Excellency if you would send down a few sheets of paper and wafers, as I cannot procure any about here, and am out. Pray, Sir, excuse the imperfections in this letter.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, July 31, 1775.

SIR: I am favoured with your Excellency's letter of the 26th instant. Having, just before the receipt of it, had accounts by a private hand of the sailing of a number of men-of-war and transports from Boston, which I conjectured were designed to supply the enemy with fresh provisions, I immediately sent the intelligence to Block Island, together with a quantity of powder, ball, and flints, to enable them to defend their property, and gave them assurances of further assistance, if necessary.

We have no accounts of this fleet from any part of our coast, so that I think it probable they were destined to the eastward.

I desire your Excellency to oblige me with a return of the Army; and when any thing important occurs, I shall esteem an early communication of it a favour.

I am, with great truth and regard, Sir, your Excellency's most humble obedient servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

His Excellency General Washington.

GEN. SULLIVAN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp on Winter Hill, July 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: It gives me pain to think that I have so long delayed the gentleman you sent to me; but I must refer you to him for an excuse on that head. I shall only hint that he came on Saturday morning, when I was preparing to take possession of Ploughed Hill, near the enemy's encampment at Charlestown. This was done on Saturday night, and on Sunday morning a heavy cannonading ensued, which lasted through the whole day. The floating batteries and an armed vessel attempting to come up and enfilade us as I expected, I opened a battery which I had prepared on purpose; cut away the sloop's foresail; made her shear off; wounded one floating battery, and sunk another yesterday. They sent round a man-of-war to Mistick River, drew their forces from Boston, formed a long column, and prepared to come out; but finding our readiness to receive them, declined the combat. Last evening they began to throw bombs, but have as yet done no damage. Their cannon has been more successful, having killed three or four. The command of our forces was assigned to me, which I hope will apologize for my delaying Captain Hobb. I have shown him those cannon which we last mounted, and given him the best advice in my power.

The powder you write for, gentlemen, it is impossible to obtain at present. We have had but six tons from the southward, which is but half a pound per man for our army, and what we had before was a shocking store. We hope for some every day, and as soon as possible after its arrival, you shall be supplied by your very humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER LAID BEFORE THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, DATED LONDON, JULY 31, 1775.

I have lately heard a person intimately connected with Administration lament that twenty thousand men had not been at first sent to America, one half to have remained with General Gage at Boston, five thousand to have kept possession of New-York, and cut off all assistance from the Southern Colonies, and five thousand to have been employed under Burgoyne or Howe, in making descents in different parts of New-England, and ravaging and burning the Towns. And I have good information that it is yet intended to endeavour to recover possession of New-York, Albany, &c., so as to open a communication with Canada, and prevent the New-Englanders from receiving any succour from the southward. There is a talk that more of the train of Artillery, and some Regiments of Foot, are going to New-York.

EXTRACT OF ANOTHER LETTER, LAID BEFORE THE CONGRESS, DATED LONDON, JULY 31, 1775.

It is fit I should convey to you a more particular detail of what I have collected, more especially as it is from unquestionable authority. The British American Generals differ, I am informed, as to the number of men which they now think it will require to subdue the rebels of the Massachusetts. Gage says fifteen thousand more than he already has, and Burgoyne says twenty thousand more. But all the Generals, however, agree in desiring a large re-enforcement of artillery; and therefore, orders were yesterday sent to Woolwich for four companies, to embark immediately for North America, with a large train of field-pieces, &c.; and a further supply of clothing, more than I mentioned in my letter of the 15th, for the Canadians, which Government is assured by General Carleton he shall raise in the Province of Quebeck. Parliament is prorogued till September, and then will be farther prorogued to meet the beginning of November. In the mean time Lord North thinks he possesses power and credit sufficient to order more forces to America, and push matters to the greatest extremity before the winter sets in. I have been well assured, that if the Spanish Armada should not visit Gibraltar, which, from the repulse it is said they have met with, will be the case, Government propose composing that garrison of three-fourths Hanoverians, and one-fourth British Troops, in order that they may send the remainder of the latter, now there, to America. But the secret (as they imagine) plan of operation they have at present in agitation, of which, perhaps, I might properly say, actually determined on and transmitted to Boston, is as follows:

With the assistance of Governour Tryon, who is much relied on for the purpose, to get immediate possession of New-York and Albany; to fill both of these Cities with very strong garrisons; to declare all rebels who do not join the King's Forces; to command the Hudson and East Rivers with a number of small men-of-war and cutters, stationed in different parts of it, so as wholly to cut off all communication by water between New-York and the Provinces to the northward of it, and between New-York and Albany, except for the King's service; and to prevent, also, all communication between the City of New-York and the Provinces of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, and those to the southward of them. By this means, Administration and their friends fancy that they shall soon either starve out, or retake the garrisons of Crown Point and Ticonderoga, and open and maintain a safe intercourse and correspondence between Quebeck, Albany, and New-York, and thereby afford the fairest opportunity to their soldiery and the Canadians, in conjunction with the Indians to be procured by Guy Johnson, to make continual irruptions into New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, and so distract and divide the Continental Forces as to render it easy for the British Army at Boston to defeat them; break the spirits of the Massachusetts people, depopulate their country, and compel an absolute subjection to Great Britain. Another good effect to be deduced from this extensive plan, as Government apprehend, is, that as New-York will, by this method, be prevented from supplying the Massachusetts Army near Boston with flour, &c., as they hitherto have done, through the medium of Connecticut; and the New-Jersey and Pennsylvania people will not be able to transport provisions across the country; and as the Colony of Connecticut does not raise corn sufficient for the supply of herself and the Massachusetts-Bay; the inhabitants and troops of this Province must inevitably of course be in a short time destroyed by disease and famine. And to this train of facts let me add, that in consequence of Gen. Gage's desire, brought by Capt. Chadd, one hundred flat-bottomed boats are at present building at Deptford, &c., in order to be immediately sent to America, but for what particular purpose I have not yet been able to learn. Many American gentlemen, however, have been lately asked by a Lord high in the American Department, what sized vessels can go loaded from hence to Albany? What is the depth of water at the Overlaugh? (I think that is the name of the shallowest place in the North River.) Whether the ship belonging to Albany, in the London trade, is always obliged to unload part of her cargo before she can get to Albany? and what proportion of it? Whether, if batteries were erected at the Highlands, they would not prevent vessels going up and down the North River? And where would be the best place on that river to hinder the New-Jersey people, &c., from sending flour, &c., in the winter, through Connecticut, to the Massachusetts Army?

LORD SHELburnE TO ARTHUR LEE.

Bow-Wood Park, July 31, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I am to thank you for your obliging letters, the last received this morning. I never imagined that publick affairs would have affected me as much as they have done since the affair at Lexington. A man of common attention cannot avoid feeling every passion agitated and distracted. I am very clear, from General Gage's letter, that the Troops have suffered a signal defeat, and that the arms of England have lost a lustre, which I see no probability of their regaining during the present contest. There is, besides, a cloud which hangs upon the General's account, and betrays a most alarming situation of things; while the conduct of the Provincials, through all the mist, under the command, it would seem, of nobody, manifested a decisive superiority in every point of military judgment.

In my life I was never more pleased with a state paper than I have been this morning with the Assembly of Virginia's discussion of Lord North's proposition. It is masterly.

By the papers, as well as the run of private accounts, I see very plainly that whoever governs us is determined to proceed; and that as long as the stockholders keep from ruin, the Nation is to run every risk to keep the rewards of Sir R. Walpole and Mr. Fox upon Mr. Jenkinson. How long this torpor will continue, it is impossible to say; nor do I consider with any pleasure upon whom the storm will or ought to burst; but what I fear is, that the evil is irretrievable. Union itself will be too late.

I set out for Ireland on Thursday, and private business obliges me to return early in October. As to publick business, I despond. Personal jealousy and disunion infect and destroy the weight of both individuals and bodies of men. The only uncorrupt body of men remaining in the City of London, I see daily losing its weight, for want of proper direction and joint effort.

I am, with great truth and regard, dear Sir, your most obedient servant,

SHELburne.

To Arthur Lee, London.

LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN NORTH-CAROLINA, AND ONE OF THE DELEGATES OF THE CONGRESS, TO A PRINCIPAL HOUSE IN EDINBURGH.

Edenton, July 31, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We wrote to you the seventeenth instant, since which we have not been honoured with any of your favours. With this you will receive a bill of lading for the cargo of the Brigantine Charming Betsey, John Boyle master, (by whom this goes,) which you will please to dispose of to the best advantage for our interest, and place the nett proceeds to our credit with you. You will observe the brig has only six lay days, and beg the favour you will have her discharged, so as we may not be subjected to damage.

We expect to send you another vessel, with such another cargo, before the exportation is stopped, which will be the tenth of next September; but we shall write you more at large by a ship to sail from hence to London in about two weeks. All our remittances must hereafter be by bills; we have laid ourselves out to remit you in that way, as all other is now in a fair way of being entirely shut up. We are in a terrible situation indeed; all trade here is now at an end, and when it will again be revived God only knows. Every American, to a man, is determined to die or be free. We are convinced nothing can restore peace to this unhappy Country, and render the liberties of yours secure, but a total change of the present Ministry, who are considered in this Country as enemies to the freedom of the human race, like so many master devils in the infernal regions, sending out their servants, furies, to torment wherever they choose their infernal vengeance should fall.

Permit us, dear Sirs, as you have exerted yourselves, to try another effort to save from destruction the once, and but lately, most flourishing Empire in the world.

We do not want to be independent; we want no revolution, unless a change of Ministry and measures would be deemed such. We are loyal subjects to our present most gracious Sovereign, in support of whose crown and dignity we would sacrifice our lives; and willingly launch out every shilling of our property, he only defending our liberties. This Country, without some step is taken, and that soon, will be inevitably lost to the Mother Country. We say again, for the love of Heaven, for the love of liberty, the interest of posterity, we conjure you to exert yourselves. Petition again; the eyes of our most gracious Sovereign may yet be opened, and he may see what things are for his real interest, before they are eternally hid from his eyes. We can vouch for the loyalty of every one in this part of the Province. We beg your pardon for troubling you on the subject of politicks so much as we have done; but we hope you will excuse us, when we tell you our all depends on the determination of Parliament.

We have the honour to be, Gentlemen, your most obliged humble servants.

BUCKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) MEETING.

At a meeting of the Officers of the County of Bucks, the County was divided into three Battalions, and the following gentlemen were chosen Field Officers:

For the First Division: Joseph Kirkbride, Esq., Colonel; Mr. Alexander Anderson, Lieutenant-Colonel; Mr.

Joseph Penrose, First Major; Mr. Joseph McIlvane, Second Major; Francis Murray, Esq., Standard Bearer.

For the Third Division: George Taylor, Esq., Colonel; Mr. Robert Robinson, Lieutenant-Colonel; Mr. John Tenbrook, First Major; Mr. John Heany, Second Major; Mr. John Keller, Standard Bearer.

The officers of the respective companies of the Middle Battalion of the County of Bucks, are earnestly requested to meet at the house of Mr. John Bogart, on Monday next, at three o'clock, to give their voice in matters of importance. Their non-attendance will be looked upon as consenting to the business of the day.

By His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esquire, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief in and over the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories depending thereon, in AMERICA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral of the same:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, the General Assembly of this Province stands prorogued to the ninth day of August next; I have thought fit for His Majesty's service to prorogue, and I do, by and with the advice of His Majesty's Council, farther prorogue the said General Assembly to the sixth day of September next, of which all His Majesty's subjects concerned therein are required to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, at Fort George, in the City of New-York, the thirty-first day of July, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, in the fifteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

WILLIAM TRYON.

By his Excellency's command:

SAMUEL BAYARD, JUN., Dep. Secretary.

God save the King.

FRANCIS STEPHENS TO GENERAL GAGE.

Office of Ordnance, New-York, July 31, 1775.

HONOURABLE SIR: In my letter of the twenty-fourth June, I acquainted your Excellency with the depredations committed on such of His Majesty's property as remained at Turtle Bay; and occurrences of the like nature having since happened at this place, I now beg leave to transmit you the following particular account of the same, viz:

On Wednesday, the twelfth instant, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock at night, I being then at the house of Mr. Banyor, in the neighbourhood, the clerk of stores came and acquainted me that a number of men with side-arms, &c., had just then got over the fence of the shot yard, and were breaking open the several doors of the armoury, store-house, and those of the artificers' shops; whereupon I immediately repaired to the front doors of the two first mentioned places, and on hearing a most violent noise proceeding from their ransacking the premises, I immediately called on Mr. Alderman Brewerton, acquainting him therewith, and requested his interposition; but he replied, as an individual he could by no means render me any assistance, and advised me, in that case, to call on the Mayor, which I accordingly did, but he was not in Town. I then, in my way to the Governour's, met with Captain Thomas William Moore, who had the command of the guard appointed to preserve the peace of the City, to whom I communicated the foregoing, and entreated his assistance, in order to put a stop to the felonious proceedings of a number of armed men who were carrying off His Majesty's stores, as also some of my own private property, and which I conceived it was his duty to protect. Soon after, Mr. Moore came down to the store-houses, and brought with him a party of armed men, who, with myself, went in amongst the people that were committing the depredations, demanding by what authority they presumed to carry off the King's stores; when some of them replied to Mr.

Moore, that it was by order of their Colonel Ritzema they came there for that purpose. Upon which they were told, that no person whatever had a right to order them to behave in the manner they had done, and therefore advised them to disperse; which they soon after accordingly did, taking with them several drums, a considerable quantity of iron ramrods, and sundry other articles of His Majesty's property. Two hours after they were gone, viz. about two o'clock in the morning, a great party of the Connecticut Troops, supposed to be upwards of a hundred, came from their encampment, in the environs of the City, to the store-houses aforementioned, where they continued until night day-light, rummaging and ransacking every place, and carried away such articles as they thought proper.

Thursday the thirteenth, about eight o'clock in the evening, Francis Staples, the person who has the care of Turtle Bay, came to town and informed me of the following particulars, viz: that about three o'clock this afternoon, the same sloop which carried off the stores from thence on the night of the twelfth ultimo, came again to that place, and was met by a party of the Connecticut Troops, supposed to be about fifty men, who put on board the said sloop (as near as he could well guess) about five hundred twenty-four pound round-shot, fifty ten-inch, and the like number of cohorn shells; they likewise broke open the store-house, took out the major part of what remained there, such as old sand-bags, empty boxes, &c., and then went off.

The same night, about half past nine o'clock, a company of armed men came to my dwelling-house and demanded admittance, pretending that they had received certain intelligence of a number of small-arms being concealed in the upper apartment of said house, and as such were determined to be satisfied by searching it, &c.; which was accordingly done to their great disappointment. They then requested of me the keys of another store-house, which they said had not as yet been examined into, observing that the arms must of course certainly be there; and notwithstanding my utmost endeavours to dissuade them to the contrary, they violently broke open the doors of the same, and robbed it of the following articles, viz: two brass petards, some tents, mostly unserviceable, a few powder-horns, nails, baskets, and other things, which at present is not in my power to particularize. In consequence of the above facts having been represented to the civil magistrates, a deputation from their body waited on their Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, who sit during the recess of the Provincial Congress. The latter, on hearing what had happened, gave immediate orders for printing and publishing handbills to the following purport, which were soon after distributed throughout the City.

"Whereas, information hath been given to this Committee, by the Civil Magistrates of the City of New-York, that an attack was made, without provocation, upon a boat belonging to His Majesty's Ship Asia, and the boat wantonly destroyed; and also, that the house and stores of Mr. Francis Stephens were violently broken open, and robbed of private property, and military stores taken from thence; and whereas the said Magistrates have requested the advice of the Committee on the premises:

"Ordered, That it be recommended to the Civil Magistrates to examine strictly into the several matters and things above mentioned, and to punish all persons who are guilty of perpetrating the same, as the law directs; and that it be, and hereby is recommended to all the citizens and others, to aid and assist the Magistrates in the execution of their offices.

A true copy from the minutes:

"July 13, 1775." "ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

The Mayor and Court of Aldermen, agreeable to what is recommended to them in the above, proceeded to take the depositions of several persons who were by at the time the depredations were committed, and issued their warrants for apprehending those who were reported to be guilty. But the Grand Jury, who were sitting at the time, and had the complaints with many affidavits laid before them, nevertheless thought proper to decline doing any thing further in the affair; nor does there appear the smallest shadow of a probability that I shall be able to obtain any redress, so very much are the insulters and robbers of Government property at present befriended in this place.

I am, with the greatest respect, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

FRANCIS STEPHENS.

His Excellency the Honourable General Gage.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, July 31, 1775.

SIR: Yesterday the enclosed letter and papers were delivered me. The warrants for the Captains and Lieutenants to enlist the men, have not yet been sent up; but that no delay might thereby be occasioned, I have directed them to proceed to make the levies, and have given them assurances that they should have the commissions. A controversy has arisen between Allen and Warner; the former, you will perceive, has been left out altogether by the Green Mountain Boys. What the consequences will be I cannot pretend to say.

I have a boat on stocks, sixty feet in length, which I hope to finish by this day week. I suppose she will carry between two and three hundred men. Another of the same size is to be put up to-day, so that I hope soon to have vessels enough to move on. If any more powder can be got, I hope it will be sent, as not above a ton will be left, if so much, when the Troops are completed, to a pound a man.

Enclose you copies of two letters; one from Commissary Phelps, and the other from Commissary Strong. The former, Mr. Livingston acquaints me, refuses to resign the department into his hands. I have sent orders to him requiring his compliance. I doubt whether they will be obeyed. If not, it is more than probable that the service will essentially suffer.

I have written to Mr. Strong, that Mr. Livingston will take the pork, flour, and cattle, he mentions; his letter is not the most decent, and as such I have treated it in my answer to him.

As I did not wish that Mr. Livingston should dismiss any person that had been employed by the Colony of Connecticut, I wrote him as soon as I was informed of his appointment. Mr. Phelps must continue in employment, and I think you had best send him to Fort George, to take charge of your branch there.

I should not have troubled you with these letters, but that you may from them see the necessity of some general resolution of Congress, to cure all this jarring.

I am, Sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Honourable John Hancock, President, &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS

Ticonderoga, July 31, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I do myself the honour to enclose you a copy of a letter and paper I have received from the people called Green Mountain Boys, together with a copy of my letter in answer. I am apprehensive that the controversy which has arisen amongst them, relative to the Field-Officers, will cause delay in the levies. Whilst at New-York, and even after my arrival here, on conversing with Allen and Warner, I did not conceive there could have been any contest between them, or that a third person would have been recommended by the people as a Field-Officer. On that supposition, and believing the people unanimous in their favour, I should not have hesitated to have recommended them.

You will please to send up the warrants for the Captains and Lieutenants without being filled up, lest any that are nominated should decline the service. The warrants completed for such Field-Officers as you may appoint, you will also please to furnish me with.

I have got some New-England men to make oars in this quarter. If, therefore, you order me six hundred, it will be sufficient; these I wish up as soon as possible. Some of the stores are arrived, and I hope the remainder will soon be here.

I beg leave to remind you, that the proper officers and necessaries for a hospital will be most indispensably necessary. The Troops already here begin severely to feel the want of them.

Please to order all the powder that is made at Judge Livingston's powder-mill to Albany, with as much despatch as possible, directed to the care of the Deputy Commissary-General, Walter Livingston, Esquire.

The clothing and tents for the Green Mountain Boys, I wish you to forward as soon as possible.

I am, Gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., &c.

NATHAN CLARK TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Dorset, July 28, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: In compliance to the orders of Congress, as well as your recommendation, I enclose the proceedings of our Committee meeting on the New-Hampshire Grants upon due notice to the Towns in general, all which is humbly submitted to your wisdom, not doubting but the warrants will issue agreeable to our wishes. We are your most obedient.

In behalf of the Committee:

NATHAN CLARK, Chairman.

To the Honourable General Schuyler.

At a meeting of the Committees of the several Townships on the New-Hampshire Grants, west of the Range of Green-Mountains, convened at the house of Mr. Cephas Kents, Innholder in the Township of Dorset, July 27th, 1775. Voted as follows, viz:

First. Chose Mr. Nathan Clark Chairman.

NATHAN CLARK, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NATHAN CLARK.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, July 31, 1775.

SIR: Your letter, dated Dorset, 28th July, 1775, has been delivered me by Captain Fitch, together with the votes that were enclosed.

The choice of the Captains and Lieutenants being left unconditional to the people, those chosen will receive the warrants as soon as they come to my hands, and the levying of the men may not be retarded. You will signify to them that I hereby empower them immediately to proceed to that business, without waiting for the warrants.

And in order to prevent any confusion that may take place, the Captains and Lieutenants must immediately signify to me in writing, that they accept, or decline the offices to which they have been elected.

The votes I shall immediately transmit to Congress, that they may approve of the Field Officers, or appoint others out of your body, as they may think proper.

I am, Sir, your humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Mr. Nathan Clark, Chairman, &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ticonderoga, July 31, 1775.

SIR: At ten this morning was honoured with your favour of twenty-fourth instant. Any person acquainted with the situation of this Country, the importance of having the command of Canada, the salutary consequences that must necessarily flow from having it in our power to command respect from the savages, must, without hesitation, agree, that no time ought to be lost in attempting to gain possession of the Province of Quebeck; and although hitherto we have had every prospect that could promise success to the enterprise, yet such is unfortunately our situation, that we are not in a capacity to move. We have neither craft to transport a body of men, nor provisions. The former I hope soon to be supplied with, as I have a number of carpenters at work in building boats. The latter must be sent me from Albany; but comes so amazingly slow, that we have not above ten days' flour for the few Troops here. This scarcity has obliged me to order the men arrived at Albany from New-York to encamp there, to prevent their starving here.

I find by the returns of the Commissaries, that twenty thousand rations were expended so early as the seventh instant, beyond the allowance. I hope, however, that we shall get ready in time to effect so good a work, if the disposition of the Canadians continues friendly to us. The Troops here sicken very fast for want of proper hospitals. We are under the disagreeable necessity of leaving the sick with the well.

If the Lexington affair caused so much emotion in England, I hope the last battle will increase them, so as to bring about a revolution of some kind in our favour; and the Minister's confidence in the defection of New-York vanishing, they may be induced to give up their odious claims, and pursue measures tending to a reconciliation, instead of the nefarious and hostile ones they had adopted.

I am, Sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Ticonderoga, July 31, 1775.

DEAR GENERAL: Since my last I have been most assiduously employed in preparing materials for building boats to convey me across the lake. The progress has hitherto been slow, as with few hands I had all the timber to cut, mills to repair to saw the plank, and my draught cattle extremely weak for want of feed, the drought having scorched up every kind of herbage. I have now one boat on the stocks which I hope will carry near three hundred men; another is putting up to-day. Provisions of the bread kind are scarce with me, and therefore I have not dared to order up a thousand men that are at Albany, lest we should starve here.

I have had no intelligence from Canada since my last to you. Major Brown has been gone nine days, and I expect him back, if all is well, by Saturday next, August 2.

I have not had a return from General Wooster since my arrival. I am therefore under the necessity of making you a return of the Troops here only.

Enclose your Excellency a copy of two affidavits made by persons from Canada. I have transmitted other copies to the Congress.

I am extremely anxious to hear from your part of the world. Reports prevail that a body of Troops have left Boston, and are gone to Canada. If so, I fear we shall not be able to penetrate into Canada, or even attack St. John's with success, though at all events I am ordered to go there.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c. &c.

P. S. I wish I could make you a regular return even of the Troops at this place and Crown Point, but I have not yet got the people to be regular in any thing, and therefore beg you to dispense with the following statement: Fit for duty, 1 Colonel, 3 Majors, 9 Captains, 1 Captain-Lieutenant, 21 Subalterns, 34 Sergeants, 18 Drums and Fifes, 933 rank and file, 1 Chaplain, 2 Adjutants, 1 Quartermaster, 1 Surgeon, and 2 Mates. Sick: 1 Lieutenant, 4 Sergeants, 2 Drums, 103 rank and file.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, July 31, 1775.

SIR: By the Resolve in Congress of the 19th instant, it is recommended to the New-England Colonies to complete the deficiencies in the Regiments belonging to them respectively. I have not been informed of any deficiency in the number of Troops sent from Connecticut.

It is recommended, also, to this Colony, to complete and send forward to the camp before Boston, as soon as possible, the fourteen hundred men lately voted by our Assembly. The 25th instant I sent orders to the Colonels of the last raised Regiments to march forthwith to the camp before Boston by subdivisions, if all were not in readiness. Expect many of the companies will begin their march this day, and that the whole will move forward very soon.

The honourable President Hancock, in his favour of the 22d instant, informs, that you had recommended, and the Congress have appointed Mr. Joseph Trumbull Commissary-General of the American Army. I am also informed that you have taken Mr. John Trumbull into your service and family. These instances of kindness shewn them justly claim my most grateful acknowledgments. A performance of their duty answerable to your expectation, will meet your approbation and continuance of regard, and afford me peculiar satisfaction and pleasure.

The Rose, Swan, and Kingfisher, ships-of-war, with a small tender, the 26th instant came into the harbour at New-London. On the 27th instant some men landed near the Light-house, broke off the trunnions and plugged up with old files three or four cannon. They sailed out again on Friday last. It is reported Mr. Collector Stuart is packing up his effects, in order to leave that port.

I am, Sir, with great truth and regard, your Excellency's most obedient and humble servant, JONA. TRUMBULL.

His Excellency General Washington.

TOWN-MEETING, PROVIDENCE, RHODE-ISLAND.

At a Town-meeting called by warrant and holden in Providence, on the thirty-first day of July, A. D. 1775, the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esquire, Moderator:

Voted, That there be an Intrenchment and Breastwork hove up between Field's Point and Sassafras Point, sufficient to cover such a body of men as may be ordered there on emergency; that there be a Battery of six eighteen-pounders erected at Fox Hill; that there be four cannon mounted as field-pieces by the Committee hereinafter-named; that the same Committee draw up Rules for regulating the Battery; that Captain Nicholas Power be appointed to build the Battery and Breastwork aforesaid, and that he advise and consult with Captain Errick Hopkins, Ambrose Page, Esquire, Captain John Updike, Mr. Samuel Nightingale, Junr., Captain William Earle, and Captain Simon Smith, who are appointed a Committee for that purpose, on the manner of building the aforesaid works, and that he proceed on the same immediately; that there be a foot Bridge built over the Creek that leads to Fox Point; that the Committee aforesaid apply to the proprietors of the lands to get liberty to build the Batteries at Fox Hill, &c.; that Captain Power draw on the Town Treasury for defraying the expense of the aforesaid works, until the same shall be reimbursed by the Continental Congress, and if there is not money sufficient in the Treasury to answer Captain Power's orders, he shall be allowed interest for the same till paid; that his Honour the Deputy-Governour be requested to represent the whole of this matter to the Continental Congress requesting that they would be pleased to reimburse the Town the expenses they may be at in erecting those temporary though necessary works of defence.

Voted, That the Committee appointed at the last meeting to erect a Beacon, be also requested to build a House for the materials for the Beacon.

Voted, That this meeting be adjourned to Saturday next, at four o'clock, P. M.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE SPEAKER OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Camp at Cambridge, July 31, 1775.

SIR: I have considered the application made to me yesterday from the General Court, with all the attention due to the situation of the people in whose behalf it is made, and the respect due to such a recommendation. Upon referring to my instructions, and consulting with those members of Congress who are present, as well as the General Officers, they all agree, that it would not be consistent with my duty to detach any part of the Army now here on any particular Provincial service. It has been debated in Congress and settled, that the Militia, or other internal strength of each Province, is to be applied for defence against those small and particular depredations which were to be expected, and to which they were supposed to be competent. This will appear the more proper, when it is considered, that every town, and indeed every part of our sea-coast which is exposed to these depredations, would have an equal claim upon this Army.

It is the misfortune of our situation, which exposes us to these ravages, and against which, in my judgment, no such temporary relief could possibly secure us. The great advantage the enemy have of transporting troops by being masters of the sea, will enable them to harass us by diversions of this kind; and should we be tempted to pursue them upon every alarm, the Army must either be so weakened as to expose it to destruction, or a great part of the coast be still left unprotected. Nor, indeed, does it appear to me, that such a pursuit would be attended with the least effect. The first notice of such an excursion would be its actual execution; and long before any troops could reach the scene of action, the enemy would have an opportunity to accomplish their purpose, and retire. It would give me great pleasure to have it in my power to extend protection and safety to every individual; but the wisdom of the General Court will anticipate me in the necessity of conducting our operations on a general and impartial scale, so as to exclude any just cause of complaint and jealousy.

I beg, Sir, you will do me the honour to communicate these sentiments to the General Court, and to apologize for my involuntary delay, as we were alarmed this morning by the enemy, and my time was taken up in giving the necessary directions.

I shall be happy in every opportunity of showing my very great respect and regard for the General Court of Massachusetts-Bay; and am, Sir, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED CAMBRIDGE, JULY 31, 1775.

Last Friday we were informed by our out sentries at the foot of Bunker's Hill, that the enemy had cut down several large trees, and were busy all night in throwing up a line and abattis in front of it. In the evening orders were given to the York County Rifle Company, to march down to our advanced post on Charlestown Neck, to endeavour to surround the enemy's advanced guard, and to bring off some prisoners; from whom we expected to learn the enemy's design in throwing up the abattis on the neck. The Rifle Company divided, and executed their plan in the following manner: Captain Dowdle, with thirty-nine men, filed off to the right of Bunker's Hill, and, creeping on their hands and knees, got into the rear of the enemy's sentries, without being discovered. The other division, of forty men, under Lieutenant Miller, were equally successful in getting behind the sentries on the left, and were within a few yards of joining the division on the right, when a party of Regulars came down the hill to relieve their guard, and crossed our Riflemen under Captain Dowdle, as they were lying on the ground in an Indian file. The Regulars were within twenty yards of our Riflemen before they saw them, and immediately fired. The Riflemen returned the salute, killed several, and brought off two prisoners and their muskets, with the loss of Corporal Crouse, who is supposed to be killed, as he has not been heard of since the affair.

In return for this, the enemy alarmed us last night in their turn. At one o'clock this morning a heavy firing of small-arms and cannon occasioned our drums to beat to arms. The Army was immediately ordered under arms to their posts. The firing continued in three different quarters—Roxbury, Sewall's Point, at the mouth of Cambridge River, and at the advanced posts at Charlestown Neck. Some hours elapsed before we knew the design of the enemy, which was this: we had surrounded some of their out guards the night before, which induced them to serve our sentries in the same manner. They sent two flat-bottomed boats to Sewall's Point to attack our redoubt there; sallied out at Roxbury, and set fire to the George Tavern, our advanced guard house. Our people attacked, beat them in, and took one prisoner, who is expected here every minute. The flat-bottomed boats, after a useless fire of many hours, returned. The picket guard of the enemy on Charlestown Neck attacked and drove in our advanced guard of sixty men, who, being re-enforced by General Lee's orders, recovered their ground, and beat off the enemy, killed several, and brought off seven muskets, without losing a man, although our men engaged them under their guns, within point blank shot of their lines. We are just informed that two hundred and fifty of the Marblehead sailors have formed on Plowed Hill, and have drove in all the out guards of the enemy. The enemy do not appear to be very fond of coming out. We shall harass them continually, and for this reason want the aid of the Riflemen, as only one company is as yet came in.

Worcester, Massachusetts, August 2, 1775.

On Monday last, July 31st, we learn that a detachment of three hundred men from our Army, under the command of Major Tupper, were sent to Light-House Island, on information being received that the King's Troops were rebuilding it. The enemy perceiving our people coming, prepared to receive them. Our Troops were ordered not to fire until they landed, which they did, and went boldly up to the enemy, killed ten or twelve on the spot, among whom was the commanding officer, and took the remainder, about thirty-five in number, demolished the enemy's works, and were preparing to embark; but the tide leaving them, they were obliged to tarry till its return; meantime a large number of boats from the men-of-war came up in order to re-enforce the enemy on the island, and a smart firing from both parties commenced; our Troops, however, got safe back with their prisoners, with the loss of one man killed, and two or three wounded.

To the Committee of CHERRY VALLEY. To be communicated to the Inhabitants of the BUTTERNUTS.

A Speech of the Chiefs of the ONEIDAS, respecting the late Murder committed in the plantation of the BUTTERNUTS.

BRETHREN: We have heard of your alarming and distracting situation, by the unnatural and very inhuman murder of one in your place. We are very much surprised at the account, and feel for you in this your distress. Both you and we shall likely soon discover the murderer. You white people have some malicious evil-minded persons amongst you, and we Indians have likewise the same. We have long resided hard by our brethren on Mohawk River, and never knew such an instance as has happened in your place—a man found dead, and murdered in such a manner! Brethren, quiet your minds, and indulge no fears nor jealousies respecting our friendship; don't leave your plantations; continue where you are, and follow your work. We don't think you would have suspected any of us Oneidas to have done such a thing, were it not for the troubles and confusions that prevail in the eastward, (meaning New-England.) We Oneidas have made search, and can find no person of our Nation that has been so lately hunting in the woods; nor any of the Onohoggwahes. We therefore entreat you to quiet your minds, and by no means indulge any fears respecting us; and whenever we meet again, let it be in great friendship and brotherly love; or if any of our people should pass that way, treat them with your usual kindness, that peace may always continue and be maintained between us. We have only farther to remark, that had there been on our part any design of mischief, or beginning a quarrel with the white people, and had an Indian committed the inhuman murder, he would never have come off and left the man unscalped; for which reason, and some other circumstances, we are of opinion that some other person, and not an Indian, has been guilty of the murder. We hope you may never know the like again, but continue in peace and prosper.

Present, four of the Onohoggwahes. Interpreted and wrote by Samuel Kirkland, Missionary.

1. Resolved, That Mr. Robert Morris wait on Mr. Robert Bass with said lists, and request that he would point out what Medicines may be best imported from Holland and Cadiz, and what may be purchased with convenience in this City; and that Mr. Robert Morris undertake to import such Medicines as may be pointed out to be imported from Holland and Cadiz, in the most expeditious manner.

Doctor Franklin delivered to this Board a Letter from Captain John MacPherson, offering his services for the defence of this Country, for which Doctor Franklin is desired to return the thanks of this Board to Captain MacPherson.

2. Resolved, That the Resolves of the Continental Congress, of the 18th of July instant, be entered on the Minutes of this Board; which are the following:

"In Congress, July 18, 1775.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of all the United English Colonies in North America, that all able-bodied effective men, between sixteen and sixty years of age, in each Colony, immediately form themselves into regular companies of Militia, to consist of one Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, one Clerk, one Drummer, one Fifer, and about sixty-eight Privates.

"That the Officers of each Company be chosen by the respective Companies.

"That each Soldier be furnished with a good Musket that will carry an ounce ball, with a bayonet, steel ramrod, worm, priming-wire, and brush fitted thereto; a cutting-sword, or tomahawk; a cartridge-box that will contain twenty-three rounds of cartridges, and twelve flints; and a knapsack.

"That the Companies be formed into Regiments or Battalions, officered with a Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, two Majors, an Adjutant or Quartermaster.

"That all Officers above the rank of a Captain be appointed by their respective Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, or, in their recess, by the Committees of Safety appointed by said Assemblies or Conventions.

"That all Officers be commissioned by the Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, or, in their recess, by the Committees of Safety appointed by said Assemblies or Conventions.

"That all the Militia take proper care to acquire military skill, and be well prepared for defence, by being each man provided with one pound of good Gunpowder, and four pounds of Ball fitted to his gun.

"That one-fourth part of the Militia in every Colony be selected for Minute-men, of such persons who are willing to enter into this necessary service, formed into Companies or Battalions, and their Officers chosen and commissioned as aforesaid, to be ready on the shortest notice to march to any place where their assistance may be required for the defence of their own or a neighbouring Colony. And as these Minute-men may eventually be called to action before the whole body of the Militia are sufficiently trained, it is recommended that a more particular and diligent attention be paid to their instruction in military discipline.

"That such of the Minute-men as desire it be relieved by new draughts as aforesaid, from the whole body of the Militia, once in four months.

"As there are some people who, from religious principles, cannot bear arms in any case, this Congress intend no violence to their consciences, but earnestly recommend it to them to contribute liberally, in this time of universal calamity, to the relief of their distressed brethren in the several Colonies, and to do all other services to their oppressed Country which they can, consistently with their religious principles.

"That it be recommended to the Assemblies or Conventions in the respective Colonies, to provide, as soon as possible, sufficient stores of Ammunition for their Colonies; also, that they devise proper means for furnishing with Arms such effective men as are poor and unable to furnish themselves.

"That it be recommended to each Colony to appoint a Committee of Safety to superintend and direct all matters necessary for the security and defence of their respective Colonies, in the recess of their Assemblies or Conventions.

"That each Colony, at their own expense, make such provision, by armed vessels or otherwise, as their respective Assemblies, Conventions, or Committees of Safety shall judge expedient and suitable to their circumstances and situations, for the protection of their harbours and navigation on their sea-coasts against all unlawful invasions, attacks, and depredations from cutters and ships-of-war.

"That it be recommended to the makers of Arms for the use of the Militia, that they make good substantial Muskets, with barrels three feet and a half in length, that will carry an ounce ball, and fitted with a bayonet and steel ramrod; and that the making such Arms be encouraged in these United Colonies.

"Where in any Colony a Militia is already formed, under regulations approved of by the Convention of such Colony, or by such Assemblies as are annually elective, we refer to the discretion of such Assembly or Convention either to adopt the foregoing Regulations, in the whole or in part, or to continue their former, as they, on consideration of all circumstances, shall think best.

"Camp near New-York, July 11, 1775.

"SIR: Peter Herring, the man who last night assisted in conveying on board the Asia, man-of-war, one of the prisoners sent here by the Continental Congress, is now under guard at our camp. I would beg the immediate advice of the Committee of Safety concerning what is best to be done with him. His brother is willing and desirous that he should be sent away somewhere, that he may be out of the way of the enraged people. Some have proposed that he be sent on board of the Asia; others think it best to have him sent to Connecticut with Governour Skene, who will go off as soon as this matter can be determined. I hope, therefore, to be assisted with your advice as speedily as possible, and am, Sir, your humble servant,

"DAVID WOOSTER.

"Peter V. B. Livingston, Esquire."

Thereupon, an Order to General Wooster was made in the words following, to wit:

SIR: Immediately on the receipt of this you are required to send the body of Peter Herring, under safe and secure guard, before the Committee of Safety, at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, for which this shall be a sufficient warrant. By order of the Committee of Safety.

An Answer to General Wooster's Letter was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

We are, Sir, your humble servants.

To General David Wooster, at the Camp.

P. S. If there are any witnesses, please to send them also.

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 11, 1775. }

SIR: We are favoured with your letter of the 5th June, and are to inform you, that our Provincial Congress, after having appointed a Committee of Safety, adjourned for a fortnight from this day. When it convenes we doubt not they will take into their most mature consideration the matters contained in your letter, which we shall lay before them. In the mean time we beg leave to assure you, that we highly esteem and approve of your care and vigilance in keeping open and protecting the last Court in your County. We conceive it to be of the utmost importance that good order be supported, as internal divisions must prove injurious to the common cause. We are, with much respect, Sir, your most humble servants.

To William Duer, Esq., one of the Judges of Charlotte.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the Chairman, and transmitted.

A Letter from William Marsh, and Samuel Rose, Esqs., the Committee of Manchester, in Charlotte County, to the Provincial Congress, dated Manchester, June 28, 1775, was read.

An Answer to the Letter of William Marsh and Samuel Rose was read, and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety, New-York, July 11, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress having adjourned for a fortnight, and appointed us during their recess a Committee of Safety, we have to acknowledge your letter of the 28th June, which advises us of the measures that had been pursued in order to prevent the holding the courts of justice in your County. We are happy to find they have proved ineffectual, and can assure you, that it is the intention of the Congress to assist the Civil Magistrate in the exercise of his office and the support of Government, as far as may be practicable in our present critical situation. We have no doubt but that the Congress will, immediately upon their meeting, enter into a resolution for effecting these salutary purposes. We are, Gentlemen, &c.

To Messrs. William Marsh and Samuel Rose.

A Letter from Abraham Lott, Esquire, Agent for His Majesty's Ships in this Port, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

I am authorized to assure the honourable Committee that the Nautilus is not going to Boston, but to the southward.

"I am, Gentlemen, your most humble servant,

"ABRAHAM LOTT.

"To the Honourable the Committee of the New-York Provincial Congress."

Ordered, That Abraham Lott, Esquire, be at liberty to supply the quantities of Provisions and Rum above-mentioned to the Ship Nautilus, for the use of the said Ship's company.

Colonel McDougall, on behalf of New-York, and as Commissioner for Queen's County, dissents; Mr. Brasher, on behalf of New-York, and as Commissioner for Suffolk County, dissents.

A Letter from William Hooper and Joseph Hewes, Esquires, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Philadelphia, June 8, 1775.

"SIR: The Committee of the City, a few days ago, transmitted to you an original letter from Governour Martin to Henry White, Esquire, from the contents of which it is very obvious that Governour Martin has formed designs highly inimical to the friends of America. From authentick information we learn, that he is to receive a supply of powder from General Gage via New-York, and that he has sent from North-Carolina a cutter well armed to receive it. She is a small boat, rigged like a schooner, mounts a few swivels, and is commanded by a Mr. Bridges, the Lieutenant of the Tamar, man-of-war; the vessel, we believe, was formerly purchased in New-York, by a Captain Vollet. We beg your particular care, in case she should arrive in your Port, to take the steps you may think prudent to secure her and her cargo. She is probably to receive the gunpowder from the Asia, or some other man-of-war lying in your harbour.

"We are, Sir, with great respect, your most obedient humble servants,

"WILLIAM HOOPER,
"JOSEPH HEWES."

An Answer to the Letter of William Hooper and Joseph Hewes, Esquires, was read, and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 11, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: The Congress having adjourned for a fortnight, and appointed us during their recess a Committee of Safety, we have the honour of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 6th instant. It gives us much pleasure to find that our plan of accommodation has been favoured with your approbation.

We are sorry to inform you, that a supply of the article which, according to your advice of the 31st June, was to have been sent to the Committee of Elizabethtown, has not yet been received, and that the want of it prevents our answering some very pressing demands from the place for which it was ordered to be forwarded.

We meet with many difficulties in carrying into execution the Resolutions of your honourable body, from the want of money, an inconveniency we hope now soon to be relieved from. We are, Gentlemen, yours, &c.

To the New-York Delegates in Continental Congress.

A Letter from Governour Trumbull was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Hartford, July 7, 1775.

"SIR: I received your letter of the 27th of June last, respecting a quantity of a necessary article which was forwarded by you. I immediately took care to make the necessary provision for its being sent on the way to the place of its destination, where no doubt it has safe arrived before this.

"Mr. James Dean, the bearer of this, is a young gentleman who has lately returned from a mission among the Tribes of Indians in Canada. He appears to have made some careful observations of the state of that Country, and is able to give some important intelligence. I take the liberty to recommend him to your notice, that he may communicate his information for your use.

"I am, with great truth and regard, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,
JONA. TRUMBULL.

"Hon. P. V. B. Livingston."

An account of the men who went from Manchester to Ticonderoga, and of the money expended by Lieutenant Joseph Lockwood, was read, and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"A list of the Men who went from MANCHESTER to TICONDEROGA, under the command of Mr. JOSEPH LOCKWOOD:

A Letter from John N. Bleecker at Albany, dated July 4, 1775, was received, and read.

The account of Provisions and Stores, and also the appointment of Elisha Phelps, mentioned in Mr. Bleecker's Letter, were also read, and filed.

A Letter from Burnet Miller, Chairman of the Committee of Southampton, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Southampton, July 5, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: The Committee of East and Southampton, taking into their serious consideration the remote situation from Head-Quarters at New-York, and much exposed to the ravages of our unnatural enemy at this day, with regard to our stock in our common field, at the Point of Montauk, it being remote from the inhabitants, where any number may land, and at pleasure take away our stock, which is large, (not less than two thousand neat cattle, and three or four thousand sheep,) which, if taken away, would greatly distress us, and give them support, which we could by no means do:

"Now, considering our situation, we request your honourable House to petition General Schuyler that a number of Troops be stationed at Montauk, and that the company now raising here may be a part, until a matter of more importance shall call them away. We are of the opinion, that our inhabitants would do what in them lies to give assistance, in case any attempt should be made to take off the stock; but the distance of the inhabitants is eighteen or twenty miles; and as Gardner's Island lies adjacent and is much exposed, also Shelter Island, Plumb Island, and Oyster Pond Point, we think a number of whale-boats would be proper to employ, that assistance may be given from one part to the other. We have a number of boats that are of no use in this season, that might be got for the design, if the General should think proper to order Troops to this part of the island, which we humbly petition may be done, &c. I am, Gentlemen, &c.

"By order of the Committee:

"BURNET MILLER, Chairman.

"To the Provincial Congress now sitting at New-York."

Peter Herring being brought before the Committee, General Wooster charged and accused him of being aiding and assisting to one Lundin yesterday evening, in making his escape from the confinement he was under by order of the Continental Congress; several witnesses were examined as to the charge, in the presence of the said Peter Herring.

Resolved, That it fully appears to this Committee, by the testimony of sundry witnesses, as also by the examination and confession of Peter Herring, of the City of New-York, that he, the said Peter Herring, was aiding and assisting to one Lundin yesterday evening, in making his escape from the confinement he was in by order of the Continental Congress; and the said Peter Herring assisted him to get on board the Asia, man-of-war, and was the means of getting him on board of the said Ship:

Resolved and Ordered, therefore, That the said Peter Herring be sent, under such guard as General Wooster shall appoint, to Connecticut, to be there confined in close jail at the Continental charge, until he shall be thence discharged by the Continental Congress.

Ordered, That Mr. Brasher wait on his Worship the Mayor of the City of New-York, and request him to get a just estimate made of the value of the Muskets and Bayonets, the arms of the Corporation of the City of New-York, and to have the same delivered to this Committee, or the Provincial Congress, in order that so many of them as may be appropriated for the use of the Continental

We shall forward a copy of your letter to him without delay, and we have the highest confidence, that on your application to him he will make every arrangement in stationing the Troops at the different posts you mention, that will be for the general defence of the United Colonies.

A draught of a Letter to the Delegates from this Colony at the Continental Congress, was read and approved of, and is in the words following:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 12, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: We beg leave, for your information, to enclose you a copy of the instructions and warrant which we have given to the officers employed in raising our troops. We have formed an arrangement of the three thousand men (exclusive of the Green Mountain Boys) which the Continental Congress have ordered us to raise into four battalions, of seven hundred and fifty men each, including their officers, and would be glad to be informed what their pay is to be. We are at a loss about this matter, because the accounts we have of the pay of the Colonies of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode-Island, differ, so as to reduce us to an uncertainty, which we could wish to have removed. We think, with submission, it would have a tendency to promote the service if our levies could be informed of the quantum of their pay. We have reason to believe that the four battalions will be completed soon, but are sorry to inform you that we have no powder for them when raised. We are yours, &c.

To the New-York Delegates at the Continental Congress.

GENTLEMEN: We are favoured with your letter dated Southampton the fifth instant, signed by Mr. Miller, Chairman of the Committee of East and Southampton, and are to inform you that we will forward a copy of the same to Major-General Schuyler, to whose consideration we must refer your request.

We are, with much respect, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants. By order.

To the Committee of East and Southampton.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the Chairman and transmitted.

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 13, 1775. }

SIR: We beg leave to enclose you a copy of a letter from Colonel Hinman, which was received yesterday. We have, in substance, by our answer, informed him that we would forward a copy of his letter to you, and that we have the highest confidence that, on his application, you will make every arrangement in stationing the Troops at the different posts mentioned in his letter, that would be for the general defence of the United Colonies.

We are, Sir, your obedient servants. By order, &c.
To Major General Schuyler.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the Chairman, and, together with a copy of Colonel Hinman's Letter, be transmitted by the first conveyance.

Alderman Matthews and Alderman Brewerton applied to the Committee, and delivered a Letter from Captain Vandeput, of His Majesty's Ship Asia, to Governour Tryon, complaining that one of his Boats is brought on shore, and the crew detained prisoners; and the Committee being informed that the boat's crew are prisoners in Gen. Wooster's camp, and also that His Majesty's Store near Hudson's River was broken open during last night, and divers effects carried away from thence by violence, Ordered, That Samuel Verplanck, Isaac Low, and Gouverneur Morris, Esquires, be a Sub-Committee from this Committee to wait on Gen. Wooster, in order to make inquiry, and to receive information on those subjects; and also to give such directions therein as they shall think proper, that right may be done without delay.

Thereupon a draught of a Letter to General Wooster was read, and approved, and is as follows:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 13, 1775. }

SIR: Complaint has been made to our Board that a boat belonging to His Majesty's Ship Asia, has been drawn on shore, and the boat's crew detained as prisoners at your camp; and also that His Majesty's store-house near Hud- son's River was, during last night, broke open and divers effects carried away from thence by violence; it is alleged that some of the troops under your command have been concerned in both those acts. We have therefore appointed Samuel Verplanck, Isaac Low, and Gouverneur Morris, Esqrs., a Committee from our Board, to wait on you, in order to make inquiry, and receive information on those subjects, and also to give such directions therein as they shall think proper, that right may be done without delay.

We are, Sir, your humble servants. By order of the Committee.

To Major General Wooster.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the Chairman, and delivered to the Sub-Committee.

Doctor Samuel Bard, at his request, was admitted, and informed the Committee that he had received some disagreeable language from some of his fellow-citizens for receiving and attending the sick Mariners from His Majesty's Ships, and requested to know whether it is the sense of this Committee that his acting as Physician for the sick Mariners is inconsistent with the conduct and duty of a good citizen under the present circumstances of this Colony. Doctor Bard further declared, that he had been particularly careful not to receive any patients from the Ships with any infectious disorders. But that if it is the sense of this Committee that he ought not to attend such sick Mariners, he is ready to resign his office.

Resolved, That Dr. Bard's conduct is fully consistent with the conduct and duty of a good citizen; and he is requested not to suffer any patient to be brought into his Hospital with any infectious disorders, particularly the small-pox.

Mr. Low, from the Committee who waited on General Wooster, reported, that General Wooster informed them that the matter of complaint relating to the boat and boat's crew belonging to the Ship Asia, had arose through some mistake of the master of the Connecticut armed Schooner. That he had ordered the Boat to be restored, and sent a party to put her in the water, and that the boat's crew he had discharged as soon as he heard of their being detained. That as to the effects brought to his camp last night, he had ordered them to be taken care of, and that they are preserved under a guard; that they were brought there by some persons without his knowledge or directions; that one Brasher informed him that Col. Ritzema had desired him to receive and protect those effects; and therefore he had set a guard over them, and they were ready to be delivered to the owner, or to the order of this Committee.

The Recorder and Aldermen Brewerton and Matthews, were called in, and they informed the Committee that the Boat belonging to the Asia, man-of-war, is burnt.

Whereupon the Committee made the following Order:

Whereas, information hath been given to this Committee by some of the Civil Magistrates of the City of New-York, that an attack was made without provocation upon a Boat belonging to His Majesty's Ship Asia, and the Boat wantonly destroyed; and also that the house and store of Mr. Francis Stephens have been violently broken open and robbed of private property, and military stores taken from thence; and whereas, the said Magistrates have requested the advice of this Committee in the premises,

Ordered, That it be recommended to the Civil Magistrates to examine strictly into the several matters and things above mentioned, and to punish all persons who are guilty of perpetrating the same, as the law directs; and that it be and hereby is recommended to all the citizens and others to aid and assist the Magistrates in the execution of their offices.

Ordered, That the foregoing Order be published in handbills, and distributed.

The Committee adjourned to to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Thereupon a draft of a Letter to John Sloss Hobart, Esq., was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
 July 14, 1775. }

SIR: We have received such information as gives us great reason to suspect that one George Youngs and his son, and one Captain Brush, and one Conklin, all of or near Huntington, are concerned in shipping provisions in such manner as that they must inevitably serve to supply General Gage's Fleet and Army at Boston. We enclose you notes taken from two witnesses on that subject. We need not suggest to you that it is incumbent on those people to show where they have unloaded their former cargoes, and where they are now going, and that they have complied with the Association without fraud. We have the highest confidence that your Committee will exert themselves on this occasion.

We are, respectfully, Sir, your humble servants.

By order.

To John Sloss Hobart, Esq.,

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the Chairman, and, together with a copy of the examination of Obadiah and Stephen Seaman, be transmitted by the first conveyance.

Curtenius* be desired to purchase three hundred barrels of Pork, and forward the same to Albany; and that he forward a complete set of Tents to Colonel Rooseboom, at Albany, sufficient for one Regiment, and inform this Committee when those Tents are ready and forwarded.

A Memorial of John Sparding, bearing date at Ticonderoga Landing on the first of June, was read and filed.

The Memorialist sets forth the great trouble and pains he had taken to forward the service there with Boats and Teams, and his ability to perform the same. Also sets forth, that seventeen Pounds are due him for his services; that the Agents now refuse to employ his Teams; that he is likely to be a great sufferer; and prays the same may be taken into consideration.

A Letter to the said John Sparding was thereupon read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
 July 14, 1775. }

SIR: This morning Mr. Peter T. Curtenius presented your Memorial, which was immediately read and taken into consideration. General Schuyler, who has the command of the Northern Posts is now there; to him we must refer you, and doubt not but that he will redress your grievances, and such accounts as he shall recommend for payment, we presume will be honoured by the Provincial Congress.

We are, Sir, your friends and humble servants. By order.
 To Mr. John Sparding at Ticonderoga Landing.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed and signed by the Chairman, and transmitted.

Ordered, That Colonel McDougall, Captain Anthony Rutgers, and Mr. Samuel Tudor, be authorized to purchase old Copper, Brass, and other materials for casting a Brass Field-Piece, at such prices as they can obtain the said materials.

A Letter from John Grennell of Huntington, was read, and filed.

Mr. Grennell by his Letter informs that William Phil- lipse and Philip Conklin, who were nominated his Subalterns, from their particular circumstances decline that service. He recommends Mr. Samuel Smith of Smithtown, for First Lieutenant, and Alexander Ketchum of Huntington, for Second Lieutenant. He also further informs that several stand ready to enlist, and have arms, ammunition, and blankets.

Agreed and Ordered, That Warrants be issued for Samuel Smith and Alexander Ketchum, as Subalterns under John Grennell.

Mr. Abraham Van Wyck having declined serving in the Troops as a Captain, and two days ago returned his Warrant, and Mr. David Lyon of Elizabethtown, in New-Jersey, having offered his services with a complete company of men by him enlisted, Ordered, That the said David Lyon be taken into service as a Captain in the First Regiment in the stead of the said Abraham Van Wyck, and that a Warrant be issued to him accordingly.

A draught of a Letter to Mr. John Grennell, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
 July 14, 1775. }

SIR: Your favour of the 11th instant is now before us. We have attentively perused it, and from the great confidence we place in you, Sir, and a firm reliance that you have recommended gentlemen fit for the trust reposed in them, we have enclosed warrants for them. We recommend to you, Sir, to make all possible despatch in enlisting your men, and to pay a particular attention to their health, strength and abilities. By a resolve of our Congress the men you enlist will be allowed for the use of their arms, if they are approved of by the Mustermaster, Armourer, and Field-Officers of the Regiment, as good and fit for service. As to the blankets and other matters you mention, we are not at present in a condition to advise.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants.

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
 July 15, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: We enclose you the copies of two letters from General Schuyler. In addition we must observe to you, our enlisted men grow uneasy for want of money, which prevents the enlistment of others. We have no arms, we have no powder, we have no blankets. For God's sake send us money, send us arms, send us ammunition. Burgoyne, we learn, has gone to Quebeck. If Ticonderoga is taken from us, fear, which made the savages our friends, will render them our enemies. Ravages on our own frontiers will foster dissensions among us ruinous to the cause. Be prudent, be expeditious.

We are, Gentlemen, yours, &c.

P. S. You will observe, gentlemen, that Peter Van Brugh Livingston is our Treasurer until an appointment by your Board. We hear from good authority that Colonel Guy Johnson is at Oswego, with one thousand or twelve hundred Indians, (men, women, and children,) and that they have plenty of provisions. SIR: We have received your letters, and written to the Continental Congress on those subjects. We shall with all despatch send the officer you mention. We have already ordered to Albany tents for our Regiment. Our Troops can be of no use to you; they have no arms, clothes, blankets, or ammunition; the officers no commissions; our Treasury no money; ourselves in debt. It is in vain to complain; we will remove difficulties as fast as we can, and send you soldiers, whenever the men we have raised are entitled to the name. The intrenching tools shall be sent soon, some immediately, and all the pork that can be had, about one hundred barrels. Use, we pray you, the bad Troops at Ticonderoga, as well as you can.

We are, very sincerely, your countrymen and friends.

Mr. Jacobus Van Zandt is Commissioner to provide carriages for your tents, baggage, &c. Be pleased to inform him how many carts are necessary.

We have thought proper to defer your march until Tuesday morning, inasmuch as the time would not otherwise have permitted our Commissioners to make the necessary arrangements.

We are, Sir, your most obedient humble servants.

To General Wooster.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the Chairman, and sent by General Wooster's officer now in waiting.

General Schuyler, having by his Letter of the eleventh instant, requested this Committee to appoint a proper person to command the Sloop on Lake Champlain, and send him up with all convenient speed, and Captain Patrick Dennis being sent for to confer with on the subject, recommended Captain James Smith for the above service.

SIR: The bearer of this letter is James Smith, a gentleman of excellent character as a sea officer, who willingly undertook the command, refusing a ship he was offered, and left it to us to settle his pay, &c. We agree to a Major's pay, and at the same time we submit it to you whether he will not be entitled to that rank in the Continental service.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants.

To Major-General Schuyler.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the Chairman, and transmitted by the said James Smith.

Agreed and Ordered, That Herman Zedwitz shall be Major, and is hereby appointed Major of the First Regiment of the Troops now raising in this Colony.

A Letter from the Chairman of the Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor Precincts, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit :

To the Honourable Provincial Congress for the Colony of NEW-YORK, now convened in the City of NEW-YORK :

GENTLEMEN : We are extremely sorry to be under the disagreeable necessity of troubling you on this occasion. Nothing but dire necessity could have induced us to take any steps which may be construed by this honourable Congress to be aside from the path of duty. We herewith send you three persons, who not only possess principles very inimical to the grand cause in which we are embarked, but whose conduct, ever since the first of these unhappy times, have been such as to disturb the publick tranquillity and destroy that unanimity so necessary for the preservation of our liberties. Their names are John Morrell, Adam Patrick, and Isaiah Purdy. Herewith, you, gentlemen, will also receive several depositions, taken before John Nicoll, Esq., relative to the matter, which is all we have time to take at present; these we submit to the judgment of the honourable Congress, whether either or all of these persons accused be worthy of confinement or not. On the supposition that the Congress shall judge it expedient that either or all of them should be liberated, in that case we humbly conceive it to be necessary that such security be taken of them as shall render those easy in their minds who are afraid of their persons and property. We would only add, gentlemen, that as we are contending for liberty, it is with the greatest reluctance that we would offer to deprive the meanest of our brethren of that inestimable blessing in the least degree; but in this instance, the safety of our Country, and that first and strongest of laws, self-preservation, calls us to this act of disagreeable duty.

We are, Gentlemen, in behalf of the Committees for the Precincts of Newburgh and New-Windsor, your most obedient humble servants.

WOLVERT ECKER, Chairman.

Samuel Brewster, Chairman.

To Samuel Stringer, Esq., Albany.

Mr. Beekman came into Committee, and reported, that he had been with Gen. Wooster and his first Field Officer to Harlem; that John Sickles demanded such an exorbitant price for his ground, that they could not agree with him; but that they had agreed with Arent Bussing for a proper Field for an Encampment, at the rate of four Pounds per month; and that General Wooster, with his Troops, are all removed.

John Morin Scott, Esq., came into the Committee of Safety, and brought in the Report of the Committee on Indian Affairs; and also the proposed draught of a Speech to the Indians; which were read.

A draught of a Letter to Jacob Bayley, Esq., at Newbury, Gloucester County, in answer to his of the 29th of June ult., was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 19, 1775. }

SIR: It gives us great pleasure to hear of your appointment to represent the County of Gloucester. The raising of troops in your County to serve in the Continental pay, is what we cannot authorize, nor indeed would it be at all useful to yourselves, but rather the contrary, inasmuch as they might be ordered at a distance from you on other service, and thereby weaken your security. For these reasons, we think it would be much more expedient to arrange your able-bodied men into a respectable militia, and let one or two hundred of them be embodied by turns weekly, whereby you will always have a body of men ready to repel injuries; and at the same time, by assembling your County at large, return any insults you may receive in kind.

We cannot express our concern to you, at being obliged to inform you, that at present neither arms nor ammunition can be expected from us, as we have not so many as to serve the Troops raised by our Colony, and intended for the defence of our Northern and Eastern frontier. But we have done every thing men could do: we have advanced money for and established a manufactory of arms, and contracted for a considerable number; we have contracted with merchants for a great number of them; we have taken measures to procure manufacturers; and we have written to Philadelphia for as many as are necessary for our Troops. Similar measures we have taken to procure powder; and depend, Sir, that for your sakes, as well as our own, we shall use every precaution to enable you to provide the means of defence; and at the same time, to prevent you the necessity of using those means.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants. By order.

To Jacob Bayley, Esq., at Newbury, Gloucester County.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the Chairman, and transmitted by Mr. Harvey.

A Letter from Egbert Benson, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Dutchess County, covering the returned Warrants of Roswell Wilcocks and Cornelius Adriance, who decline serving in the Troops, and recommending Isaac Paddock in the place of Wilcocks, and James Betts in the place of Adriance, was read and filed.

The vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Cornelius Adriance being already supplied, Ordered, That a Warrant be made for Isaac Paddock, in the place of Roswell Wilcocks, and enclosed to the Chairman of the Committee.

Thereupon, a draught of a Letter to the Chairman of the Committee of Dutchess, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety, &c., July 19, 1775.

SIR: We acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 13th instant. Agreeable to the recommendation of your Committee, we have enclosed a warrant for Mr. Isaac Paddock. On the 11th instant, Mr. Adriance's resignation was produced to this Committee, together with a recommendation of Mr. Andrew Teller Lawrence, in his stead. As Mr. Lawrence was recommended by two Members of the Provincial Congress, and a number of other freeholders of your County, we gave him a certificate from the Committee of Safety, that he was approved of, and that a warrant should be made for him, as the warrant to Mr. Adriance was returned.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants. By order.

To Egbert Benson, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Dutchess County.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the Chairman of this Committee of Safety, and transmitted.

The Committee having heard Alexander Ellis at their Board, on the subject of a certain Boat by him furnished to Lieutenant Parks, to transport him, with his baggage, to Niagara, do declare it as their sentiment, that the said Alexander Ellis appears to them guiltless with relation to that transaction.

Ordered, That a certified copy of this Declaration be delivered to the said Alexander Ellis.

A Letter from John Nicholson, Esq., of Ulster County, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

New-Windsor, July 13, 1775.

SIR: Agreeable to my warrant and instructions from the Provincial Congress of New-York, I have enlisted a company of seventy-two men, to serve in the Continental Army; and now wait for the further directions of the Congress. I am your most obedient servant,

To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

Thereupon, a draught of an answer to the Letter of John Nicholson, Esquire, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

I found he was in the Army at Cambridge. I took advice of the leading men there, and they nominated William McCune in his place, and he is enlisting of men. Alexander Brink, the Second Lieutenant, lives at the upper part of the County. As this is contrary to the resolution of the Continental Congress, it is a matter that requires your strictest inspection to prevent such traders from pursuing a business inimical to the cause of liberty in the United Colonies.

A draught of a Letter to the Delegates of the Colony of New-York at the Continental Congress, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, }
July 22, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: We expect that our Troops will soon be all enlisted; but we labour under great difficulties on account of arms, and have not, by any means we could devise, been able to procure near so many as are necessary for them. The arms we have procured are of the best sort.

We have thought of the following expedient, which we beg leave to suggest to you. The Colony of New-Jersey has a very considerable number of muskets and bayonets, which we are informed are good. They are deposited at the respective Court-Houses, or some other particular places in each County, as Hackensack, Elizabethtown, &c. If the Continental Congress would please to direct those arms to be cleaned and valued, and put up in boxes, and sent to convenient places on Hudson's River, that they might be put into the hands of such of our Troops as cannot at present be otherwise properly furnished, we conceive it would be of general benefit to the Continental service. Those arms may either be at the Continental charge, or replaced some months hence with others of equal quality, from those which we shall have made in this Colony. The Jersey Congress is to meet next week, and by that means the arms may easily be collected and ordered, as above mentioned.

If you approve of this measure, we pray you to use your best influence in Congress to have it carried into execution. We are, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants. By order of the Committee.

To the Delegates of the Colony of New-York at the Continental Congress, Philadelphia.

P. S. Gentlemen: We beg leave to inform you, that as soon as we began to purchase provisions, &c., we employed Mr. Peter T. Curtenius as our Commissary at New-York. He purchased provisions, stores, tents, intrenching tools, &c. &c. &c. He has been indefatigable in the publick service; run every risk that was requested of him; disbursed his own cash, and succeeded beyond our most sanguine expectations. We think him one of the most proper persons among us for that business, and would earnestly wish he might be continued, in such manner as will not be disagreeable to the Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the Chairman, and sent with all possible despatch.

A draught of a Letter to John Peter Tetard, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

Committee of Safety, &c., July 22, 1775.

SIR: You will observe by the enclosed order of our Provincial Congress, their intention of employing you as Interpreter to General Schuyler, and a Chaplain to the Troops of this Colony. If you are determined to engage in the service in those characters, and on the terms mentioned in the said order, it is expected that you will repair to Albany, and from thence to General Schuyler, with all possible speed. We are, Sir, your very humble servants.

By order.

Thereupon a question arose, whether this Congress will recommend any person to the office of Postmaster at New-York, or submit the appointment of the person to the Continental Congress without such recommendation; and the question being put, it was carried in the affirmative, (to wit, this Congress will recommend,) in manner following, to wit:

A draught of a Letter to the New-York Delegates on the subject of a Post-Office, was read, and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 26, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We enclose you the Report of our Committee on the subject of the Post-Office, with the sundry papers which remained before us, and the votes of our House this evening on that subject.

We are sorry that, by occasion of our late adjournment, and of sundry matters more immediately pressing before the adjournment, this matter has been so long delayed with us.

We beg leave to recommend Mr. Ebenezer Hazard as a most careful, fit, and proper person to be Postmaster at New-York, and hope the Continental Congress may appoint him.

We conceive our present Eastern Riders proceed too far to the eastward. General Schuyler some time ago mentioned to us the necessity of having Couriers from hence to Albany or Ticonderoga. We are frequently obliged to send messengers to Albany, which a regular post to the northward would often prevent. We submit the necessity and utility of Northern Post Riders or Couriers to the wisdom of the Continental Congress; and are, most respectfully, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants.

To the New-York Delegates at Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the President, and transmitted.

The Congress then adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Die Jovis, 9 ho. A. M., July 27, 1775.

The Congress took into consideration the appointment of a Deputy Adjutant-General or a Brigade-Major, and the several Letters from the Continental Congress, and the Letter from the New-York Delegates on that subject; and thereupon, Agreed, unanimously, That this Congress will appoint a Deputy Adjutant-General, as being the superiour officer. And after considering the merits of different gentlemen who were mentioned, it is Unanimously agreed, That William Duer, Esquire, is a proper person for a Deputy Adjutant-General; and Ordered, That the blank Commission for that office, received from the Continental Congress, be immediately filled up for that gentleman; which was accordingly done.

An Account of Sampson Dyckman, for Horse Hire and Stabling, was delivered in, and handed to the Committee of Accounts.

A draught of a Letter to the Honourable John Hancock, Esquire, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 27, 1775.

SIR: In compliance with the request of the Congress, of which you did us the honour to mention in your letters of the seventeenth and nineteenth instant, we have appointed William Duer, Esquire, Deputy Adjutant-General, and taken the liberty to give him, in his commission which we received yesterday, the rank of Colonel. We beg leave to submit to the wisdom of the Congress, whether or not it will be proper to have a Major of Brigade appointed also; and should it be deemed necessary, we would readily decline the honour of nominating a person to fill that office, having full confidence in the wisdom and integrity of our Delegates, and being well convinced that they will recommend no man who is not endued with every qualification necessary to discharge any trust which you may think proper to repose in him.

We are, with great respect, Sir, your countrymen and servants. By order.

To John Hancock, Esq., President, &c.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President, and transmitted.

A draught of a Letter to the New-York Delegates at the Continental Congress was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 27, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: You will readily recollect your former recommendation of Mr. Duer, to some members of our board, for a colonelcy, and therefore will not be surprised that we have seized the opportunity of appointing him Deputy Adjutant-General, with the rank of Colonel; and we trust you will not consider this as any disrespect to your late recommendation of Mr. Lewis. We have submitted it to your body, in our letter to the President, whether the appointment of a Major of Brigade will not be proper, and at the same time submitted the person to your nomination. You will therefore have an opportunity of filling up the commission with such person as you think most capable of performing the duties of his office.

We are, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants.

By order.

To the New-York Delegates in Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President, and transmitted.

Curtenius* for Provisions and necessities, who is hereby requested to furnish him therewith.

Ordered, That Colonel Lispenard, Colonel McDougall, Colonel Holmes, Colonel Hoffman, and Mr. Graham, be a Military Committee, for fourteen days from this day, with full power during that time to order and dispose of all things whatsoever relating to, or concerning the Troops raised or to be raised in this Colony.

A Letter from Samuel Cannon to Colonel Cortlandt, informing that he had not influence sufficient to raise a Company, and therefore resigning his Warrant as a Captain, was read and filed. Colonel Cortlandt returned the said Warrant, and Colonel Holmes and Colonel Cortlandt recommended Joseph Benedict as a proper person in his stead. Thereupon,

A Letter from the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull was read and filed.

A draught of a Letter to the Delegates of this Colony at the Continental Congress, on the subject of Tea, was read and approved, and is as follows, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 28, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: You must be sensible that our exertions in the publick cause have subjected us to a very large expense, (of which certainly the greatest part is justly payable by the Continent,) and at the same time you cannot but perceive that a large sum of money is and will be expended in articles purely at the cost of our Colony. These considerations show us the necessity of laying a tax on our Colony; but prudence or policy will impress as strongly on your minds as on our own, the propriety of doing this in the manner least liable to popular disgust, or perhaps opposition. These observations will, we hope, introduce to you in a favourable light, some things which we now proceed to mention.

Sundry of our merchants have on hand a considerable quantity of tea imported from Holland, which cannot be sold for reasons which we need not repeat. The consequence of the situation is, that our Dutch Traders are deprived of the means of introducing into our Colony sail-duck, Russia drillings, osnaburghs, arms and ammunition, all of them highly necessary for us, and easily to be obtained from Holland, notwithstanding the late placart of the States-General.

Should the retail price of Bohea tea be fixed at six shillings per pound, from six pounds and upwards, and six and sixpence by the single pound, and the wholesale price at five and sixpence, with a tax of one shilling on the pound, payable by the vendor, and similar regulations for green tea, we might raise a considerable sum from the obstinate consumers of this article, and at the same time, the precautions taken by us in giving permission to merchants to sell under certain restrictions, will prevent a trade which, as to the recommendations of the Continental Congress, may well be called illicit, and which does now most undoubtedly obtain, as will readily be acknowledged by those who perceive the general consumption of it throughout the Colony.

We have already furnished to Connecticut almost all the tents which we had provided for our own troops, and we have not now any materials to make more; and we further precaution you that we do not mean to encourage the future introduction of tea into the Colony. Should you, gentlemen, and the Congress, perceive force in what we have just now hinted to you, we humbly conceive it would be proper for the Congress to refer our determination in general terms to certain petitions which have, as we are informed, been presented to them by those who have quantities of tea in their possession.

The prudence, the reason, the policy of making provision which will prevent those gentlemen from being influenced by the strong temptation to a clandestine sale, with many other considerations to the same effect, which will naturally arise in your minds, we modestly forbear to mention, but beg leave to assure you, gentlemen, that with the highest deference to the superiour judgment of the Continental Congress, we are your most obedient humble servants. By order.

To the New-York Delegates in the Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President, and transmitted.

A draught of a Letter to the Delegates of this Colony at the Continental Congress, on the subject of Flaxseed, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 28, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: As considerable quantities of Flaxseed will, in all probability, be ready for shipping long before the tenth of September next, we submit it to the Congress whether it will not be proper to inhibit the exportation of that article immediately.

We are, Gentlemen, respectfully, your most obedient humble servants.

To the New-York Delegates in Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President and transmitted.

A draught of a Letter to the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, in answer to his Letter of the twenty-fifth instant, received this day, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 28, 1775.

SIR: We have received your letter of the twenty-fifth instant, requesting that this Congress will furnish Colonel Hinman's Troops at Ticonderoga with tents. Convinced of the absolute necessity of such supply, and of the inability of your Colony to furnish it, although our own Troops will soon want them, and we are in doubt whether we shall be able to get materials to make others, yet we shall take care to send up the tents with all possible despatch, expecting that, as they are taken on account of your Colony, you will remit us the money to pay for them, and some other expenses incurred for your Colony, of which we shall send you an account.

We are, Sir, your very humble servants.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Governour of the Colony of Connecticut.

P. S. We supplied General Wooster with upwards of two hundred tents, made of the very best materials.

A draught of a Letter to Wolvert Acker and Samuel Brewster, Chairmen of the Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, July 28, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: John Morrell, Adam Patrick, and Isaiah Purdy, are liberated from their confinement upon their contrition and promises of amendment. You will therefore endeavour to prevent any injuries to their persons or property, and at the same time, if you think it necessary, we recommend it to you to take security for their keeping of the peace, which may be done according to the common course of the law; at the same time, if you shall be of opinion that the peace and safety of the country cannot otherwise be preserved, you will take from them all arms of offence. But this, as it is a punishment in its nature, ought to be inflicted only with the utmost caution, and therefore we recommend to you the utmost deliberation and tenderness on this occasion.

We are, Gentlemen, your humble servants. By order.

To Messrs. Wolvert Acker and Samuel Brewster, Chairmen of the Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor Precincts.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President, and transmitted.

John Morrell, Adam Patrick, and Isaiah Purdy, being brought to the Bar of this Congress, were informed that the Congress had wrote a Letter to the Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor, to take securities of the peace of them, and to disarm them if they thought proper, and that the Letter should be sent by Mr. Robert Boyd. They were then admonished by the President of their past imprudent conduct, of the evils thereof to society, and the dangers they had run, and charged to behave in such manner for the future, as to give no offence or uneasiness to their neighbours or any others, and were then discharged.

The Congress adjourned to five o'clock this afternoon.

Die Veneris, 5 ho. P. M., July 28, 1775.

Mr. Beekman and Mr. Cortelyou reported, that in obedience to the order of the Committee of Safety, they had been with Andrew Ward, Jun., Lieutenant-Colonel, and Captain James Arnold, two officers appointed by General Wooster for that purpose, to view and estimate what damages had been done to the ground and fencing, &c., of Mr. Nicholas Herring, on which the Connecticut Troops were lately encamped. That they estimate the damages which the said Nicholas Herring has sustained in his land, fences, orchard, &c., by the said Troops, together with the use of the said land, at eighty Pounds; and that the said Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Ward, and Captain James Arnold, had signed a certificate and estimate of the said damages, and agreed to allow the same; which certificate and allowance being read and filed, is in the words following, to wit:

Per same hand I received a letter from Colonel Hinman, at Ticonderoga, in which he says, 'there are many things which the act of Assembly provides for the soldiers which they never have as yet received, which occasions murmurings and discontents, and much weakens my authority among them' Copy of the act of Assembly has been forwarded some time ago to the Provincial Convention of New-York. Our Commissary, Mr. Elisha Phelps, has also a copy. If New-York does not supply our Troops, as they have a right to expect, this Colony must fulfil their engagements themselves.

"I pray your interposition in this matter."

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

Extract of a Letter, dated TICONDEROGA, JULY 21, 1775, from Major-General SCHUYLER to the Continental Congress.

"I enclose you a copy of a letter I have just received from Governour Trumbull. I am very sorry that the Colony of Connecticut has made such large allowance for the daily subsistence of the men. It is difficult and expensive to procure the things here which they are to have agreeable to the law of their Colony, and, what is worse, other Troops that may join will certainly expect the like allowance, and a discrimination cannot be made in favour of the Troops of any particular Colony.

"A resolve of Congress what shall be the Continental allowance, and that no Colony shall send their Troops any thing more than what shall be prescribed, would settle the matter, and prevent that jealousy which will otherwise take place."

A Letter from General Schuyler, of the 22d day of July, was read and filed.

And it being highly imprudent at this critical juncture, to permit any gentleman under the influence of the British Ministry to proceed to that post to exercise those offices, who might prejudice the Indians against the inhabitants of the United Colonies,

Resolved, That the said Captain Patrick Sinclair shall not be at present permitted to proceed to Missilimacana.

And Ordered, That the said Patrick Sinclair go to any part of Suffolk County, on Nassau Island, and reside there, on his giving his promise parole on his honour that he will not take any part in the present unhappy controversy between Great Britain and the United Colonies; and that he will not depart from, or go out of such part of the said County of Suffolk, without permission of the Continental Congress, or of this or some future Provincial Congress, until the present unhappy controversy between Great Britain and the Colonies shall be determined.

Ordered, That this Resolution be immediately made publick, not doubting but that the good inhabitants of this Colony will duly assist and support this Congress in detecting, convicting, and bringing to condign punishment all such factious offenders, as disturbers of the publick peace.

Ordered, That the Committee of the City of New-York be requested to send for any such persons to appear before them as they shall think proper to examine; and that they take examinations and every other such measure as they shall devise or think proper, to discover the persons who sawed and destroyed the Boat lately ordered to be built for the use of His Majesty's Ship Asia; and that they report their proceedings and discoveries therein to this Congress, with all convenient speed.

Three of the Delegates of this Colony in Continental Congress informed this Congress that they have received a sum of Money from a particular friend, which they will lend to this Congress for a few days, on receiving security for the same.

Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esquire, the President of this Congress, receive from the said Delegates such sum as they can lend, and give his note or obligation for the same; and Ordered, That Mr. Livingston pay Four Thousand Pounds of that money to the Colonels of the respective Regiments, or for their use, in such proportion as he shall think expedient; and that he pay the residue thereof to Mr. Joseph Hallett.

Ordered, That one of the Secretaries write a Letter to Charles Thomson, Esquire, Secretary of the Continental Congress, requesting of him a certified copy of the rates of the pay of the Troops in the Continental Army, from a Colonel downwards.

FOR THE PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

In Provincial Congress, CAMBRIDGE, DEC. 5, 1774.

Resolved, That the Proceedings of the American Continental Congress, held at Philadelphia, on the fifth day of September last, and reported by the honourable Delegates from this Colony, have, with the deliberation due to their high importance, been considered by us; and the American Bill of Rights, therein contained, appears to be formed with the greatest ability and judgment, to be founded on the immutable laws of nature and reason, the principles of the English Constitution, and the respective Charters and Constitutions of the Colonies, and to be worthy of their most vigorous support, as essentially necessary to liberty; likewise the ruinous and iniquitous measures, which, in violation of these rights, at present convulse and threaten destruction to America, appear to be clearly pointed out, and judicious plans adopted for defeating them.

Resolved, That the most grateful acknowledgments are due to the truly honourable and patriotick Members of the Continental Congress, for their wise and able exertions in the cause of American liberty; and this Congress, in their own names, and in behalf of this Colony, do hereby, with the utmost sincerity, express the same.

Resolved, That the Hon. John Hancock, the Hon. Thomas Cushing, Esquires, Mr. Samuel Adams, John Adams, and Robert Treat Paine, Esquires, or any three of them, be, and they are hereby appointed and authorized to represent this Colony, on the tenth of May next, or sooner if necessary, at the American Congress, to be held at Philadelphia, with full power, with the Delegates from the other American Colonies, to concert, agree upon, direct and order such further measures as shall to them appear to be best calculated for the recovery and establishment of American rights and liberties, and for restoring harmony between Great Britain and the Colonies.

Resolved, That the Honourable Henry Middleton, Esq., Thomas Lynch, Christopher Gadsden, John Rutledge, and Edward Rutledge, Esquires, or any three of them, be, and they are hereby appointed and authorized to represent this Colony on the tenth day of May next, or sooner if necessary, at the American Congress, to be held at Philadelphia or elsewhere, with full power to concert, agree upon, direct, and order such further measures as, in the opinion of the said Deputies, and the Delegates of the other American Colonies to be assembled, shall appear to be necessary for the recovery and establishment of American rights and liberties, and for restoring harmony between Great Britain and her Colonies.

Upon motion, Resolved, That the thanks of the Congress be given to the Reverend Mr. Duché, for performing Divine Service, agreeable to the desire of the Congress, and for his excellent Prayer, so well adapted to the present occasion.

Ordered, That Mr. Bland, Mr. Willing, and Mr. Sullivan, be a Committee to wait upon Mr. Duché, and return the thanks of the Congress agreeable to the above Resolution.

Upon motion,

Resolved, That the Doors be kept shut during the time of business, and that the Members consider themselves under the strongest obligations of honour to keep the Proceedings secret, until the majority shall direct them to be made publick.

A Circular Letter from the Agents, William Bolla, B. Franklin, and Arthur Lee, Esquires, directed to the Speakers of the several Assemblies, with sundry papers therein referred to, were laid before the Congress and read; the Letter is as follows:

"London, February 5, 1775.

"SIR: Our last letter informed you that the King had declared his intentions of laying the Petition before his two Houses of Parliament. It has accordingly been laid before each House, but undistinguished among a variety of letters and other papers from America.

"A motion made by Lord Chatham, to withdraw the Troops from Boston, as the first step towards a conciliating plan, was rejected; and the Ministry have declared in both Houses the determination to enforce obedience to all the late laws. For this purpose, we understand, that three regiments of foot, one of dragoons, seven hundred marines, six sloops of war, and two frigates, are now under orders for America.

"We think it proper to inform you, that your cause was well defended by a considerable number of good and wise men in both Houses of Parliament, though far from being a majority; and that many of the commercial and manufacturing parts of the nation, concerned in the American trade, have presented, or, as we understand, are preparing to present, petitions to Parliament, declaring their great concern for the present unhappy controversies with America, and praying expressly, or in effect, for healing measures, as the proper means of preserving their commerce, now greatly suffering or endangered. But the treatment the petitions, already presented, have hitherto received, is such as, in our opinion, can afford you no reliance on present relief through their means.

"As soon as we learnt that the petition of the Congress was before the House of Commons, we thought it our duty to support it, if we might be permitted so to do, as there was no other opportunity for the numerous inhabitants of the Colonies to be heard in defence of their rights: accordingly we joined in a petition for that purpose. Sir George Savile kindly undertook to present it; but, on previously opening the purport of it, as the order is, a debate arose on the propriety of receiving it, and on a division, it was rejected by a great majority.

"The following extract of a letter from General Gage to Lord Dartmouth, as laid before Parliament, we think it our duty to transmit, viz:

"December 15, 1774.—Your Lordship's idea of disarming certain Provinces, would doubtless be consistent with prudence and safety, but it neither is, nor has been practicable, without having recourse to force, and being masters of the Country."

"It was thrown out in debate by a principal member of Administration, that it would be proper to alter the Charters of Connecticut and Rhode-Island.

"Enclosed, we send you a copy of the Resolutions passed in a Committee of the whole House, on Thursday last, which are to be reported on Monday. It is said that these Resolutions are to be the foundation of several bills to be brought in, but the purport of those bills we have not yet learnt with sufficient certainty.

"We send you, likewise, a copy of Lord Chatham's first motion in the House of Lords, and of his plan of a bill for settling the troubles between Great Britain and the Colonies; both of which were rejected on the first reading.

"With great respect, we are, Sir, your most obedient humble servants,

"WILLIAM BOLLAN,

"BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,

"ARTHUR LEE."*

[* PAPERS ACCOMPANYING THE LETTER OF THE AGENTS, DATED LONDON, FEBRUARY 5, 1775, SUBMITTED TO CONGRESS THIS DAY.]

Circular Letter from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governours of the several BRITISH Colonies in AMERICA.

WHITEHALL, January 5, 1775.

SIR: Certain persons styling themselves Delegates of His Majesty's Colonies in America, having presumed, without His Majesty's authority or consent, to assemble together at Philadelphia, in the months of September and October last, and having thought fit, among other unwarrantable proceedings, to resolve that it will be necessary that another Congress should be held in the same place, on the 10th of May next, unless redress for certain pretended grievances be obtained before that time, and to recommend that all the Colonies in North America should choose Deputies to attend such Congress; I am commanded by the King to signify to you His Majesty's pleasure, that you do use your utmost endeavours to prevent any such appointment of Deputies within the Colony under your government; and that you do exhort all persons to desist from such unwarrantable proceedings, which cannot but be highly displeasing to the King.

I am, Sir, &c.

DARTMOUTH.

Lord CHATHAM's Motion, January 20, 1775.

That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty, most humbly to advise and beseech His Majesty, that in order to open the way towards a happy settlement of the dangerous troubles in America, by beginning to allay ferments and soften animosities there; and above all, for preventing in the meantime any sudden and fatal catastrophe at Boston, now suffering under daily irritation of an Army before their eyes, posted in their Town; it may graciously please His Majesty, that immediate orders may be despatched to General Gage, for removing His Majesty's forces from the Town of Boston, as soon as the rigour of the season and other circumstances, indispensable to the safety and accommodation of the said Troops, may render the same practicable.

Resolution of a Committee of the Whole House (of Commons.)

February 2, 1775.—To be reported the Monday following:

That it is the opinion of this Committee, that an humble Address be presented to His Majesty, to return His Majesty our most humble thanks for having been graciously pleased to communicate to this House the several papers relating to the present state of the British Colonies in America, which, by His Majesty's command, have been laid before this House; [and from which, after taking them into our most serious consideration, we find, that a part of His Majesty's subjects in the Province of Massachusetts-Bay have proceeded so far to resist the authority of the supreme Legislature, that a rebellion at this time actually exists within the said Province; and we see with the utmost concern that they have been countenanced and encouraged by unlawful combinations and engagements, entered into by His Majesty's subjects in several of the other Colonies, to the injury and oppression of many of their innocent fellow-subjects, resident within the Kingdom of Great Britain, and the rest of His Majesty's dominions. This conduct on their part appears to us the more inexcusable, when we consider with how much temper His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament have acted in support of the Laws and Constitution of Great Britain, to declare that we can never so far desert the trust reposed in us, as to relinquish any part of the sovereign authority over all His Majesty's dominions, which by law is vested in His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament; and that the conduct of many persons in several of the Colonies, during the late disturbances, is alone sufficient to convince us how necessary this power is, for the protection of the lives and fortunes of all His Majesty's subjects; that we ever have been, and always shall be ready to pay attention and regard to any real grievances of any of His Majesty's subjects which shall in a dutiful and constitutional manner be laid before us; and whenever any of the Colonies shall make a proper application to us, we shall be ready to afford them every just and reasonable indulgence. But that at the same time we consider it as our indispensable duty humbly to beseech His Majesty, that His Majesty

Mr. J. Hancock laid before the Congress a Letter from the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts-Bay, together with certain Resolutions formed by said Congress, and a copy of a Letter sent by said Congress to their Agent in England, and an Address to the Inhabitants of Great Britain on the late engagement between the Troops under Gen. Gage and the inhabitants of Massachusetts-Bay; also, a number of Depositions, duly attested, relative to the commencement of hostilities; all of which were read, and are as follow:

"In Provincial Congress, Watertown, May 3, 1775.

"To the Honourable AMERICAN Continental Congress, to be convened at PHILADELPHIA on the 10th of MAY instant.

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The Congress of this Colony, impressed with the deepest concern for their Country, under the present critical and alarming state of its publick affairs, beg leave, with the utmost submission, whilst acting in support of the cause of America, to request the direction and assistance of your respectable Assembly.

"The enclosed packet, containing copies of the depositions which we have despatched for London,† also an address to the inhabitants of Great Britain,‡ and a letter to our Colony agent, Benjamin Franklin, Esq.,§ are humbly submitted to your consideration.

"The sanguinary zeal of the Ministerial Army to ruin and destroy the inhabitants of this Colony, in the opinion of this Congress hath rendered the establishment of an Army indispensably necessary; we have accordingly passed an unanimous resolve for thirteen thousand six hundred men will take the most effectual measures to enforce due obedience to the laws and authority of the supreme Legislature; and that we beg leave in the most solemn manner to assure His Majesty that it is our fixed resolution, at the hazard of our lives and properties, to stand by His Majesty against all rebellious attempts in the maintenance of the just rights of His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament.] Ayes 296, noes 106.

Amendment proposed, to leave out from the first [and] to the end of the question, and insert, "to assure His Majesty, that in order to fix the true dignity of his Crown and the authority of Parliament on a sure foundation, we shall endeavour to recover the hearts of his subjects in America, too many of whom are unhappily alienated from their usual affection to their Mother Country, by endeavouring to remove all those causes of jealousy and apprehension which have arisen from an unfortunate management of His Majesty's affairs, and from acts of the last Parliament made without sufficient information of the true state of America."

Question put, that the words proposed to be left out, stand part of this question: ayes 304, noes 105.

Whereas, by an Act 6 George III. it is declared that Parliament has full power and authority to make Laws and Statutes to bind the people of the Colonies in all cases whatsoever:

And whereas, reiterated complaints, and most dangerous disorders have grown, touching the right of Taxation, claimed and exercised over America, to the disturbance of peace and good order there, and to the actual interruption of the due intercourse from Great Britain and Ireland to the Colonies, deeply affecting the navigation, trade, and manufactures of this Kingdom and of Ireland, and announcing further an interruption of all exports from the said Colonies to Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Islands in America:

Now, for the prevention of these ruinous mischiefs, and in order to an equitable, honourable and lasting settlement of claims not sufficiently ascertained and circumscribed, may it please your most excellent Majesty that it may be declared, and be it declared by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the Colonies of America have been, are, and of right ought to be dependant upon the imperial Crown of Great Britain, and subordinate unto the British Parliament; and that the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, had, hath, and of right ought to have, full power and authority to make laws and statutes of sufficient force and validity to bind the people of the British Colonies in America, in all matters touching the general weal of the whole dominion of the imperial Crown of Great Britain, and beyond the competency of the local representative of a distinct Colony; and most especially an indubitable and indispensable right to make and ordain laws for regulating Navigation and Trade throughout the complicated system of British Commerce; the deep policy of such prudent acts, upholding the guardian Navy of the whole British Empire; and that all subjects in the Colonies are bound in duty and allegiance, duly to recognise and obey (and they are hereby required so to do) the supreme legislative authority and superintending power of the Parliament of Great Britain as aforesaid.

And whereas, in a Petition from America to His Majesty it has been represented that the keeping a Standing Army within any of the Colonies, in time of peace, without the consent of the respective Provincial Assembly there, is against law: Be it declared by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, that the Declaration of Rights, at the ever-glorious Revolution, namely, "that the raising and keeping a Standing Army within the Kingdom, in time of peace, unless it be by consent of Parliament, is against law," having reference only to the consent of the Parliament of Great Britain, the legal, constitutional, and hitherto unquestioned prerogative of the Crown, to send any part of such Army, so lawfully kept, to any of the

to be forthwith raised by this Colony; and proposals are made by us to the Congress of New-Hampshire, and Governments of Rhode-Island and Connecticut Colonies, for furnishing men in the same proportion.

"The sudden exigency of our publick affairs precluded the possibility of waiting for your direction in these important measures; more especially as a considerable re-enforcement from Great Britain is daily expected in this Colony, and we are now reduced to the sad alternative of defending ourselves by arms, or submitting to be slaughtered.

"With the greatest deference, we beg leave to suggest, that a powerful Army, on the side of America, hath been considered by this Congress as the only means left to stem the rapid progress of a tyrannical Ministry. Without a force superiour to our enemies, we must reasonably expect to become the victims of their relentless fury. With such a force, we may still have hopes of seeing an immediate end put to the inhuman ravages of mercenary troops in America, and the wicked authors of our miseries brought to condign punishment, by the just indignation of our brethren in Great Britain.

"We hope that this Colony will at all times be ready to spend and be spent in the cause of America. It is, nevertheless, a misfortune greatly operating to its disadvantage, that it has a great number of seaport Towns, exposed to the approach of the enemy by sea; from many of which the inhabitants have removed, and are removing their families and effects, to avoid destruction from ships of war. These, we apprehend, will be generally distressed from want of subsistence, and disabled from contributing aid for British dominions and possessions, whether in America or elsewhere, as His Majesty, in the due care of his subjects, may judge necessary for the security and protection of the same; cannot be rendered dependant upon the consent of a Provincial Assembly in the Colonies, without a most dangerous innovation, and derogation from the dignity of the imperial Crown of Great Britain. Nevertheless, in order to quiet and dispel groundless jealousies and fears, be it hereby declared, that no military force, however raised and kept according to law, can ever be lawfully employed to violate and destroy the just rights of the people.

Moreover, in order to remove for ever all causes of pernicious discords, and in due contemplation of the vast increase of possessions and population in the Colonies, and having at heart to render the condition of so great a body of industrious subjects there more and more happy, by the sacredness of property and of personal liberty; and of more extensive and lasting utility to the parent Kingdom, by indissoluble ties of mutual affection, confidence, trade, and reciprocal benefits; be it declared and enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and it is hereby declared and enacted by the authority of the same, that no tallage, tax, or other charge for His Majesty's revenue shall be commanded or levied from British freemen in America, without common consent, by act of Provincial Assembly there, duly convened for that purpose.

And it is hereby further declared and enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That it shall and may be lawful for Delegates from the respective Provinces, lately assembled at Philadelphia, to meet in General Congress at the said Philadelphia, on the ninth day of May next, ensuing, in order then and there to take into consideration the making due recognition of the supreme legislative authority and superintending power of Parliament over the Colonies, as aforesaid.

And moreover, may it please your most excellent Majesty, that the said Delegates to be in Congress assembled, in manner aforesaid, may be required, and the same are hereby required, by the King's Majesty, sitting in his Parliament, to take into consideration (over and above the usual charge for support of civil Government in the respective Colonies) the making a free grant to the King, his heirs and successors, of a certain perpetual revenue, subject to the disposition of the British Parliament, to be by them appropriated as they in their wisdom shall judge fit, to the alleviation of the national debt. No doubt being had, but this just, free aid, will be in such honourable proportion as may seem meet and becoming from great and flourishing Colonies towards a Parent Country labouring under the heaviest burdens, which (in no inconsiderable part) have been willingly taken upon ourselves and posterity, for the defence, extension, and prosperity of the Colonies.

And to this great end, be it further hereby declared and enacted, that the General Congress (to meet at Philadelphia as aforesaid) shall be, and is hereby authorized and empowered (the Delegates composing the same being first sufficiently furnished with powers from their respective Provinces for this purpose) to adjust and fix these partitions and quotas of the several charges to be borne by each Province respectively towards the general contributory supply; and this in such fair and equitable measure as may best suit the abilities and due convenience of all. Provided always, that the powers for fixing the said quotas, hereby given to the Delegates from the old Provinces composing the Congress, shall not extend to the new Provinces of East and West Florida, Georgia, Nova-Scotia, St. John's, and Canada; the circumstances and abilities of the said Provinces being referred to the wisdom of Parliament in their due time.

And in order to afford necessary time for mature deliberation in America, be it hereby declared, that the provisions for ascertaining and fixing the exercise of the right of taxation in the Colonies, as agreed and expressed by this present act, shall not be in force, or have any operation, until the Delegates to be in Congress assembled, sufficiently authorized and empowered by their respective Provinces to this end, shall, as an supporting the forces of the Colony; but we have the greatest confidence in the wisdom and ability of the Continent to support us, so far as it shall appear necessary for supporting the common cause of the American Colonies.

"We also enclose several Resolves for empowering and directing our Receiver-General to borrow the sum of one hundred thousand Pounds, lawful money, and to issue his notes for the same; it being the only measure which we could have recourse to, for supporting our forces. And we request your assistance in rendering our measures effectual, by giving our notes a currency through the Continent.

"JOSEPH WARREN, President pro tem."

The Papers enclosed and referred to in the above, are as follow:

"In Provincial Congress, Watertown, May 3, 1775.

"Resolved, That the Receiver-General be, and hereby is empowered to borrow the sum of One Hundred Thousand Pounds, lawful money, and issue Colony security for the same, payable, with annual interest at six per cent., June 1, 1777, and that the Continental Congress be desired to recommend to the several Colonies to give a currency to such securities.

"A true extract from the minutes:

"SAMUEL FREEMAN, Secretary pro tem."

"In Provincial Congress, Watertown, May 3, 1775.

"Resolved, That the Securities given by the Receiver-General for the Moneys borrowed by him, in pursuance of the foregoing Resolve, be in the form following, viz:

indispensable condition, have duly recognized the supreme legislative authority and superintending power of the Parliament of Great Britain, over the Colonies as aforesaid. Always understood, that the free grant of an aid, as heretofore required and expected from the Colonies, is not to be considered as a condition of redress, but as a just testimony of their affection.

And whereas, divers acts of Parliament have been humbly represented in a Petition to His Majesty from America, to have been found grievous, in whole or in part, to the subjects of the Colonies, be it hereby declared by the King's most, &c., &c., that the powers of Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Courts in America shall be restrained within their ancient limits, and the trial by jury in all civil cases, where the same may have been abolished, restored; and that no subject in America shall, in capital cases, be liable to be indicted and tried for the same in any place out of the Province wherein such offence shall be alleged to have been committed; nor be deprived of a trial by his peers of the vicinage. Nor shall it be lawful to send persons indicted for murder in any Province of America, to another Colony, or to Great Britain for trial.

And it is hereby declared and enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all and every the said acts, or so much thereof as are represented to have been found grievous, namely, the several Acts of the 4 Geo. III. ch. 15 and ch. 34: 5 Geo. III. ch. 25: 6 Geo. III. ch. 52: 7 Geo. III. ch. 41 and ch. 46: 8 Geo. III. ch. 22: 12 Geo. III. ch. 24—with the three Acts for stopping the Port and blocking up the Harbour of Boston; for altering the Charter and Government of Massachusetts-Bay; and that intituled An Act for the Better Administration of Justice, &c.; also the Act for regulating the Government of Quebeck, and the act passed in the same session relating to the quartering of Soldiers, shall be and are hereby suspended, and not to have effect or execution from the date of this act. And be it moreover hereby declared and enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all and every the before recited acts, or the parts thereof complained of, shall be, and are in virtue of this present act, finally repealed and annulled, from the day that the due recognition of the supreme legislative authority and superintending power of Parliament over the Colonies shall have been made on the part of the said Colonies.

And for the better securing the due and impartial administration of justice in the Colonies, be it declared and enacted by the King's most, &c., &c., that His Majesty's Judges in Courts of Law in the Colonies in America, to be appointed with salaries by the Crown, shall hold their offices and salaries as His Majesty's Judges in England, quandiu se bene gesserint.

And it is hereby further declared by the authority aforesaid, that the Colonies in America are justly entitled to the privileges, franchises, and immunities granted by their several Charters or Constitutions; and that the said Charters or Constitutions ought not to be invaded or resumed unless for misuser, or some legal ground of forfeiture. So shall true reconciliation avert impending calamities, and this most solemn national accord between Great Britain and her Colonies stand an everlasting monument of clemency and magnanimity in the benignant Father of his People, of wisdom and moderation in this great Nation, famed for humanity as for valour, and of fidelity and grateful affection from brave and loyal Colonies to their Parent Kingdom, which will ever protect and cherish them.

The above Plan was offered by the Earl of Chatham to the House of Lords, on Wednesday, February 1, 1775, under the title of "A Provisional Act for settling the Troubles of America, and for asserting the supreme legislative authority and superintending power of Great Britain over the Colonies;" but being opposed by the Ministry, was rejected by a great majority; the numbers being for rejecting 61, for retaining 32; so it was not suffered to lie on the table for further consideration. Yet when it is considered that in the majority were all the Ministerial Lords, with all the Scottish Lords, and the Bishops, who usually vote as the Minister bids them, the sense of that House, that is, the independent part of it, does not seem to have been greatly against the bill.

Ordered, That the Secretary have the above Depositions, and the Address to the Inhabitants of Great Britain, published.

Resolved unanimously, That the Congress will, on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America.

Ordered, That the Letter from the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts-Bay be referred to that Committee.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Friday, May 12, 1775.

The Congress met, and adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Saturday, May 13, 1775, A. M.

The Congress met according to adjournment. Present the same as yesterday, and also Mr. J. Jay, from New-York, and Thomas Stone, from Maryland.

The Congress being informed that Doctor Lyman Hall attended at the door as a Delegate from the Parish of St. John's, in the Colony of Georgia, and desired to know whether, as such, he may be admitted to this Congress;

Agreed unanimously, That he be admitted as a Delegate from the Parish of St. John's, in the Colony of Georgia, subject to such regulations as the Congress shall determine relative to his voting.

Mr. Lyman Hall being accordingly admitted, produced his Credentials, which were read and approved, and are as follow:

"To the Honourable Gentlemen of the Congress designed to be held at PHILADELPHIA, on MAY, A. D. 1775:

"The Address of the Inhabitants of the Parish of St. JOHN'S, in the Province of GEORGIA.

"GENTLEMEN: To give a particular detail of our many struggles in the cause of liberty, the many meetings thereby occasioned and held in this Parish, the endeavours we have used to induce the rest of this Province to concur with us, the attendance of our Committee on the Provincial Conventions, held at Savannah, in this Province, and particularly that of the eighteenth of January last, with their proceedings, and the reasons of our dissent from them, we think would be tedious to you, and therefore send a summary abstract, which, with the account that may be given by Lyman Hall, Esq., appointed a Delegate to represent and act for this Parish in the General Continental Congress, to be held in May next, and the testimonies of the honourable Delegates from South-Carolina, we hope will be satisfactory.

"Immediately upon our being honoured with an answer to the representation of our case transmitted to the honourable Congress which sat at Philadelphia last year, with a copy of the Association there entered into, we had a meeting, and our proceedings then and since that time will in brief appear, from the following abstracts of an Address from this Parish to the Committee of Correspondence in Charlestown, South-Carolina, which are as follow:

"St. John's, February 9, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: Herewith will be communicated to you the several steps taken by this Parish in their endeavours to conform, as near as possible, to the resolutions entered into by the other Colonies, and the particular measures now adopted for carrying into execution the Continental Association, which we embraced the earliest opportunity of acceding to, by subscribing it, on condition that trade and commerce with the other Colonies be continued to us the subscribers; and thereupon should have immediately sent to you for your approbation and indulgence, but were delayed by a summons to attend a Provincial Congress in Savannah, on the eighteenth of January last, for the purpose, as we understood, of a general association with the other Colonies, and choosing Delegates; at which time and place we attended, and acquainted the other Parishes, assembled on that occasion, that we had already acceded to the General Association, on condition as above mentioned, and earnestly requested them to do the same. Had they acceded fully to the General Association, we should have had no occasion to trouble you with this address; but as they did not, we now apply to you to admit us, the subscribers, to an alliance with you, requesting that you will allow trade and commerce to be continued to us, the same to be conducted under such regulations and restrictions as shall be consistent with the Continental Association, and which, on our part, we engage with all possible care to keep inviolate. As we of this Parish are a body detached from the rest (i. e. of this Province) by our resolutions, and sufficiently distinct by local situation, large enough for particular notice, adjoining a particular port, and in that respect capable of conforming to the General Association, if connected with you, with the same fidelity as a distant Parish of your own Province, we must be considered as comprehended within the spirit and equitable meaning of the Continental Association, and hope you will not condemn the innocent with the guilty, especially when a due separation is made between them.

"Give us leave to add only, that we wait your answer, shall be glad of your advice, and are, with esteem, Gentlemen, yours, &c."

"To which we received the following answer:

"GENTLEMEN: Your letter, accompanying sundry papers, having been laid before a very full Committee of this Colony, and undergone the most mature deliberation, I am, by their desire, to acquaint you that they have the highest sense of your arduous struggles in favour of the common cause of America, and most sincerely lament your present unhappy situation, but would recommend a continuance of your laudable exertions, and the laying a state of your case before the ensuing Continental Congress, as the only means of obtaining relief, and to put you in the situation you wish, which this Committee apprehend to be entirely out of their power to do, as it is their opinion that the Parish of St. John, being a part of the Colony of Georgia, which (by not acceding to, has violated the Continental Association) falls under the fourteenth Article of the said Association, no part of which any Committee can presume to do away, &c."

"Upon the receipt of this answer, it was seriously considered in what manner to conduct in the present situation, and proposed whether we should immediately break off all connexion and commerce with Savannah, and all other inhabitants of this Province, who have not fully acceded to the Continental Association.

"It was considered, that as we were denied commerce with any other Colony, and but one merchant among us considerable for dry goods had signed our Association, and he insufficient for a present supply, and we utterly unable at present to procure materials or manufactures for clothing among ourselves, we must, by such a resolution, become extremely miserable; it was therefore concluded, that till we could obtain trade and commerce with some other Colony, it is absolutely necessary to continue it in some respects with our own, and determined that it be carried on under the following regulations:

"1. That none of us shall, directly or indirectly, purchase any slave imported at Savannah, (large numbers of which we understand are there expected,) till the sense of the Congress shall be made known to us.

"2. That we will not trade at all with any merchant at Savannah, or elsewhere, that will not join in our associating agreement, otherwise than under the inspection of a Committee, for that purpose appointed, and for such things only as they shall judge necessary, and when they shall think there are necessary reasons for so doing.

"A Committee was then nominated and appointed to sit weekly on Thursdays, for the purposes aforesaid.

"It was then resolved, that a Delegate be sent from this Parish to the Congress, to be held at Philadelphia in May next, and that Tuesday, the twenty-first of March, be appointed for choosing one.

"On the said twenty-first of March, at a full meeting, Lyman Hall, Esq., was unanimously chosen to represent and act for the inhabitants of this Parish as a Delegate at the General Congress, to be held in Philadelphia in May next, who are determined faithfully to adhere to, and abide by the determination of him and the other honourable members of the same.

"Signed by order of the Inhabitants, by Daniel Roberts and twenty others, members of the Committee."

"Midway, St. John's Parish,

In the Province of Georgia, April 13, A. D. 1775."

A Petition from the County of Frederick, in Virginia, addressed to the Congress, was presented and read.

Agreed, That it be referred to the Committee of the Whole, which is to sit on Monday.

Monday, May 15, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

Mr. Wisner, Mr. Schuyler, Mr. Clinton, Mr. L. Morris, and Mr. R. R. Livingston, from New-York; Mr. James Wilson, from Pennsylvania, Mr. R. Goldsborough, from Maryland, appeared, and took their places as Members of the Congress. Upon motion, Agreed, That the Secretary be allowed to employ Timothy Matlack as a Clerk, he having first taken an oath or affirmation to keep secret the transactions of the Congress that may be entrusted to him, or may come to his knowledge.

The President informed the Congress that he had put into his hands this morning a Letter from Robert and John Murray, containing a number of papers, which he was desired to lay before the Congress; the purport of them he did not know, as he had not had an opportunity of reading them.

Ordered, That the President look them over before they are laid before the Congress.

The Order of the Day was then read. After some debate,

Resolved, That the Order of the Day be postponed.

Resolved nemine contradicente, That the Congress will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America.

The City and County of New-York having, through the Delegates of that Colony, applied to Congress for advice how to conduct themselves with regard to the Troops expected there, the Congress took the matter into their consideration. During their deliberations, it became necessary to take the opinion of the Congress by Colonies; upon which a question arose, whether the Delegate from the Parish of St. John's, in the Colony of Georgia, could be admitted to vote. After some debate on this question, the Delegate from that Parish arose, and after observing that the present distressful situation of American affairs had induced a necessity of this Congress, which was composed of Delegates representing whole Colonies; that as he did not represent a Colony, but only a part, he did not insist on giving a vote as a Colony, but was contented to hear and assist in the debates, and to give his vote in all cases, except when the sentiments of the Congress were taken by Colonies.

The Congress then resumed the consideration of the matter first under debate. During the debate, Sam'l Ward, Esq., one of the Delegates from Rhode-Island, appeared, and produced his Credentials, which being read, were approved, and are as follow:

"By the Honourable the General Assembly of the ENGLISH Colony of RHODE-ISLAND and PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, in NEW-ENGLAND, in AMERICA.

"To the Honourable STEPHEN HOPKINS, Esq., and the Honourable SAMUEL WARD, Esq., Greeting:

"Whereas, the General Assembly of the Colony aforesaid, have nominated and appointed you, the said Stephen Hopkins and Samuel Ward, to represent the people of this Colony in a General Congress of Representatives, from this and the other Colonies, to be holden in the City of Philadelphia on the tenth May instant: You are therefore hereby authorized to repair to the said City of Philadelphia, and there, in behalf of this Colony, to meet and join with the Commissioners or Delegates from the other Colonies, in consulting upon proper measures to obtain a repeal of the several Acts of the British Parliament, for levying taxes upon His Majesty's subjects in America without their consent, and, upon proper measures, to establish the rights and liberties of the Colonies upon a just and solid foundation, agreeable to the instructions given you by the General Assembly.

"By virtue of an Act of the General Assembly, I, Henry Ward, Esq., Secretary of the said Colony, have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said Colony, this seventh day of May, A. D. 1775, and in the fifteenth year of the reign of his most sacred Majesty George the Third, by the grace of God King of Great Britain, &c.

"HENRY WARD."

The matter under consideration being resumed, the Congress

Resolved, That it be recommended, for the present, to the inhabitants of New-York, that if the Troops, which are expected, should arrive, the said Colony act on the defensive, so long as may be consistent with their safety and security; that the Troops be permitted to remain in the Barracks so long as they behave peaceably and quietly, but that they be not suffered to erect fortifications, or take any steps for cutting off the communication between the town and country, and that if they commit hostilities, or invade private property, the inhabitants should defend themselves and their property, and repel force by force; that the warlike stores be removed from the town; that places of retreat, in case of necessity, be provided for the women and children of New-York; and that a sufficient number of men be embodied, and kept in constant readiness, for protecting the inhabitants from insult and injury.

Two Memorials, one from Samuel Shoemaker, the other from James and Drinker, merchants of this City, respecting some cargoes purchased by them, and intended for Newfoundland, but which are stopped by the Committee of this City, were laid before the Congress and read, and ordered to lie on the table.

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to consider what Posts are necessary to be occupied in the Colony of New-York, and by what number of Troops it will be necessary they should be guarded.

Upon motion, Resolved, That Mr. Washington, Mr. Lynch, Mr. S. Adams, and the Delegates from New-York, be the Committee for the above service, and that they be desired to report as speedily as possible.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow.

Tuesday, May 16, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

A Memorial from Robert and John Murray, of New-York, was laid before the Congress, and read.

Ordered, To lie on the table.

Agreeable to the Order of the Day, the Congress resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America. After some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Tilghman reported from the Committee, that they had taken the matter referred to them into their consideration, and debated upon it; but not having come to any resolution, desired him to move for leave to sit again; whereupon,

Resolved, That the Congress will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at twelve o'clock.

— Wednesday, May 17, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment; and the Order of the Day, upon motion, being postponed till to-morrow, Resolved unanimously, That all exportations to Quebeck, Nova-Scotia, the Island of St. John's, Newfoundland, Georgia, except the Parish of St. John's, and to East and West-Florida, immediately cease, and that no Provision of any kind, or other necessities, be furnished to the British Fisheries on the American Coasts, until it be otherwise determined by the Congress.

Ordered, That this be published immediately.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

— Thursday, May 18, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Hon. Stephen Hopkins, from Rhode-Island, and Patrick Henry, Esqrs., from Virginia, attended and took their seats in Congress.

Upon motion,

Resolved, That the Rules of Conduct, to be observed in debating and determining questions, laid down by the last Congress, be adopted and observed by the present Congress.

The President laid before the Congress some important intelligence he received last night, by express, from New-York, relative to the surprising and taking of Ticonderoga by a detachment from Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, which was read.

Upon motion, Agreed, That Mr. Brown, who brought the express, be called in to give an account of the disposition of the Canadians, the taking of Ticonderoga, and the importance of that Post; whereupon, he was called in, and having given the necessary information, he withdrew. The Congress taking the matter into consideration, came to the following Resolution:

Resolved, Whereas, there is indubitable evidence that a design is formed by the British Ministry of making a cruel invasion from the Province of Quebeck upon these Colonies, for the purpose of destroying our lives and liberties, and some steps have actually been taken to carry the said design into execution; and whereas, several inhabitants of the Northern Colonies, residing in the vicinity of Ticonderoga, and immediately exposed to incursions, impelled by a just regard for the defence and preservation of themselves and their Countrymen from such imminent dangers and calamities, have taken possession of that post, in which was lodged a quantity of Cannon and Military Stores that would certainly have been used in the intended invasion of these Colonies; this Congress earnestly recommend it to the Committees of the Cities and Counties of New-York and Albany, immediately to cause the said Cannon and Stores to be removed from Ticonderoga to the south end of Lake George; and, if necessary, to apply to the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, and Connecticut, for such an additional body of forces as will be sufficient to establish a strong post at that place, and effectually to secure the said Cannon and Stores, or so many of them as it may be judged proper to keep there; and that an exact inventory be taken of all such Cannon and Stores, in order that they may be safely returned, when the restoration of the former harmony between Great Britain and these Colonies, so ardently wished for by the latter, shall render it prudent and consistent with the overruling law of self-preservation.

Upon motion,

Resolved, That the Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Friday, May 19, 1775.*

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider what Posts are necessary to be occupied in the Colony of New-York, and by what number of Troops it will be proper they should be guarded, brought in their Report; which, being read, was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Congress then, agreeable to the Order of yesterday, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America. After some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward, from the Committee, reported, that they had taken the matter into consideration, but not having come to any resolution, they had desired him to move for leave to sit again to-morrow.

The Congress met according to adjournment, and, agreeable to the Order of the Day, again resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America; and after some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they had come to certain Resolutions respecting New-York, which he was desired to report; but for the rest of the business referred to them, the Committee desired him to move for leave to sit again. The Resolutions being severally read, and agreed to, are as follow, viz:

1. Resolved, That a Post be immediately taken and fortified at or near King's-Bridge, in the Colony of New-York, and that the ground be chosen with a particular view to prevent the communication between the City of New-York and the country from being interrupted by land.

2. Resolved, That a Post be also taken in the Highlands on each side of Hudson's River, and Batteries erected in such manner as will most effectually prevent any Vessels passing that may be sent to harass the inhabitants on the borders of said River; and that experienced persons be immediately sent to examine said River, in order to discover where it will be most advisable and proper to obstruct the navigation.

3. Resolved, That the Militia of New-York be armed and trained, and in constant readiness to act at a moment's warning; and that a number of Men be immediately embodied, and kept in that City, and so disposed of as to give protection to the inhabitants, in case any insult should be offered by the Troops that may land there, and to prevent any attempts that may be made to gain possession of the City, and interrupt its intercourse with the country.

4. That it be left to the Provincial Congress of New-York to determine the number of men sufficient to occupy the several Posts above-mentioned, and also that already recommended to be taken at or near Lake George, as well as to guard the City, provided the whole do not exceed the number of three thousand men, to be commanded by such officers as shall be thereunto appointed by said Provincial Congress, and to be governed by such rules and regulations as shall be established by said Congress, until farther order is taken by this Congress; provided also, that if the said Provincial Congress should be of opinion that the number proposed will not be sufficient for the several services above recommended, that the said Congress report their sentiments upon this subject to this Congress, as soon as may be.

5. That it be recommended to the said Provincial Congress, that in raising those Forces, they allow no Bounties or Clothing, and that their Pay shall not exceed the establishment of the New-England Colonies.

6. That it be further recommended to the Provincial Congress aforesaid, that the Troops be enlisted to serve until the last day of December next, unless this Congress shall direct that they be sooner disbanded.

A motion being made for an addition to the foregoing Resolutions, after some debate, the same was referred till to-morrow, to which time the Congress adjourned.

Friday, May 26, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment. A Delegate from New-Jersey laid before them a Minute from the Journals of the Assembly of that Province, together with a Resolution of the Commons of Great Britain; which were read, and are as follow, viz:

"NEW-JERSEY House of Assembly, MAY 20, 1775.

"His Excellency having laid before the House a copy of the Resolution of the honourable House of Commons of Great Britain, of the twentieth of February, 1775, containing a Plan formed for the accommodation of the unhappy differences between our Parent State and the Colonies; which plan, under the present circumstances, this House could not comply with and adopt, and yet this House being desirous of making use of all proper means to effect a reconciliation, do recommend it to their Delegates to lay the same plan before the Continental Congress, for their consideration.

"A true copy from the Journals:

"RICHARD SMITH, Clerk of Assembly."

Copy of a Resolution of the House of Commons, FEBRUARY 20, 1775.

"Resolved, That when the Governour, Council, and Assembly, or General Court, of any of His Majesty's Provinces or Colonies in America, shall propose to make provision, according to the condition, circumstances, and situations of such Province or Colony, for contributing their proportion for the common defence, (such proportion to be raised under the authority of the General Court, or General Assembly of such Province or Colony, and disposable by Parliament,) and shall engage to make provision also for the support of the Civil Government, and the administration of justice in such Province or Colony, it will be proper, if such proposal shall be approved by His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament, and for so long as such provision shall be made accordingly, to forbear, in respect of such Province or Colony, to levy any duty, tax, or assessment, or to impose any further duty, tax, or assessment, except only such duties as it may be expedient to continue to levy, or to impose, for the regulation of Commerce, the nett produce of the duties last mentioned to be carried to the account of such Province or Colony, respectively."

Ordered, That the above be referred to the Committee for taking into consideration the state of America.

The Congress resuming the consideration of the addition proposed yesterday, resolved that the following addition be made:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Congress aforesaid, to persevere the more vigorously in preparing for their defence, as it is very uncertain whether the earnest endeavours of the Congress to accommodate the unhappy differences between Great Britain and the Colonies by conciliatory measures, will be successful.

Ordered, That the above Resolves, respecting New-York, be transmitted by the President in a Letter to the Provincial Congress of New-York, and that it be particularly recommended to said Congress by the President, not to publish the foregoing Resolves, but to keep them as secret as the nature of the case requires.

Upon motion, Agreed, That Mr. Jay, Mr. S. Adams, and Mr. Deane, be a Committee to prepare and bring in a Letter to the People of Canada.

The Congress then resolved themselves into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America. After some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they had come to some Resolutions respecting the state of America, which he was desired to report, but not having finished the business referred to them, they desired him to move for leave to sit again.

The Report from the Committee being read, the Congress came into the follow Resolutions:

1. Unanimously Resolved, That His Majesty's most faithful subjects in these Colonies, are reduced to a dangerous and critical situation, by the attempts of the British Ministry to carry into execution by force of arms, several unconstitutional and oppressive Acts of the British Parliament for laying Taxes in America; to enforce the collection of those Taxes, and for altering and changing the Constitution and Internal Police of some of these Colonies, in violation of the natural and civil rights of the Colonists.

2. Unanimously, Hostilities being actually commenced in the Massachusetts-Bay, by the British Troops under the command of General Gage, and the lives of a number of the inhabitants of that Colony destroyed, the Town of Boston having not only been long occupied as a garrisoned Town in an enemy's country, but the inhabitants thereof treated with a severity and cruelty not to be justified even towards declared enemies; large re-enforcements, too, being ordered, and soon expected, for the declared purpose of compelling these Colonies to submit to the operation of the said Acts; therefore, Resolved, That for the purpose of securing and defending these Colonies, and preserving them in safety against all attempts to carry the said Acts into execution, by force of arms, these Colonies be immediately put into a state of defence.

3. Unanimously, But, as we most ardently wish for a restoration of the harmony formerly subsisting between our Mother Country and these Colonies, the interruption of which must, at all events, be exceedingly injurious to both Countries, Resolved, That with a sincere design of contributing by all the means in our power, not incompatible with a just regard for the undoubted rights and true interests of these Colonies, to the promotion of this most desirable reconciliation, an humble and dutiful Petition be presented to His Majesty.

4. Resolved, That measures be entered into for opening a negotiation, in order to accommodate the unhappy disputes subsisting between Great Britain and these Colonies, and that this be made a part of the Petition to the King.

The Congress agree that the Resolutions respecting New-York be entered unanimously, and inserted after the above.

The Congress then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their further consideration the state of America; and after some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they had proceeded farther in the business, but not having come to a conclusion, desired him to move for leave to sit again.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into farther consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Saturday, May 27, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The President laid before the Congress a Letter from the Convention of New-Jersey, which was read, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Information being given, that there is a gentleman in Town who could give the Congress a full and just account of the state of affairs in Canada,

Ordered, That he be introduced; and he was accordingly introduced. After he withdrew, the Congress, agreeable to the Order of the Day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, and after some time spent therein,

The Committee appointed to draught a Letter to the Inhabitants of Canada, informed the Committee that they had performed that service, and as there was an opportunity of sending it by a safe conveyance in a few days, they desired to have an opportunity of reporting the Letter; whereupon the President resumed the chair, and the Committee reported their Letter, which was read. After some debate, recommitted.

Upon motion, Agreed, That Mr. Washington, Mr. Schuyler, Mr. Mifflin, Mr. Deane, Mr. Morris and Mr. S. Adams, be a Committee to consider on ways and means to supply these Colonies with Ammunition and Military Stores, and to report immediately.

Upon motion, The Memorial of Robert Murray and John Murray, "desiring to be restored to their former situation with respect to their commercial privileges," was taken into consideration, and after some time spent therein,

Resolved, That where any person hath been or shall be adjudged by a Committee to have violated the Continental Association, and such offender shall satisfy the Convention of the Colony, where the offence was or shall be committed, or the Committee of the Parish of St. John's, in the Colony of Georgia, if the offence be committed there, of his contrition for his offence, and sincere resolution to conform to the Association for the future, the said Convention, or Committee of the Parish of St. John's aforesaid, may settle the terms upon which he may be restored to the favour and forgiveness of the publick, and that the terms be published.

Ordered, That this be made publick.

Resolved, That the Order of the Day be postponed till Monday.

Adjourned till Monday, at nine o'clock.

Monday, May 29, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee to whom the Letter to the Inhabitants of Canada was recommitted, brought in a draught, which was read, and approved, and is as follows:

"To the Oppressed Inhabitants of CANADA.

"FRIENDS AND COUNTRYMEN: Alarmed by the designs of an arbitrary Ministry to extirpate the rights and liberties of all America, a sense of common danger conspired with the dictates of humanity in urging us to call your attention, by our late address, to this very important object.

"Since the conclusion of the late war, we have been happy in considering you as fellow-subjects; and from the commencement of the present plan for subjugating the Continent, we have viewed you as fellow-sufferers with us. As we were both entitled by the bounty of an indulgent Creator to freedom, and being both devoted by the cruel edicts of a despotick Administration, to common ruin, we perceived the fate of the Protestant and Catholick Colonies to be strongly linked together, and therefore invited you to join with us in resolving to be free, and in rejecting, with disdain, the fetters of slavery, however artfully polished.

"We most sincerely condole with you on the arrival of that day, in the course of which the sun could not shine on a single freeman in all your extensive dominion. Be assured, that your unmerited degradation has engaged the most unfeigned pity of your sister Colonies; and we flatter ourselves you will not, by tamely bearing the yoke, suffer that pity to be supplanted by contempt.

"When hardy attempts are made to deprive men of rights bestowed by the Almighty, when avenues are cut through the most solemn compacts for the admission of despotism, when the plighted faith of Government ceases to give security to dutiful subjects, and when the insidious stratagems and manœuvres of peace become more terrible than the sanguinary operations of war, it is high time for them to assert those rights, and, with honest indignation, oppose the torrent of oppression rushing in upon them.

"By the introduction of your present form of Government, or rather present form of tyranny, you and your wives and your children are made slaves. You have nothing that you can call your own, and all the fruits of your labour and industry may be taken from you whenever an avaricious Governour and a rapacious Council may incline to demand them. You are liable by their edicts to be transported into foreign Countries to fight battles in which you have no interest, and to spill your blood in conflicts from which neither honour nor emolument can be derived: nay, the enjoyment of your very religion, on the present system, depends on a Legislature in which you have no share, and over which you have no control, and your priests are exposed to expulsion, banishment, and ruin, whenever their wealth and possessions furnish sufficient temptation. They cannot be sure that a virtuous Prince will always fill the throne; and should a wicked or careless King concur with a wicked Ministry in extracting the treasure and strength of your Country, it is impossible to conceive to what variety and to what extremes of wretchedness you may, under the present establishment, be reduced.

"We are informed you have already been called upon to waste your lives in a contest with us. Should you, by complying in this instance, assent to your new establishment, and a war break out with France, your wealth and your sons may be sent to perish in expeditions against their Islands in the West-Indies.

"It cannot be presumed that these considerations will have no weight with you, or that you are so lost to all sense of honour. We can never believe that the present race of Canadians are so degenerated as to possess neither the spirit, the gallantry, nor the courage of their ancestors. You certainly will not permit the infamy and disgrace of such pusillanimity to rest on your own heads, and the consequences of it on your children forever.

"We, for our parts, are determined to live free, or not at all; and are resolved, that posterity shall never reproach us with having brought slaves into the world.

"Permit us again to repeat that we are your friends, not your enemies, and be not imposed upon by those who may endeavour to create animosities. The taking of the fort and military stores at Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and the armed vessels on the lake, was dictated by the great law of self-preservation. They were intended to annoy us, and to cut off that friendly intercourse and communication, which has hitherto subsisted between you and us. We hope it has given you no uneasiness, and you may rely on our assurances, that these Colonies will pursue no measures whatever, but such as friendship and a regard for our mutual safety and interest may suggest.

"As our concern for your welfare entitles us to your friendship, we presume you will not, by doing us injury, reduce us to the disagreeable necessity of treating you as enemies.

"We yet entertain hopes of your uniting with us in the defence of our common liberty, and there is yet reason to believe, that should we join in imploring the attention of our Sovereign, to the unmerited and unparalleled oppressions of his American subjects, he will at length be undeceived, and forbid a licentious Ministry any longer to riot in the ruins of the rights of mankind."

Ordered, That the above Letter be signed by the President.

Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Mifflin be a Committee to get the Letter translated into the French language, and to have one thousand copies of it, so translated, printed, in order to be sent to Canada, and dispersed among the inhabitants there.

Upon motion, Resolved, That no Provisions or necessities of any kind be exported to the Island of Nantucket, except from the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, the Convention of which Colony is desired to take measures for effectually providing the said Island, upon their application to purchase the same, with as much Provision, as shall be necessary for its internal use, and no more.

The Congress deeming it of great importance to North-America that the British Fishery should not be furnished with Provisions from the Continent through Nantucket, earnestly recommend a vigilant execution of this Resolve to all Committees.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be immediately published.

As the present critical situation of the Colonies renders it highly necessary that ways and means should be devised for the speedy and secure conveyance of intelligence from one end of the Continent to the other,

Resolved, That Mr. Franklin, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Lee, Mr. Willing, Mr. S. Adams, and Mr. P. Livingston, be a Committee to consider the best means of establishing Post for conveying Letters and Intelligence through this Continent.

Resolved, That the Order of the Day be postponed till to-morrow.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Tuesday, May 30, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

A member, Mr. Willing, one of the Delegates for Pennsylvania, informed the Congress, that a gentleman, just arrived from London, had brought with him a paper, which he says he received from Lord North, and which was written, at the desire of his Lordship, by Mr. Grey Cooper, Under Secretary of the Treasury; and as the gentleman understood it to be his Lordship's desire that it should be communicated to the Congress, he had for that purpose put it into his hands. The member farther observed, that he had shewn the paper to a member, Doctor Franklin, who was well acquainted with the hand-writing of Mr. Cooper, and that he verily believes the paper brought by the gentleman was written by Mr. Cooper.

The Paper being read, is as follows:

"That it is earnestly hoped by all the real friends of the Americans, that the terms expressed in the Resolution of the 20th of February last, will be accepted by all the Colonies, who have the least affection for their King and Country, or a just sense of their own interest.

"That these terms are honourable for Great Britain, and safe for the Colonies.

"That if the Colonies are not blinded by faction, these terms will remove every grievance relative to taxation, and be the basis of a compact between the Colonies and the Mother Country.

"That the people in America ought, on every consideration, to be satisfied with them.

"That no further relaxation can be admitted.

"The temper and spirit of the Nation are so much against concessions, that if it were the intention of Administration, they could not carry the question.

"But Administration have no such intention, as they are fully and firmly persuaded that further concessions would be injurious to the Colonies as well as to Great Britain.

"That there is not the least probability of a change of Administration.

"That they are perfectly united in opinion, and determined to pursue the most effectual measures, and to use the whole force of the Kingdom, if it be found necessary, to reduce the rebellious and refractory Provinces and Colonies.

"There is so great a spirit in the Nation against the Congress, that the people will bear the temporary distresses of a stoppage of the American trade.

"They may depend on this to be true."

Agreeable to the Order of the Day, the Congress then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take under their farther consideration the state of America; and after some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they had proceeded farther in the consideration of the business referred to them, but not having yet come to a conclusion, desired him to move for leave to sit again.

Resolved, That the Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, nine o'clock.

Wednesday, May 31, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment, and, agreeable to the Order of the Day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America. After some time the President resumed the chair, and the papers received being read, and referred to the consideration of the Committee of the Whole, the Committee sat again, and after some time the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they have proceeded farther in the business recommended to them, but not yet having finished, they have desired him to move for leave to sit again.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America.

A Letter from Colonel Arnold, dated Crown Point, May 23, 1775, was laid before the Congress, informing that he had certain intelligence, that "on the 19th there were then four hundred Regulars at St. John's, making all possible preparations to cross the lake, and expected to be joined by a number of Indians, with a design of retaking Crown Point and Ticonderoga," and earnestly calling for a re-enforcement and supplies.

This Letter being taken into consideration,

Resolved, That the Governour of Connecticut be requested immediately to send a strong re-enforcement to the garrisons of Crown Point and Ticonderoga; and that so many of the Cannon and other Stores be retained as may be necessary for the immediate defence of those posts, until further order from this Congress; and that the Provincial Convention of New-York be informed of this Resolve, and desired to furnish those Troops with Provisions and other necessary stores, and to take effectual care that a sufficient number of Batteaus be immediately provided for the lakes.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be immediately transmitted in a Letter by the President, to Governour Trumbull and the Convention at New-York.

Ordered, That the President in his Letter acquaint Governour Trumbull, that it is the desire of Congress that he should appoint a person in whom he can confide to command the Forces at Crown Point and Ticonderoga.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Thursday, June 1, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider Ways and Means to supply these Colonies with Ammunition and Military Stores, brought in their Report; which was read, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Upon motion, Resolved, That it be recommended to the Government of Connecticut, or the General of the Forces of that Colony, to appoint Commissaries to receive at Albany and forward the supplies of Provisions for the Forces on Lake Champlain from the Provincial Convention of New-York; and that the said Convention use their utmost endeavours in facilitating and aiding the transportation thereof from thence to where the said Commissaries may direct.

As this Congress has nothing more in view than the defence of these Colonies,

Resolved, That no expedition or incursion ought to be undertaken or made by any Colony, or body of Colonists, against or into Canada; and that this Resolve be immediately transmitted to the Commander of the Forces at Ticonderoga.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be translated into the French language, and transmitted, with the Letter, to the inhabitants of Canada; also, Ordered, That the President transmit a copy of the above to New-York, and the other Colonies bordering on Canada.

A Petition from the Committee representing the people in that part of Augusta County, in the Colony of Virginia, on the west side of the Alleghany Mountain, was laid before the Congress, and read, intimating "fears of a rupture with the Indians, on account of Lord Dunmore's conduct," and desiring "Commissioners from the Colony of Virginia and Province of Pennsylvania, to attend a meeting of the Indians at Pittsburgh, on behalf of these Colonies;" also, a Resolve of the said Committee, in these words, namely: "That the unsettled Boundary between this Colony and the Province of Pennsylvania, is the occasion of many disputes."

Ordered, That the above be referred to the Delegates of the Colonies of Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The Congress then, agreeable to the Order of the Day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America; and after some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that they had taken the matters referred to them into consideration, but not having yet come to a conclusion, desired him to move for leave to sit again.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Friday, June 2, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The President laid before the Congress a Letter from the Provincial Convention of Massachusetts; which was read, and is as follows:

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

"In Provincial Congress, Watertown, May 16, 1775.

"Resolved, That Doctor Benjamin Church be ordered to go immediately to Philadelphia, and deliver to the President of the honourable American Congress there now sitting, the following application, to be by him communicated to the Members thereof; and the said Church is also directed to confer with the said Congress respecting such other matters as may be necessary to the defence of this Colony, and particularly the state of the Army therein."

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: That system of Colony administration, which, in the most firm, dutiful, and loyal manner, has been in vain remonstrated against by the Representative body of the United Colonies, seems still, unless speedily and vigorously opposed by the collected wisdom and force of all America, to threaten ruin and destruction to this Continent.

"For a long time past this Colony has, by a corrupt Administration in Great Britain and here, been deprived of the exercise of those powers of Government, without which a people can be neither rich, happy, or secure. The whole Continent saw the blow pending, which, if not warded off, must inevitably have subverted the freedom and happiness of each Colony. The principles of self-defence, roused in the breasts of freemen by the dread of impending slavery, caused to be collected the wisdom of America in a Congress, composed of men who, through time, must, in every land of freedom, be revered among the most faithful asserters of the essential rights of human nature.

"This Colony was then reduced to great difficulties, being denied the exercise of civil Government, according to our Charter, or the fundamental principles of the English Constitution, and a formidable Navy and Army (not only inimical to our safety, but flattered with the prospect of enjoying the fruit of our industry) were stationed for that purpose in our metropolis. The prospect of deciding the question between our Mother Country and us, by the sword, gave us the greatest pain and anxiety; but we have made all the preparation for our necessary defence, that our confused state would admit of; and as the question equally affected our sister Colonies and us, we have declined, though urged thereto by the most pressing necessity, to assume the reins of civil Government, without their advice and consent, but have hitherto borne the many difficulties and distressing embarrassments necessarily resulting from a want thereof.

"We are now compelled to raise an army, which, with the assistance of the other Colonies, we hope, under the smiles of Heaven, will be able to defend us and all America from the further butcheries and devastations of our implacable enemies. But as the sword should, in all free states, be subservient to the civil powers; and as it is the duty of the Magistrates to support it for the people's necessary defence, we tremble at having an army (although consisting of our countrymen) established here, without a civil power to provide for and control them.

"We are happy in having an opportunity of laying our distressed state before the representative body of the Continent; and humbly hope you will favour us with your most explicit advice respecting the taking up and exercising the powers of civil Government, which we think absolutely necessary for the salvation of our Country; and we shall readily submit to such a general plan as you may direct for the Colonies, or make it our great study to establish such a form of Government here, as shall not only most promote our advantage, but the union and interest of all America.

"As the Army now collecting from different Colonies is for the general defence of the rights of America, we would beg leave to suggest to your consideration the propriety of your taking the regulation and general direction of it, that the operations may more effectually answer the purposes designed. Jos. WARREN, President p. t."

The above Letter referring to Doctor Church, on motion, Ordered, To lie on the table.

Agreed, That he be introduced.

After he withdrew, an express arriving from Massachusetts-Bay, the President laid before the Congress Letters from the Conventions of that Colony and New-Hampshire; also, from Governour Trumbull; all which were read.

Upon motion, Resolved, That no Bill of Exchange, Draft, or Order of any Officer in the Army or Navy, their Agents or Contractors, be received or negotiated, or any Money supplied to them by any person in America.

That no Provisions or necessaries of any kind be furnished or supplied to, or for the use of, the British Army or Navy, in the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay; and

That no Vessel employed in transporting British Troops to America, or from one part of North America to another, or warlike Stores or Provisions for said Troops, be freighted or furnished with Provisions or any necessaries, until further orders from this Congress.

Ordered, That the above Resolves be immediately published.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Congress being informed that a Major Skene, with some other officers, were arrived last evening in a vessel from London, and were, with their papers, now in custody of the Troops of this City; that the said Major Skene has lately been appointed Governour of the Forts of Ticonderoga and Crown Point; that one of the officers, a Lieutenant, has commission in the Regular Troops in the Province of Quebeck; and moreover, that the said Skene had declared he has authority to raise a regiment in America; from all this, apprehending that the said Skene is a dangerous partisan of Administration, and that his papers may contain intelligence of Ministerial designs against America, very important to be known,

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to examine, in the presence of said Skene and the Lieutenant, all the papers in their possession:

That the Committee consist of Mr. J. Adams, Mr. Deane, and Mr. Mifflin.

That the said Committee be upon honour to conceal whatever of a private nature may come to their knowledge by such examination; and that they communicate to this Congress whatever may relate to the present dispute between Great Britain and America.

The Congress then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America. After some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported from the Committee, that not having yet completed the business referred to them, desired him to move for leave to sit again.

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, again resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into their farther consideration the state of America.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Report of the Committee on the Letter from the Convention of Massachusetts-Bay, being again read, the Congress came to the following Resolution:

Resolved, That no obedience being due to the Act of Parliament for altering the Charter of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, nor to a Governour, or a Lieutenant-Governour, who will not observe the directions of, but endeavour to subvert that Charter, the Governour and Lieutenant-Governour of that Colony are to be considered as absent, and these offices vacant; and as there is no Council there, and the inconveniences arising from the suspension of the powers of Government are intolerable, especially at a time when General Gage hath actually levied war, and is carrying on hostilities against His Majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects of that Colony; that, in order to conform, as near as may be, to the spirit and substance of the Charter, it be recommended to the Provincial Convention, to write letters to the inhabitants of the several places which are entitled to representation in Assembly, requesting them to choose such representatives, and that the Assembly, when chosen, do elect Counsellors; which Assembly and Council should exercise the powers of Government, until a Governour, of His Majesty's appointment, will consent to govern the Colony according to its Charter.

Ordered, That the President transmit a copy of the above to the Convention of Massachusetts-Bay.

Upon motion,

Resolved, That this Congress will, to-morrow, take into consideration the ways and means of raising Money.

Resolved, That the Provincial Convention of New-York be requested to convey, as soon as possible, to Providence, in Rhode-Island, or to any Port in the Government of Massachusetts-Bay, five thousand barrels of Flour for the use of the Continental Army.

Resolved, That the Committee of Correspondence at Providence, and in the Government of Massachusetts-Bay, where the said Flour may be carried, be desired to receive and forward it to the Camp before Boston as soon as may be; and to lodge such part thereof as cannot be immediately sent thither, in places of security.

Resolved, That this Congress will make provision for defraying any expense incurred for this service.

Ordered, That a copy of the above Resolves be immediately transmitted by the President to the Convention of New-York.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

That it be recommended to the Conventions and Committees of the Colonies of Virginia, North-Carolina, and South-Carolina, that they, without delay, collect the Saltpetre and Sulphur in their respective Colonies, and procure these articles to be manufactured, as soon as possible, into Gunpowder, for the use of the Continent.

That it be recommended to the several inhabitants of the United Colonies, who are possessed of Saltpetre and Sulphur, for their own use, to dispose of them for the purpose of manufacturing Gunpowder.

That the Saltpetre and Sulphur, to be collected in consequence of the above Resolves of Congress, be paid for out of the Continental Fund.

Resolved, That Mr. Paine, Mr. Lee, Mr. Franklin, Mr. Schuyler, and Mr. Johnson, be a Committee to devise ways and means to introduce the manufacture of Saltpetre in these Colonies.

The Committee appointed for preparing a Resolve for a Fast, brought in a Report; which, being read, was agreed to, as follows, viz:

As the great Governour of the world, by his supreme and universal providence, not only conducts the course of nature with unerring wisdom and rectitude, but frequently influences the minds of men to serve the wise and gracious purposes of his providential government; and it being, at all times, our indispensable duty devoutly to acknowledge his superintending providence, especially in times of impending danger and publick calamity, to reverence and adore his immutable justice as well as to implore his merciful interposition for our deliverance:

This Congress, therefore, considering the present critical, alarming, and calamitous state of these Colonies, do earnestly recommend that Thursday, the twentieth day of July next, be observed, by the inhabitants of all the English Colonies on this Continent, as a day of publick humiliation, fasting, and prayer; that we may, with united hearts and voices, unfeignedly confess and deplore our many sins, and offer up our joint supplications to the all-wise, omnipotent, and merciful Disposer of all events; humbly beseeching him to forgive our iniquities, to remove our present calamities, to avert those desolating judgments with which we are threatened, and to bless our rightful Sovereign, King George the Third, and inspire him with wisdom to discern and pursue the true interest of all his subjects, that a speedy end may be put to the civil discord between Great Britain and the American Colonies, without farther effusion of blood; and that the British Nation may be influenced to regard the things that belong to her peace, before they are hid from her eyes; that these Colonies may be ever under the care and protection of a kind Providence, and be prospered in all their interests; that the divine blessing may descend and rest upon all our civil rulers, and upon the Representatives of the people, in their several Assemblies and Conventions, that they may be directed to wise and effectual measures for preserving the union, and securing the just rights and privileges of the Colonies; that virtue and true religion may revive and flourish throughout our land; and that America may soon behold a gracious interposition of Heaven, for the redress of her many grievances, the restoration of her invaded rights, a reconciliation with the Parent State on terms constitutional and honourable to both; and that her civil and religious privileges may be secured to the latest posterity.

And it is recommended to Christians of all denominations, to assemble for publick worship, and to abstain from servile labour and recreation on said day.

Ordered, That a copy of the above be signed by the President, and attested by the Secretary, and published in the newspapers and in handbills.

raised, until further direction from this Congress; and if you shall think their numbers not adequate to the purpose of security, you may recruit them to a number you shall think sufficient, not exceeding double that of the enemy.

In all cases of vacancy occasioned by the death or removal of a Colonel, or other inferior officer, you are by brevet, or warrant under your seal, to appoint another person to fill up such vacancy, until it shall otherwise be ordered by the Provincial Convention, or the Assembly of the Colony from whence the Troops in which such vacancy happen, shall direct otherwise.

The consideration of the Articles of War being resumed, the Congress agreed to the same.

Whereas, His Majesty's most faithful subjects in these Colonies are reduced to a dangerous and critical situation, by the attempts of the British Ministry to carry into execution, by force of arms, several unconstitutional and oppressive acts of the British Parliament for laying Taxes in America, to enforce the collection of those Taxes, and for altering and changing the Constitution and internal Police of some of these Colonies, in violation of the natural and civil rights of the Colonies:

And whereas, hostilities have been actually commenced in Massachusetts-Bay, by the British Troops under the command of General Gage, and the lives of a number of the inhabitants of that Colony destroyed; the Town of Boston not only having been long occupied as a garrisoned Town in an enemy's Country, but the inhabitants thereof treated with a severity and cruelty not to be justified even towards declared enemies:

And whereas, large re-enforcements have been ordered, and are soon expected, for the declared purpose of compelling these Colonies to submit to the operation of the said acts, which hath rendered it necessary, and an indispensable duty, for the express purpose of securing and defending these Colonies, and preserving them in safety against all attempts to carry the said acts into execution, that an armed force be raised sufficient to defeat such hostile designs, and preserve and defend the lives, liberties, and immunities of the Colonists; for the due regulating and well ordering of which,

Resolved, That the following Rules and Orders be attended to, and observed by such Forces as are or may hereafter be raised for the purposes aforesaid.

ARTICLE I. ART. VII. Any Officer or Soldier who shall strike his superiour Officer, or draw, or offer to draw, or shall lift up any weapon, or offer any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, on any pretence whatsoever, or shall disobey any lawful commands of his superiour Officer, shall suffer such punishment as shall, according to the nature of his offence, be ordered by the sentence of a General Court-Martial.

And resumed the consideration of the Address to the Inhabitants of Great Britain which, after some debate, was recommitted.

The Committee, to whom the Declaration was committed, brought in the same, which being read, was taken into consideration, and being debated* by paragraphs, was approved, and is as follows:

A Declaration by the Representatives of the United Colonies of NORTH-AMERICA, now met in Congress at PHILADELPHIA, setting forth the causes and necessity of their taking up Arms.

If it was possible for men who exercise their reason, to believe that the divine Author of our existence intended a part of the human race to hold an absolute property in, and an unbounded power over others, marked out by his infinite goodness and wisdom, as the objects of a legal domination never rightfully resistible, however severe and oppressive, the inhabitants of these Colonies might at least require from the Parliament of Great Britain some evidence, that this dreadful authority over them has been granted to that body. But a reverence for our great Creator, principles of humanity, and the dictates of common sense, must convince all those who reflect upon the subject, that Government was instituted to promote the welfare of mankind, and ought to be administered for the attainment of that end. The Legislature of Great Britain, however, stimulated by an inordinate passion for a power, not only unjustifiable, but which they know to be peculiarly reprobated by the very Constitution of that Kingdom, and desperate of success in any mode of contest where regard should be had to truth, law, or right, have at length, deserting those, attempted to effect their cruel and impolitic purpose of enslaving these Colonies by violence,

* FRAGMENT OF A SPEECH MADE IN THE GENERAL CONGRESS OF AMERICA, BY ONE OF THE DELEGATES IN 1775.

The great God, Sir, who is the searcher of all things, will witness for me, that I have spoken to you from the bottom and purity of my heart. We have heard that this is an arduous consideration. And surely, Sir, we have considered it earnestly. I may think of every gentleman here, as I know of myself, that, for seven years past, this question has filled the day with anxious thought, and the night with care. The God to whom we appeal must judge us. If the grievances of which we complain did not come upon us unprovoked and unexpected, when our hearts were filled with respectful affection for our Parent State, and with loyalty to our King—let slavery, the worst of human ills, be our portion. Nothing less than seven years of insulted complaints and reiterated wrongs, could have shaken such rooted sentiments. Unhappily for us, submission and slavery are the same; and we have only the melancholy alternative left of ruin or resistance.

The last petition of this Congress to the King, contained all that our unhappy condition could suggest. It represented our grievances; implored redress, and professed our readiness to contribute for the general want, to the utmost of our abilities, when constitutionally required.

The apparently gracious reception it met with, promised us a due consideration of it; and that consideration, relief. But, alas! Sir, it seems at that moment the very reverse was intended. For it now appears, that in a very few days after this specious answer to our Agents, a circular letter was privately written by the same Secretary of State, to the Governors of the Colonies, before Parliament had been consulted, pronouncing the Congress illegal, our grievances pretended, and vainly commanding them to prevent our meeting again. Perhaps, Sir, the Ministers of a great Nation never before committed an act of such narrow policy and treacherous duplicity. They found Parliament, however, prepared to support every one of their measures.

I forbear, Sir, entering into a detail of those acts, which, from their atrociousness, must be felt and remembered forever. They are calculated to carry fire and sword, famine and desolation, through these flourishing Colonies. They cry, "havoock, and let slip the dogs of war." The extremes of rage and revenge, against the worst of enemies, could not dictate measures more desperate and destructive.

There are some people who tremble at the approach of war. They fear that it must put an inevitable stop to the further progress of these Colonies; and ruin irretrievably those benefits, which the industry of centuries has called forth, from this once savage land. I may commend the anxiety of these men, without praising their judgment.

War, like other evils, is often wholesome. The waters that stagnate corrupt. The storm that works the ocean into rage renders it salutary. Heaven has given us nothing unmixed. The rose is not without the thorn. War calls forth the great virtues and efforts which would liep in the gentle bosom of peace. Paula sepulta distat inertia celaj virtus.

† In 1774, presented last Christmas.

and have thereby rendered it necessary for us to close with their last appeal from reason to arms. Yet, however blinded that Assembly may be, by their intemperate rage for unlimited domination, so to slight justice and the opinion of mankind, we esteem ourselves bound, by obligations of respect to the rest of the world, to make known the justice of our cause.

Our forefathers, inhabitants of the Island of Great Britain, left their native land, to seek on these shores a residence for civil and religious freedom. At the expense of their blood, at the hazard of their fortunes, without the least charge to the Country from which they removed, by unceasing labour, and an unconquerable spirit, they effected settlements in the distant and inhospitable wilds of America, then filled with numerous and warlike nations of barbarians. Societies or Governments, vested with perfect Legislatures, were formed under Charters from the Crown, and a harmonious intercourse was established between the Colonies and the Kingdom from which they derived their origin. The mutual benefits of this union became in a short time so extraordinary, as to excite astonishment. It is universally confessed, that the amazing increase of the wealth, strength, and navigation of the Realm, arose from this source; and the Minister who so wisely and successfully directed the measures of Great Britain in the late war, publicly declared, that these Colonies enabled her to triumph over her enemies. Towards the conclusion of that war, it pleased our Sovereign to make a change in his Councils. From that fatal moment, the affairs of the British Empire began to fall into confusion, and gradually sliding from the summit of glorious prosperity, to which they had been advanced by the virtues and abilities of one man, are at length distracted by the convulsions that now shake it to its deepest foundations. The new Ministry finding the brave foes of Britain, though frequently defeated, yet still contending, took up the unfortunate idea of granting them a hasty peace, and of then subduing her faithful friends.

These devoted Colonies were judged to be in such a state as to present victories without bloodshed, and all the easy emoluments of statutable plunder. The uninterrupted tenour of their peaceable and respectful behaviour,

It opens resources which would be concealed under the inactivity of tranquil times. It rouses and enlightens. It produces a people of animation, energy, adventure, and greatness. Let us consult history. Did not the Grecian Republics prosper amid continual warfare? Their prosperity, their power, their splendour, grew from the all-animating spirit of war. Did not the cottages of shepherds rise into imperial Rome, the mistress of the world, the nurse of heroes, the delight of gods! through the invigorating operation of unceasing wars! Perdanna, per cædes, ab ipso duxit opes animunque ferro. How often has Flanders been the theatre of contending powers, conflicting hosts, and blood! yet what country is more flourishing and fertile? Trace back the history of our Parent State. Whether you view her arraying Angles against Danes; Danes against Saxons; Saxons against Normans; the Barons against the usurping Princes, or the civil wars of the Red and White Roses, or that between the people and the tyrant Stuart, you see her in a state of almost continual warfare. In almost every reign, to the commencement of that of Henry the VII, her peaceful bosom (in her poet's phrase) was gored with iron war. It was in the peaceful reigns of Henry VII, Henry VIII, and Charles II, that she suffered the severest extremities of tyranny and oppression. But amid her civil contentions, she flourished and grew strong. Trained in them, she sent her hardy legions forth, which planted the standard of England upon the battlements of Paris; extending her commerce and her dominion.

"Those noble English, who could entertain
With half their forces, the full power of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action."

The beautiful fabrick of her constitutional liberty was reared and cemented in blood. From this fulness of her strength those scions issued which, taking deep root in this delightful land, have reared their heads, and spread abroad their branches like the cedars of Lebanon.

Why fear we, then, to pursue through apparent evil, real good? The war upon which we are to enter is just and necessary. Iustum est bellum, ubi necessarium; et pia arma, quibus nulla, nisi in armis, relinquitur spes. It is to protect these regions, brought to such beauty through the infinite toil and hazard of our fathers and ourselves, from becoming the prey of that more desolating cruel spoiler, than war, pestilence, or famine—absolute rule and endless extortion.

Our sufferings have been great—our endurance long. Every effort of patience, complaint, and supplication has been exhausted. They seem only to have hardened the hearts of the Ministers who oppress us and double our distresses. Let us, therefore, consult how we shall defend our liberties with dignity and success. Our Parent State will then think us worthy of her, when she sees that with her liberty we inherit her rigid resolution of maintaining it against all invaders. Let us give her reason to pride herself in the relationship.

And thou, great Liberty! inspire our souls,
Make our lives happy in thy pure embrace,
Or our deaths glorious in thy just defence!

from the beginning of colonization; their dutiful, zealous, and useful services during the war, though so recently and amply acknowledged in the most honourable manner by His Majesty, by the late King, and by Parliament, could not save them from the meditated innovations. Parliament was influenced to adopt the pernicious project; and assuming a new power over them, have, in the course of eleven years, given such decisive specimens of the spirit and consequences attending this power, as to leave no doubt concerning the effects of acquiescence under it. They have undertaken to give and grant our money without our consent, though we have ever exercised an exclusive right to dispose of our own property; statutes have been passed for extending the jurisdiction of Courts of Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty beyond their ancient limits; for depriving us of the accustomed and inestimable privilege of Trial by Jury, in cases affecting both life and property; for suspending the Legislature of one of the Colonies; for interdicting all commerce to the capital of another; and for altering fundamentally the form of Government established by Charter, and secured by acts of its own Legislature, solemnly confirmed by the Crown; for exempting the "murderers" of Colonists from legal trial, and, in effect, from punishment; for erecting in a neighbouring Province, acquired by the joint arms of Great Britain and America, a despotism dangerous to our very existence; and for quartering soldiers upon the Colonists in time of profound peace. It has also been resolved in Parliament, that Colonists charged with committing certain offences, shall be transported to England to be tried.

But why should we enumerate our injuries in detail? By one statute it is declared that Parliament can "of right make laws to bind us in all cases whatsoever." What is to defend us against so enormous, so unlimited a power? Not a single man of those who assume it is chosen by us, or is subject to our control or influence; but, on the contrary, they are all of them exempt from the operation of such laws, and an American revenue, if not diverted from the ostensible purposes for which it is raised, would actually lighten their own burdens, in proportion as they increase ours. We saw the misery to which such despotism would reduce us. We, for ten years, incessantly and ineffectually besieged the Throne as supplicants; we reasoned, we remonstrated with Parliament, in the most mild and decent language.

Administration, sensible that we should regard these oppressive measures as freemen ought to do, sent over fleets and armies to enforce them. The indignation of the Americans was roused, it is true; but it was the indignation of a virtuous, loyal, and affectionate people. A Congress of Delegates from the United Colonies was assembled at Philadelphia, on the fifth day of last September. We resolved again to offer an humble and dutiful petition to the King, and also addressed our fellow-subjects of Great Britain. We have pursued every temperate, every respectful measure; we have even proceeded to break off our commercial intercourse with our fellow-subjects, as the last peaceable admonition, that our attachment to no Nation upon earth should supplant our attachment to liberty. This, we flattered ourselves, was the ultimate step of the controversy; but subsequent events have shown how vain was this hope of finding moderation in our enemies.

Several threatening expressions against the Colonies were inserted in His Majesty's Speech; our Petition, though we were told it was a decent one, and that His Majesty had been pleased to receive it graciously, and to promise laying it before his Parliament, was huddled into both Houses among a bundle of American papers, and there neglected.

The Lords and Commons, in their Address, in the month of February, said, that "a rebellion at that time actually existed within the Province of Massachusetts-Bay; and that those concerned in it had been countenanced and encouraged by unlawful combinations and engagements entered into by His Majesty's subjects in several of the other Colonies; and, therefore, they besought His Majesty, that he would take the most effectual measures to enforce due obedience to the laws and authority of the supreme Legislature. Soon after, the commercial intercourse of whole Colonies with foreign countries, and with each other, was cut off by an act of Parliament; by another, several of them were entirely prohibited from the Fisheries in the seas near their coasts, on which they always depended for their sustenance; and large re-enforcements of ships and troops were immediately sent over to General Gage.

Fruitless were all the entreaties, arguments, and eloquence of an illustrious band of the most distinguished Peers and Commoners, who nobly and strenuously asserted the justice of our cause, to stay, or even to mitigate the heedless fury with which these accumulated and unexampled outrages were hurried on. Equally fruitless was the interference of the City of London, of Bristol, and many other respectable Towns, in our favour. Parliament adopted an insidious manœuvre, calculated to divide us, to establish a perpetual auction of taxations, where Colony should bid against Colony, all of them uninformed what ransom would redeem their lives; and thus to extort from us, at the point of the bayonet, the unknown sums that should be sufficient to gratify, if possible to gratify, Ministerial rapacity, with the miserable indulgence left to us of raising, in our own mode, the prescribed tribute. What terms more rigid and humiliating could have been dictated by remorseless victors to conquered enemies? In our circumstances, to accept them, would be to deserve them.

Soon after intelligence of these proceedings arrived on this Continent, General Gage, who, in the course of the last year had taken possession of the Town of Boston, in the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, and still occupied it as a garrison, on the 19th day of April sent out from that place a large detachment of his army, who made an unprovoked assault on the inhabitants of the said Province, at the Town of Lexington, as appears by the affidavits of a great number of persons, some of whom were officers and soldiers of that detachment, murdered eight of the inhabitants, and wounded many others. From thence the troops proceeded in warlike array to the Town of Concord, where they set upon another party of the inhabitants of the same Province, killing several and wounding more, until compelled to retreat by the country people suddenly assembled to repel this cruel aggression. Hostilities, thus commenced by the British Troops, have been since prosecuted by them without regard to faith or reputation. The inhabitants of Boston, being confined within that Town by the General, their Governour, and having, in order to procure their dismissal, entered into a treaty with him, it was stipulated that the said inhabitants, having deposited their arms with their own Magistrates, should have liberty to depart, taking with them their other effects. They accordingly delivered up their arms; but in open violation of honour, in defiance of the obligation of treaties, which even savage nations esteemed sacred, the Governour ordered the arms deposited as aforesaid, that they might be preserved for their owners, to be seized by a body of soldiers; detained the greatest part of the inhabitants in the Town, and compelled the few who were permitted to retire, to leave their most valuable effects behind.

By this perfidy, wives are separated from their husbands, children from their parents, the aged and the sick from their relations and friends, who wish to attend and comfort them; and those who have been used to live in plenty, and even elegance, are reduced to deplorable distress.

The General, further emulating his Ministerial masters, by a Proclamation, bearing date on the 12th day of June, after venting the grossest falsehoods and calumnies against the good people of these Colonies, proceeds to "declare them all, either by name or description, to be rebels and traitors; to supersede the course of the common law, and instead thereof to publish and order the use and exercise of the law martial." His troops have butchered our countrymen; have wantonly burnt Charlestown, besides a considerable number of houses in other places; our ships and vessels are seized; the necessary supplies of provisions are intercepted, and he is exerting his utmost power to spread destruction and devastation around him.

We have received certain intelligence, that General Carleton, the Governour of Canada, is instigating the people of that Province, and the Indians, to fall upon us; and we have but too much reason to apprehend, that schemes have been formed to excite domestick enemies against us. In brief, a part of these Colonies now feel, and all of them are sure of feeling, as far as the vengeance of Administration can inflict them, the complicated calamities of fire, sword, and famine. We are reduced to the alternative of choosing an unconditional submission to the tyranny of irritated Ministers, or resistance by force. The latter is our choice. We have counted the cost of this contest, and find nothing so dreadful as voluntary slavery. Honour, justice, and humanity, forbid us tamely to surrender that freedom which we received from our gallant ancestors, and which our innocent posterity have a right to receive from us. We cannot endure the infamy and guilt of resigning succeeding generations to that wretchedness which inevitably awaits them, if we basely entail hereditary bondage upon them.

Our cause is just. Our union is perfect. Our internal resources are great, and, if necessary, foreign assistance is undoubtedly attainable. We gratefully acknowledge, as signal instances of the Divine favour towards us, that His providence would not permit us to be called into this severe controversy until we were grown up to our present strength, had been previously exercised in warlike operations, and possessed of the means of defending ourselves. With hearts fortified with these animating reflections, we most solemnly, before God and the world, declare, that, exerting the utmost energy of those powers which our beneficent Creator hath graciously bestowed upon us, the arms we have been compelled by our enemies to assume, we will, in defiance of every hazard, with unabating firmness and perseverance, employ for the preservation of our liberties; being, with one mind, resolved to die freemen rather than live slaves.

Lest this declaration should disquiet the minds of our friends and fellow-subjects in any part of the Empire, we assure them that we mean not to dissolve that union which has so long and so happily subsisted between us, and which we sincerely wish to see restored. Necessity has not yet driven us into that desperate measure, or induced us to excite any other nation to war against them. We have not raised armies with ambitious designs of separating from Great Britain, and establishing independent states. We fight not for glory or for conquest. We exhibit to mankind the remarkable spectacle of a people attacked by unprovoked enemies, without any imputation or even suspicion of offence. They boast of their privileges and civilization, and yet proffer no milder conditions than servitude or death.

In our own native land, in defence of the freedom that is our birth-right, and which we ever enjoyed till the late violation of it; for the protection of our property, acquired solely by the honest industry of our forefathers and ourselves, against violence actually offered, we have taken up arms. We shall lay them down when hostilities shall cease on the part of the aggressors, and all danger of their being renewed shall be removed, and not before.

With an humble confidence in the mercies of the supreme and impartial Judge and Ruler of the Universe, we most devoutly implore his divine goodness to protect us happily through this great conflict, to dispose our adversaries to reconciliation on reasonable terms, and thereby to relieve the Empire from the calamities of civil war.

On motion, Resolved, That a Letter be prepared to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Livery, of the City of London, expressing the thanks of this Congress for their virtuous and spirited opposition to the oppressive and ruinous system of Colony administration adopted by the British Ministry.

The Committee appointed to draught a Letter to the People of Great Britain, to prepare this.

The Order of the Day was postponed, and the Congress adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Friday, July 7, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee to whom the Address to the People of Great Britain was recommitted, brought in the same; which was again read, and after some debate, the farther consideration of it was deferred till to-morrow.

Order of the Day put off, and the Congress adjourned till to-morrow.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Petition to the King being engrossed, was compared at the table, and signed by the several Members.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN: We, your Majesty's faithful subjects of the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, in behalf of ourselves and the inhabitants of these Colonies, who have deputed us to represent them in General Congress, entreat your Majesty's gracious attention to this our humble petition.

The union between our Mother Country and these Colonies, and the energy of mild and just Government, produced benefits so remarkably important, and afforded such an assurance of their permanency and increase, that the wonder and envy of other nations were excited, while they beheld Great Britain rising to a power the most extraordinary the world had ever known.

Her rivals, observing that there was no probability of this happy connexion being broken by civil dissensions, and apprehending its future effects if left any longer undisturbed, resolved to prevent her receiving such continual and formidable accessions of wealth and strength, by checking the growth of those settlements from which they were to be derived.

In the prosecution of this attempt, events so unfavourable to the design took place, that every friend to the interest of Great Britain and these Colonies, entertained pleasing and reasonable expectations of seeing an additional force and exertion immediately given to the operations of the union hitherto experienced, by an enlargement of the dominions of the Crown, and the removal of ancient and warlike enemies to a greater distance.

At the conclusion, therefore, of the late war, the most glorious and advantageous that ever had been carried on by British arms, your loyal Colonists having contributed to its success by such repeated and strenuous exertions as frequently procured them the distinguished approbation of your Majesty, of the late King, and of Parliament, doubted not but that they should be permitted, with the rest of the Empire, to share in the blessings of peace, and the emoluments of victory and conquest.

While these recent and honourable acknowledgments of their merits remained on record in the Journals and acts of that august Legislature, the Parliament, undefaced by the imputation or even the suspicion of any offence, they were alarmed by a new system of statutes and regulations adopted for the administration of the Colonies, that filled their minds with the most painful fears and jealousies; and, to their inexpressible astonishment, perceived the danger of a foreign quarrel quickly succeeded by domestick danger, in their judgment of a more dreadful kind.

Nor were these anxieties alleviated by any tendency in this system to promote the welfare of their Mother Country. For though its effects were more immediately felt by them, yet its influence appeared to be injurious to the commerce and prosperity of Great Britain.

We shall decline the ungrateful task of describing the irksome variety of artifices practised by many of your Majesty's Ministers, the delusive pretences, fruitless terrors, and unavailing severities, that have, from time to time, been dealt out by them, in their attempts to execute this impolitical plan, or of tracing through a series of years past the progress of the unhappy differences between Great Britain and these Colonies, that have flowed from this fatal source.

Your Majesty's Ministers, persevering in their measures, and proceeding to open hostilities for enforcing them, have compelled us to arm in our own defence, and have engaged us in a controversy so peculiarly abhorrent to the affections of your still faithful Colonists, that when we consider whom we must oppose in this contest, and if it continues, what may be the consequences, our own particular misfortunes are accounted by us only as parts of our distress.

Knowing to what violent resentments and incurable animosities civil discords are apt to exasperate and inflame the contending parties, we think ourselves required by indispensable obligations to Almighty God, to your Majesty, to our fellow-subjects, and to ourselves, immediately to use all the means in our power, not incompatible with our safety, for stopping the further effusion of blood, and for averting the impending calamities that threaten the British Empire.

Thus called upon to address your Majesty on affairs of such moment to America, and probably to all your Dominions, we are earnestly desirous of performing this office with the utmost deference for your Majesty; and we therefore pray, that your Majesty's royal magnanimity and benevolence may make the most favourable constructions of our expressions on so uncommon an occasion. Could we represent in their full force the sentiments that agitate the minds of us your dutiful subjects, we are persuaded your Majesty would ascribe any seeming deviation from reverence in our language, and even in our conduct, not to any reprehensible intention, but to the impossibility of reconciling the usual appearances of respect with a just attention to our own preservation against those artful and cruel enemies who abuse your royal confidence and authority, for the purpose of effecting our destruction.

Attached to your Majesty's person, family, and Government, with all devotion that principle and affection can inspire; connected with Great Britain by the strongest ties that can unite societies, and deploring every event that tends in any degree to weaken them, we solemnly assure your Majesty, that we not only most ardently desire the former harmony between her and these Colonies may be restored, but that a concord may be established between them upon so firm a basis as to perpetuate its blessings, uninterrupted by any future dissensions, to succeeding generations in both countries, and to transmit your Majesty's name to posterity, adorned with that signal and lasting glory that has attended the memory of those illustrious personages, whose virtues and abilities have extricated states from dangerous convulsions, and, by securing happiness to others, have erected the most noble and durable monuments to their own fame.

We beg leave further to assure your Majesty, that notwithstanding the sufferings of your loyal Colonists during the course of this present controversy, our breasts retain too tender a regard for the kingdom from which we derive our origin, to request such a reconciliation as might, in any manner, be inconsistent with her dignity or her welfare. These, related as we are to her, honour and duty, as well as inclination, induce us to support and advance; and the apprehensions that now oppress our hearts with unspeakable grief, being once removed, your Majesty will find your faithful subjects on this Continent ready and willing at all times, as they have ever been, with their lives and fortunes, to assert and maintain the rights and interests of your Majesty, and of our Mother Country.

We therefore beseech your Majesty, that your royal authority and influence may be graciously interposed to procure us relief from our afflicting fears and jealousies, occasioned by the system before-mentioned, and to settle peace through every part of our Dominions, with all humility submitting to your Majesty's wise consideration, whether it may not be expedient, for facilitating those important purposes, that your Majesty be pleased to direct some mode, by which the united applications of your faithful Colonists to the Throne, in pursuance of their common counsels, may be improved into a happy and permanent reconciliation; and that, in the mean time, measures may be taken for preventing the further destruction of the lives of your Majesty's subjects; and that such statutes as more immediately distress any of your Majesty's Colonies, may be repealed.

For such arrangements as your Majesty's wisdom can form for collecting the united sense of your American people, we are convinced your Majesty would receive such satisfactory proofs of the disposition of the Colonists towards their Sovereign and Parent State, that the wished for opportunity would soon be restored to them, of evincing the sincerity of their professions, by every testimony of devotion becoming the most dutiful subjects, and the most affectionate Colonists.

That your Majesty may enjoy a long and prosperous reign, and that your descendants may govern your Dominions with honour to themselves and happiness to their subjects, is our sincere prayer.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Letter to the Lord Mayor, &c., reported the same; which was read.

On motion, Resolved, That the above Committee prepare a Letter to Mr. Richard Penn, and the Colony Agents by name in England.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Address to the Inhabitants of Great Britain; which being read, and debated by paragraphs, was approved, and is as follows:

The Twelve United Colonies, by their Delegates in Congress, to the Inhabitants of GREAT BRITAIN:

FRIENDS, COUNTRYMEN, AND BRETHREN! By these, and by every other appellation that may designate the ties which bind us to each other, we entreat your serious attention to this our second attempt to prevent their dissolution. Remembrance of former friendships, pride in the glorious achievements of our common ancestors, and affection for the heirs of their virtues, have hitherto preserved our mutual connexion; but when that friendship is violated by the grossest injuries; when the pride of ancestry becomes our reproach, and we are no otherwise allied than as tyrants and slaves; when reduced to the melancholy alternative of renouncing your favour or our freedom, can we hesitate about the choice? Let the spirit of Britons determine.

In a former address we asserted our rights, and stated the injuries we had then received. We hoped that the mention of our wrongs would have roused that honest indignation which has slept too long for your honour, or the welfare of the Empire. But we have not been permitted to entertain this pleasing expectation. Every day brought an accumulation of injuries, and the invention of the Ministry has been constantly exercised, in adding to the calamities of your American brethren.

After the most valuable right of legislation was infringed; when the powers assumed by your Parliament, in which we are not represented, and from our local and other circumstances cannot properly be represented, rendered our property precarious; after being denied that mode of trial to which we have long been indebted for the safety of our persons, and the preservation of our liberties; after being, in many instances, divested of those laws which were transmitted to us by our common ancestors, and subjected to an arbitrary code, compiled under the auspices of Roman tyrants; after those charters, which encouraged our predecessors to brave death and danger in every shape, on unknown seas, in deserts unexplored, amidst barbarous and inhospitable nations, were annulled; when, without the form of trial, without a public accusation, whole Colonies were condemned, their trade destroyed, their inhabitants impoverished; when soldiers were encouraged to imbrue their hands in the blood of Americans, by offers of impunity; when new modes of trial were instituted for the ruin of the accused, where the charge carried with it the horrors of conviction; when a despotick Government was established in a neighbouring Province, and its limits extended to every of our frontiers; we little imagined that any thing could be added to this black catalogue of unprovoked injuries: but we have unhappily been deceived, and the late measures of the British Ministry fully convince us that their object is the reduction of these Colonies to slavery and ruin.

To confirm this assertion, let us recall your attention to the affairs of America, since our last address. Let us combat the calumnies of our enemies; and let us warn you of the dangers that threaten you in our destruction. Many of your fellow-subjects, whose situation deprived them of other support, drew their maintenance from the sea; but the deprivation of our liberty being insufficient to satisfy the resentment of our enemies, the horrors of famine were superadded, and a British Parliament, who, in better times, were the protectors of innocence and the patrons of humanity, have, without distinction of age or sex, robbed thousands of the food which they were accustomed to draw from that inexhaustible source, placed in their neighbourhood by the benevolent Creator.

Another act of your Legislature shuts our ports, and prohibits our trade with any but those states from whom the great law of self-preservation renders it absolutely necessary we should at present withhold our commerce. But this act (whatever may have been its design) we consider rather as injurious to your opulence than our interest. All our commerce terminates with you; and the wealth we procure from other Nations, is soon exchanged for your superfluities. Our remittances must then cease with our trade; and our refinements with our affluence. We trust, however, that laws which deprive us of every blessing but a soil that teems with the necessaries of life, and that liberty which renders the enjoyment of them secure, will not relax our vigour in their defence.

We might here observe on the cruelty and inconsistency of those, who, while they publicly brand us with reproachful and unworthy epithets, endeavour to deprive us of the means of defence, by their interposition with foreign Powers, and to deliver us to the lawless ravages of a merciless soldiery. But happily we are not without resources; and though the timid and humiliating applications of a British Ministry should prevail with foreign Nations, yet industry, prompted by necessity, will not leave us without the necessary supplies.

We could wish to go no further, and, not to wound the ear of humanity, leave untold those rigorous acts of oppression, which are daily exercised in the Town of Boston, did we not hope, that by disclaiming their deeds and punishing the perpetrators, you would shortly vindicate the honour of the British name, and re-establish the violated laws of justice.

That once populous, flourishing and commercial Town is now garrisoned by an Army sent not to protect, but to enslave its inhabitants. The Civil Government is overturned, and a Military Despotism erected upon its ruins. Without law, without right, powers are assumed unknown to the Constitution. Private property is unjustly invaded. The inhabitants, daily subjected to the licentiousness of the soldiery, are forbid to remove in defiance of their natural rights, in violation of the most solemn compacts. Or if, after long and wearisome solicitation, a pass is procured, their effects are detained, and even those who are most favoured, have no alternative but poverty or slavery. The distress of many thousand people, wantonly deprived of the necessaries of life, is a subject on which we would not wish to enlarge.

Yet we cannot but observe, that a British fleet (unjustified even by acts of your Legislature) are daily employed in ruining our commerce, seizing our ships, and depriving whole communities of their daily bread. Nor will a regard for your honour permit us to be silent, while British Troops sully your glory, by actions which the most inveterate enmity will not palliate among civilized Nations, the wanton and unnecessary destruction of Charlestown, a large, ancient, and once populous Town, just before deserted by its inhabitants, who had fled to avoid the fury of your soldiery.

If you still retain those sentiments of compassion by which Britons have ever been distinguished, if the humanity which tempered the valour of our common ancestors has not degenerated into cruelty, you will lament the miseries of their descendants.

To what are we to attribute this treatment? If to any secret principle of the Constitution, let it be mentioned; let us learn that the Government we have long revered, is not without its defects, and that while it gives freedom to a part, it necessarily enslaves the remainder of the Empire. If such a principle exists, why for ages has it ceased to operate? Why at this time is it called into action? Can no reason be assigned for this conduct? Or must it be resolved into the wanton exercise of arbitrary power? And shall the descendants of Britons tamely submit to this? No, Sirs! we never will. While we revere the memory of our gallant and virtuous ancestors, we never can surrender those glorious privileges, for which they fought, bled, and conquered. Admit that your fleets could destroy our towns, and ravage our sea-coasts; these are inconsiderable objects, things of no moment to men whose bosoms glow with the ardour of liberty. We can retire beyond the reach of your navy, and, without any sensible diminution of the necessaries of life, enjoy a luxury, which from that period you will want—the luxury of being free.

We know the force of your arms, and was it called forth in the cause of justice and your Country, we might dread the exertion; but will Britons fight under the banners of tyranny? Will they counteract the labours, and disgrace the victories of their ancestors? Will they forge chains for their posterity? If they descend to this unworthy task, will their swords retain their edge, their arms their accustomed vigour? Britons can never become the instruments of oppression, till they lose the spirit of freedom, by which alone they are invincible.

Our enemies charge us with sedition. In what does it consist? In our refusal to submit to unwarrantable acts of injustice and cruelty? If so, shew us a period in your history, in which you have not been equally seditious.

We are accused of aiming at independence; but how is this accusation supported? By the allegations of your Ministers, not by our actions. Abused, insulted, and condemned, what steps have we pursued to obtain redress? We have carried our dutiful petitions to the Throne. We have applied to your justice for relief. We have retrenched our luxury, and withheld our trade.

The advantages of our commerce were designed as a compensation for your protection; when you ceased to protect, for what were we to compensate?

What has been the success of our endeavours? The clemency of our Sovereign is unhappily diverted; our petitions are treated with indignity; our prayers answered by insults. Our application to you remains unnoticed, and leaves us the melancholy apprehension of your wanting either the will or the power to assist us.

Even under these circumstances, what measures have we taken that betray a desire of independence? Have we called in the aid of those foreign powers, who are the rivals of your grandeur? When your Troops were few and defenceless, did we take advantage of their distress and expel them our towns? Or have we permitted them to fortify, to receive new aid, and to acquire additional strength?

Let not your enemies and ours persuade you, that in this we were influenced by fear, or any other unworthy motive. The lives of Britons are still dear to us. They are the children of our parents, and an uninterrupted intercourse of mutual benefits had knit the bonds of friendship. When hostilities were commenced, when on a late occasion we were wantonly attacked by your Troops, though we repelled their assaults and returned their blows, yet we lamented the wounds they obliged us to give; nor have we yet learned to rejoice at a victory over Englishmen.

As we wish not to colour our actions, or disguise our thoughts, we shall, in the simple language of truth, avow the measures we have pursued, the motives upon which we have acted, and our future designs.

When our late petition to the Throne produced no other effect than fresh injuries, and votes of your Legislature, calculated to justify every severity; when your fleets and your armies were prepared to wrest from us our property, to rob us of our liberties or our lives; when the hostile attempts of General Gage evinced his designs, we levied armies for our security and defence. When the powers vested in the Governour of Canada gave us reason to apprehend danger from that quarter; and we had frequent intimations, that a cruel and savage enemy was to be let loose upon the defenceless inhabitants of our frontiers; we took such measures as prudence dictated, as necessity will justify. We possessed ourselves of Crown Point and Ticonderoga. Yet give us leave most solemnly to assure you, that we have not yet lost sight of the object we have ever had in view—a reconciliation with you on constitutional principles, and a restoration of that friendly intercourse, which, to the advantage of both, we till lately maintained.

The inhabitants of this Country apply themselves chiefly to agriculture and commerce. As their fashions and manners are similar to yours, your markets must afford them the conveniences and luxuries for which they exchange the produce of their labours. The wealth of this extended Continent centres with you; and our trade is so regulated as to be subservient only to your interest. You are too reasonable to expect, that by taxes (in addition to this) we should contribute to your expense; to believe, after diverting the fountain, that the streams can flow with unabated force.

It has been said, that we refuse to submit to the restrictions on our commerce. From whence is this inference drawn? Not from our words, we have repeatedly declared the contrary; and we again profess our submission to the several acts of trade and navigation, passed before the year 1763, trusting, nevertheless, in the equity and justice of Parliament, that such of them as, upon cool and impartial consideration, shall appear to have imposed unnecessary or grievous restrictions, will, at some happier period, be repealed or altered. And we cheerfully consent to the operation of such acts of the British Parliament as shall be restrained to the regulation of our external commerce, for the purpose of securing the commercial advantages of the whole Empire to the Mother Country, and the commercial benefits of its respective members; excluding every idea of taxation, internal or external, for raising a revenue on the subjects in America without their consent.

It is alleged that we contribute nothing to the common defence. To this we answer, that the advantages which Great Britain receives from the monopoly of our trade far exceed our proportion of the expense necessary for that purpose. But should these advantages be inadequate thereto, let the restrictions on our trade be removed, and we will cheerfully contribute such proportion when constitutionally required.

It is a fundamental principle of the British Constitution, that every man should have at least a representative share in the formation of those laws by which he is bound. Were it otherwise, the regulation of our internal police by a British Parliament, who are and ever will be unacquainted with our local circumstances, must be always inconvenient, and frequently oppressive, working our wrong, without yielding any possible advantage to you.

A plan of accommodation (as it has been absurdly called) has been proposed by your Ministers to our respective Assemblies. Were this proposal free from every other objection but that which arises from the time of the offer, it would not be unexceptionable. Can men deliberate with the bayonet at their breast? Can they treat with freedom, while their Towns are sacked; when daily instances of injustice and oppression disturb the slower operations of reason?

If this proposal is really such as you would offer and we accept, why was it delayed till the Nation was put to useless expense, and we were reduced to our present melancholy situation? If it holds forth nothing, why was it proposed? Unless indeed to deceive you into a belief, that we were unwilling to listen to any terms of accommodation. But what is submitted to our consideration? We contend for the disposal of our property. We are told that our demand is unreasonable, that our Assemblies may indeed collect our money, but that they must at the same time offer, not what your exigencies or ours may require, but so much as shall be deemed sufficient to satisfy the desires of a Minister and enable him to provide for favourites and dependants. A recurrence to your own Treasury will convince you how little of the money already extorted from us has been applied to the relief of your burdens. To suppose that we would thus grasp the shadow and give up the substance, is adding insult to injuries.

We have nevertheless again presented an humble and dutiful Petition to our Sovereign, and to remove every imputation of obstinacy, have requested His Majesty to direct some mode by which the united applications of his faithful Colonists may be improved into happy and permanent reconciliation. We are willing to treat on such terms as can alone render an accommodation lasting, and we flatter ourselves that our pacifick endeavours will be attended with a removal of Ministerial Troops, and a repeal of those laws, of the operation of which we complain, on the one part, and a disbanding of our Army, and a dissolution of our commercial associations, on the other.

Yet conclude not from this that we propose to surrender our property into the hands of your Ministry, or vest your Parliament with a power which may terminate in our destruction. The great bulwarks of our Constitution we have desired to maintain by every temperate, by every peaceable means; but your Ministers (equal foes to British and American freedom) have added to their former oppressions an attempt to reduce us by the sword to a base and abject submission. On the sword, therefore, we are compelled to rely for protection. Should victory declare in your favour, yet men trained to arms from their infancy, and animated by the love of liberty, will afford neither a cheap nor easy conquest. Of this at least we are assured, that our struggle will be glorious, our success certain; since even in death we shall find that freedom which in life you forbid us to enjoy.

Let us now ask, what advantages are to attend our reduction? The trade of a ruined and desolate Country is always inconsiderable, its revenue trifling; the expense of subjecting and retaining it in subjection certain and inevitable. What, then, remains but the gratification of an ill-judged pride, or the hope of rendering us subservient to designs on your liberty.

Soldiers who have sheathed their swords in the bowels of their American brethren, will not draw them with more reluctance against you. When too late you may lament the loss of that freedom which we exhort you, while still in your power, to preserve.

On the other hand, should you prove unsuccessful; should that connexion, which we most ardently wish to maintain, be dissolved; should your Ministers exhaust your treasures and waste the blood of your countrymen in vain attempts on our liberty; do they not deliver you, weak and defenceless, to your natural enemies?

Since, then, your liberty must be the price of your victories; your ruin, of your defeat; what blind fatality can urge you to a pursuit destructive of all that Britons hold dear?

If you have no regard to the connexion that has for ages subsisted between us; if you have forgot the wounds we have received fighting by your side for the extension of the empire; if our commerce is not an object below your consideration; if justice and humanity have lost their influence on your hearts; still motives are not wanting to excite your indignation at the measures now pursued: your wealth, your honour, your liberty are at stake.

Notwithstanding the distress to which we are reduced, we sometimes forget our own afflictions to anticipate and sympathize in yours. We grieve that rash and inconsiderate counsels should precipitate the destruction of an empire which has been the envy and admiration of ages, and call God to witness, that we would part with our property, endanger our lives, and sacrifice every thing but liberty, to redeem you from ruin.

A cloud hangs over your head and ours; ere this reaches you, it may probably burst upon us; let us, then, (before the remembrance of former kindness is obliterated,) once more repeat those appellations which are ever grateful in our ears; let us entreat Heaven to avert our ruin, and the destruction that threatens our friends, brethren, and countrymen, on the other side of the Atlantick.

Ordered, That the Address be published, and a number of them sent by Mr. Penn to England.

The Letter to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Livery of London, being read again, and debated, was approved, and is as follows:

My LORD: Permit the Delegates of the people of twelve ancient Colonies, to pay your Lordship, and the very respectable body of which you are head, the just tribute of gratitude and thanks, for the virtuous and unsolicited resentment you have shewn to the violated rights of a free people. The City of London, my Lord, having in all ages approved itself the patron of liberty, and the support of just government, against lawless tyranny and oppression, cannot fail to make us deeply sensible of the powerful aid our cause must receive from such advocates; a cause, my Lord, worthy the support of the first City in the world, as it involves the fate of a great Continent, and threatens to shake the foundations of a flourishing, and, until lately, a happy Empire.

North America, my Lord, wishes most ardently for a lasting connexion with Great Britain on terms of just and equal liberty; less than which generous minds will not offer, nor brave and free ones be willing to receive.

A cruel war has at length been opened against us, and whilst we prepare to defend ourselves like the descendants of Britons, we still hope that the mediation of wise and good citizens, will at length prevail over despotism, and restore harmony and peace, on permanent principles, to an oppressed and divided Empire.

We have the honour to be, my Lord, with great esteem, your Lordship's faithful friends and fellow-subjects.

Signed by order of the Congress:

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

Ordered, That the above Letter be fairly transcribed, and signed by the President, and sent by Mr. Penn.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Letter to Mr. Penn and the Colony Agents, brought in the same, which being read, was approved, and is as follows:

GENTLEMEN: The perseverance of the British Ministry in their unjust and cruel system of Colony administration, has occasioned the meeting of another Congress.

We have again appealed to the justice of our Sovereign for protection against the destruction which his Ministers meditate for his American subjects. This Petition to His Majesty you will please, gentlemen, to present to the King with all convenient expedition, after which we desire it may be given to the publick. We likewise send you our second application to the equity and interest of our fellow-subjects in Great Britain, and also a declaration setting forth the causes of our taking up arms: both which we wish may be immediately put to press, and communicated as universally as possible.

The Congress entertain the highest sense of the wise and worthy interposition of the Lord Mayor and Livery of London, in favour of injured America. They have expressed this, their sense, in a letter to his Lordship and the Livery, which we desire may be presented in the manner most agreeable to that respectable body.

You will oblige us, gentlemen, by giving the most early information to the Congress, and to the Speakers of our respective Assemblies, of your proceeding in this business, and such further intelligence as you may judge to be of importance to America in this great contest.

We are, with great regard, Gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servants.

By order of the Congress.

Ordered, That the above be fairly transcribed, to be signed by the President, and then by him sent under cover, with the Petition to the King, and Address to the Inhabitants of Great Britain, and Letter to the Lord Mayor of London, to Richard Penn, Esq., and that the President request Mr. Penn, in behalf of the Congress, to join with the Colony Agents in presenting the Petition to the King.

Order of the Day put off; and Adjourned till Monday, at nine o'clock.

Monday, July 10, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

It being suggested that there was a gentleman in Town well acquainted with the situation and disposition of the Indians,

On motion, That he be introduced, he was introduced accordingly. After he withdrew, the Committee appointed to prepare proper talks to the Indians, reported the same, which were read.

The Committee appointed to devise ways and means of putting the Militia into a proper state of defence, brought in their Report, which was read.

Mr. Alsop informed the Congress that he had an invoice of Indian goods, which a gentleman in this Town had delivered to him, and which the said gentleman was willing to dispose of to the Congress.

Ordered, That Mr. P. Livingston, Mr. Henry, and Mr. Alsop, be a Committee to examine said invoice, and report to the Congress.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee respecting the Militia, and after some debate, the same was deferred till to-morrow.

The Order of the Day put off, and the Congress adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Tuesday, July 11, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Report of the Committee on Indian Affairs was taken up and read, and, after some debate, the same was deferred till to-morrow.

On information that there were two Companies of Riflemen raised in Lancaster instead of one,

Resolved, That both the Companies be taken into the Continental service.

On motion, Resolved, That the Delegates from Pennsylvania have liberty to treat with, and employ, fifty Hussars, who have been in actual service, and send them forward to join the Troops before Boston, under General Washington.

"An Address of the Deputies from the different Parishes of the Island of Bermuda," to the Congress, was presented and read.

The Order of the Day was postponed, and the Congress adjourned till to-morrow, at nine o'clock.

Wednesday, July 12, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

Information being given that there was a gentleman from the Province of Quebeck in Town, who could give some intelligence of the disposition of the Canadians,

On motion, Resolved, That he be called in; and he was accordingly introduced and examined.

Two Letters, from N. Cooke, Deputy-Governour of Rhode-Island, the other from General Ward, were read.

The Report of the Committee of Indian Affairs was then taken into consideration, which being debated by paragraphs, the Congress came to the following Resolutions:

That the securing and preserving the friendship of the Indian Nations, appears to be a subject of the utmost moment to these Colonies.

That there is too much reason to apprehend that Administration will spare no pains to excite the several Nations of Indians to take up arms against these Colonies; and that it becomes us to be very active and vigilant in exerting every prudent means to strengthen and confirm the friendly disposition towards these Colonies, which has long prevailed among the Northern Tribes, and which has been lately manifested by some of those to the Southward.

As the Indians depend on the Colonists for arms, ammunition, and clothing, which are become necessary to their subsistence, that Commissioners be appointed by this Congress, to superintend Indian Affairs in behalf of these Colonies.

That there be three Departments of Indians, the Northern, the Middle, and Southern. The Northern to extend so far south as to include the whole of the Indians known by the name of the Six Nations, and all the Indians northward of those nations. The Southern Department to extend so far north as to include the Cherokees, and all the Indians that may be to the southward of them. The Middle to contain the Indian nations that lie between the other two departments.

That five Commissioners be appointed for the Southern Department.

That for each of the other two Departments, there be appointed three Commissioners.

That the Commissioners have power to treat with the Indians in their respective Departments, in the name, and on behalf of the United Colonies, in order to preserve peace and friendship with the said Indians, and to prevent their taking any part in the present commotions.

That the Commissioners for the Southern Department receive from the Continental Treasury the sum of ten thousand Dollars; the Commissioners for the Middle and Northern Department, the sum of six thousand six hundred and sixty-six Dollars and two-thirds of a Dollar, for each of their respective Departments, for defraying the expense of treaties and presents to the Indians.

That the Commissioners respectively have power to take to their assistance gentlemen of influence among the Indians, in whom they can confide, and to appoint Agents, residing near or among the Indians, to watch the conduct of the Superintendents and their emissaries.

That in case the Commissioners for the respective Districts, or any one of them in either District, shall have satisfactory proof, that the King's Superintendents, their Deputies or Agents, or any other person whatsoever, are active in stirring up or inciting the Indians, or any of them, to become inimical to the American Colonies, such Commissioner or Commissioners ought to cause such Superintendents or other offender, to be seized and kept in safe custody until order shall be taken therein by a majority of the Commissioners of the District where such seizure is made, or by the Continental Congress, or a Committee of said Congress, to whom such seizure, with the causes of it, shall, as soon as possible after, be made known.

That the Commissioners shall exhibit fair accounts of the expenditure of all moneys by them respectively to be received for the purposes aforesaid, to every succeeding Continental Congress, or Committee of Congress, together with a general state of Indian affairs in their several departments; in order that the Colonies may be informed from time to time, of every such matter as may concern them to know and avail themselves of, for the benefit of the common cause.

That as there is a seminary for the instruction of Indian youth, which has been established under the care of Doctor Wheelock, on Connecticut River; and as there are nine or ten Indian youths at that school, chiefly from the Tribes residing in Quebeck; and as for want of a proper fund there is danger that these youths will be sent back to their friends, which will probably excite jealousy and distrust, and be attended with bad consequences, that the Commissioners for Indian Affairs in the Northern Department be authorized to receive out of the Continental Treasury a sum not exceeding five hundred Dollars, to be applied by them for the support of the said Indian youths.

Resolved, That the election of the Commissioners be deferred till to-morrow.

On motion, Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to devise ways and means to protect the trade of these Colonies.

The Congress then proceeded to the election of the Committee, and the following persons were chosen, viz: Mr. Jay, Mr. Franklin, Mr. Gadsden, Mr. Deane, and Mr. Lee.

Resolved, That the consideration of the Report of the Committee respecting the Militia, be entered upon to-morrow.

The Order of the Day was postponed, and the Congress adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Thursday, July 13, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Speech to the Indians, reported the same.

The Speech to the Six Nations being read, and debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, and is as follows:

A Speech to the Six Confederate Nations, MOHAWKS, ONEIDAS, TUSCARORAS, ONONDAGAS, CAYUGAS, SENECA, from the Twelve United Colonies, convened in Council at PHILADELPHIA.

Brothers, Sachems, and Warriors! We, the Delegates from the twelve United Provinces, viz: New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, and South-Carolina, now sitting in General Congress at Philadelphia, send this talk to you our Brothers. We are sixty-five in number, chosen and appointed by the people throughout all these Provinces and Colonies, to meet and sit together in one great Council, to consult together for the common good of the land, and speak and act for them.

Brothers! In our consultation we have judged it proper and necessary to send you this talk, as we are upon the same island, that you may be informed of the reasons of this great Council, the situation of our civil Constitution, and our disposition towards you our Indian brothers of the Six Nations and their allies. (Three Strings, or a Small Belt.)

Brothers and Friends, now attend! When our fathers crossed the great water and came over to this land, the King of England gave them a talk, assuring them that they and their children should be his children, and that if they would leave their native country and make settlements, and live here, and buy and sell, and trade with their brethren beyond the water, they should still keep hold of the same covenant chain and enjoy peace; and it was covenanted, that the fields, houses, goods and possessions which our fathers should acquire, should remain to them as their own, and be their children's forever, and at their sole disposal.

Trusting that this covenant should never be broken, our fathers came a great distance beyond the great water, laid out their money here, built houses, cleared fields, raised crops, and through their own labour and industry grew tall and strong.

They have bought, sold, and traded with England according to agreement, sending to them such things as they wanted, and taking in exchange such things as were wanted here.

The King of England and his people kept the way open for more than one hundred years, and by our trade became richer, and by a union with us, greater and stronger than the other kings and people who live beyond the water.

All this time they lived in great friendship with us, and we with them; for we are brothers—one blood.

Whenever they were struck, we instantly felt as though the blow had been given to us—their enemies were our enemies.

Whenever they went to war, we sent our men to stand by their side and fight for them, and our money to help them and make them strong.

They thanked us for our love, and sent us good talks, and renewed their promise to be one people forever.

Brothers and Friends, open a kind ear! We will now tell you of the quarrel betwixt the Counsellors of King George and the inhabitants and Colonies of America.

Many of his Counsellors are proud and wicked men. They persuade the King to break the covenant chain, and not to send us any more good Talks. A considerable number have prevailed upon him to enter into a new covenant against us, and have torn asunder and cast behind their backs the good old covenant which their ancestors and ours entered into, and took strong hold of.

They now tell us they will slip their hand into our pocket without asking, as though it were their own; and at their pleasure they will take from us our Charters, or written Civil Constitution, which we love as our lives; also our plantations, our houses and goods, whenever they please, without asking our leave; that our vessels may go to this island in the sea, but to this or that particular island we shall not trade any more; and in case of our non-compliance with these new orders, they shut up our harbours.

Brothers, this is our present situation; thus have many of the King's Counsellors and servants dealt with us. If we submit, or comply with their demands, you can easily perceive to what state we will be reduced. If our people labour on the field, they will not know who shall enjoy the crop. If they hunt in the woods, it will be uncertain who shall taste of the meat, or have the skins. If they build houses, they will not know whether they may sit round the fire, with their wives and children. They cannot be sure whether they shall be permitted to eat, drink, and wear the fruits of their own labour and industry.

Brothers and Friends of the Six Nations, attend! We upon this island have often spoke and entreated the King and his servants the Counsellors, that peace and harmony might still continue between us; that we cannot part with or lose our hold of the old covenant chain which united our fathers and theirs; that we want to brighten this chain, and keep the way open as our fathers did; that we want to live with them as brothers, labour, trade, travel abroad, eat and drink in peace. We have often asked them to love us, and live in such friendship with us as their fathers did with ours.

We told them again that we judged we were exceedingly injured, that they might as well kill us, as take away our property and the necessities of life. We have asked why they treat us thus? What has become of our repeated addresses and supplications to them? Who hath shut the ears of the King to the cries of his children in America? No soft answer, no pleasant voice from beyond the water has yet sounded in our ears.

Brothers, thus stands the matter betwixt old England and America. You Indians know how things are proportioned in a family—between the father and the son—the child carries a little pack. England we regard as the father; this island may be compared to the son.

The father has a numerous family—both at home and upon this island. He appoints a great number of servants to assist him in the government of his family. In process of time, some of his servants grow proud and ill-natured; they were displeased to see the boy so alert and walk so nimbly with his pack. They tell the father, and advise him to enlarge the child's pack; they prevail; the pack is increased; the child takes it up again—as he thought it might be the father's pleasure—speaks but few words—those very small—for he was loth to offend the father. Those proud and wicked servants, finding they had prevailed, laughed to see the boy sweat and stagger under his increased load. By and by, they apply to the father to double the boy's pack, because they heard him complain; and without any reason, said they, he is a cross child; correct him if he complains any more. The boy entreats the father; addresses the great servants in a decent manner, that the pack might be lightened; he could not go any farther; humbly asks, if the old fathers, in any of their records, had described such a pack for the child; after all the tears and entreaties of the child, the pack is redoubled; the child stands a little while staggering under the weight, ready to fall every moment. However, he entreats the father once more, though so faint he could only lisp out his last humble supplication; waits a while; no voice returns. The child concludes the father could not hear; those proud servants had intercepted his supplications, or stopped the ears of the father. He therefore gives one struggle and throws off the pack, and says he cannot take it up again; such a weight would crush him down and kill him, and he can but die if he refuses.

Upon this, those servants are very wroth; and tell the father many false stories respecting the child; they bring a great cudgel to the father, asking him to take it in his hand and strike the child.

This may serve to illustrate the present condition of the King's American subjects or children.

Amidst these oppressions we now and then hear a mollifying and reviving voice from some of the King's wise Counsellors, who are our friends, and feel for our distresses; when they heard our complaints and our cries, they applied to the King; also told those wicked servants, that this child in America was not a cross boy; it had sufficient reason for crying, and if the cause of its complaint was neglected, it would soon assume the voice of a man, plead for justice like a man, and defend its rights and support the old covenant chain of the fathers.

Brothers, listen! Notwithstanding all our entreaties, we have but little hope the King will send us any more good Talks, by reason of his evil Counsellors; they have persuaded him to send an army of soldiers and many ships-of-war, to rob and destroy us. They have shut up many of our harbours, seized and taken into possession many of our vessels; the soldiers have struck the blow; killed some of our people; the blood now runs of the American children. They have also burned our houses and Towns, and taken much of our goods.

Brothers! We are now necessitated to rise, and forced to fight, or give up our Civil Constitution, run away, and leave our farms and houses behind us. This must not be. Since the King's wicked Counsellors will not open their ears, and consider our just complaints, and the cause of our weeping, and hath given the blow, we are determined to drive away the King's Soldiers, and to kill and destroy all those wicked men we find in arms against the peace of the twelve United Colonies upon this island. We think our cause is just; therefore hope God will be on our side. We do not take up the hatchet and struggle for honour and conquest; but to maintain our Civil Constitution and religious privileges, the very same for which our forefathers left their native land and came to this Country.

Brothers and Friends! We desire you will hear and receive what we have now told you, and that you will open a good ear and listen to what we are now going to say. This is a family quarrel between us and Old England. You Indians are not concerned in it. We don't wish you to take up the hatchet against the King's Troops. We desire you to remain at home, and not join on either side, but keep the hatchet buried deep. In the name and behalf of all our people, we ask and desire you to love peace and maintain it, and to love and sympathize with us in our troubles; that the path may be kept open with all our people and yours, to pass and repass, without molestation.

Brothers! We live upon the same ground with you. The same island is our common birthplace. We desire to sit down under the same tree of peace with you; let us water its roots and cherish its growth, till the large leaves and flourishing branches shall extend to the setting sun, and reach the skies.

Brothers, observe well! What is it we have asked of you? Nothing but peace, notwithstanding our present disturbed situation; and if application should be made to you by any of the King's unwise and wicked Ministers to join on their side, we only advise you to deliberate with great caution, and in your wisdom look forward to the consequences of a compliance. For, if the King's Troops take away our property, and destroy us, who are of the same blood with themselves, what can you, who are Indians, expect from them afterwards?

Therefore, we say, Brothers, take care; hold fast to your covenant chain. You now know our disposition towards you, the Six Nations of Indians, and your allies. Let this our good Talk remain at Onondaga, your central Council-House. We depend upon you to send and acquaint your allies to the northward, the seven Tribes on the River St. Lawrence, that you have this Talk of ours at the Great Council Fire of the Six Nations. And when they return, we invite your great men to come and converse farther with us at Albany, where we intend to rekindle the Council Fire, which your and our ancestors sat round in great friendship.

Brothers and Friends! We greet you all farewell.

(The large Belt of Intelligence and Declaration.)

Brothers! We have said we wish you Indians may continue in peace with one another, and with us the white people. Let us both be cautious in our behaviour towards each other at this critical state of affairs. This island now trembles; the wind whistles from almost every quarter; let us fortify our minds and shut our ears against false rumours; let us be cautious what we receive for truth, unless spoken by wise and good men. If any thing disagreeable should ever fall out between us, the twelve United Colonies, and you, the Six Nations, to wound our peace, let us immediately seek measures for healing the breach. From the present situation of our affairs, we judge it wise and expedient to kindle up a small Council Fire at Albany, where we may hear each other's voice, and disclose our minds more fully to each other.—(A small Belt.)

Agreeable to the Standing Order, the Congress resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America, when Doctor B. Franklin submitted to their consideration the following sketch of Articles of Confederation.

Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, proposed by the Delegates of the several Colonies of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, &c., in General Congress met at PHILADELPHIA, MAY 10, 1775.

ARTICLE I. The name of this Confederacy shall henceforth be, The United Colonies of North America.

ARTICLE II. The said United Colonies hereby severally enter into a firm league of friendship with each other, binding on themselves and their posterity, for their common defence against their enemies, for the securities of their liberties and properties, the safety of their persons and families, and their mutual and general welfare.

ARTICLE III. That each Colony shall enjoy and retain as much as it may think fit of its own present laws, customs, rights, privileges and peculiar jurisdictions within its own limits; and may amend its own Constitution as shall seem best to its own Assembly or Convention.

ARTICLE IV. That for the more convenient management of general interests, Delegates shall be annually elected in each Colony, to meet in General Congress at such time and place as shall be agreed on in the next preceding Congress. Only where particular circumstances do not make a duration necessary, it is understood to be a rule, that each succeeding Congress be held in a different Colony, till the whole number be gone through; and so in perpetual rotation; and that accordingly the next Congress after the present shall be held at Annapolis, in Maryland.

ARTICLE V. That the power and duty of the Congress shall extend to the determining on war and peace; the sending and receiving Ambassadors, and entering into alliances (the reconciliation with Great Britain;) the settling all disputes and differences between Colony and Colony, about limits or any other cause, if such should arise; and the planting of new Colonies when proper. The Congress shall also make such general ordinances as, though necessary to the general welfare, particular Assemblies cannot be competent to, viz: those that may relate to our general commerce, or general currency; the establishment of posts; and the regulation of our common forces. The Congress shall also have the appointment of all General Officers, civil and military, appertaining to the General Confederacy, such as General Treasurer, Secretary, &c.

ARTICLE VI. All charges of wars, and all other general expenses to be incurred for the common welfare, shall be defrayed out of a common treasury, which is to be supplied by each Colony in proportion to its number of male poles between sixteen and sixty years of age. The taxes for paying that proportion are to be laid and levied by the Laws of each Colony.

ARTICLE VII. The number of Delegates to be elected and sent to Congress by each Colony shall be regulated, from time to time, by the number of such polls returned; so as that one Delegate be allowed for every five thousand polls. And the Delegates are to bring with them to every Congress an authenticated return of the number of polls in the respective Provinces, which is to be taken triennially, for the purposes abovementioned.

ARTICLE VIII. At every meeting of the Congress, one half of the Members returned, exclusive of proxies, shall be necessary to make a quorum; and each Delegate at the Congress shall have a vote in all cases, and if necessarily absent, shall be allowed to appoint any other Delegate from the same Colony to be his proxy, who may vote for him.

ARTICLE IX. An Executive Council shall be appointed by the Congress out of their own body, consisting of twelve persons; of whom, in the first appointment, one third, viz: four shall be for one year, four for two years, and four for three years; and as the said terms expire, the vacancies shall be filled by appointments for three years; whereby one third of the Members will be changed annually. This Council, of whom two-thirds shall be a quorum in the recess of Congress, is to execute what shall have been enjoined thereby; to manage the general Continental business and interests; to receive applications from foreign Countries; to prepare matters for the consideration of the Congress; to fill up, pro tempore, Continental Offices that fall vacant; and to draw on the General Treasurer for such moneys as may be necessary for general services, and appropriated by the Congress to such services.

ARTICLE X. No Colony shall engage in an offensive war with any Nation of Indians without the consent of the Congress, or Grand Council abovementioned, who are first to consider the justice and necessity of such war.

ARTICLE XI. A perpetual alliance, offensive and defensive, is to be entered into as soon as may be with the Six Nations; their limits to be ascertained and secured to them; their land not to be encroached on, nor any private or Colony purchases made of them hereafter to be held good; nor any contract for lands to be made, but between the Great Council of the Indians at Onondaga and the General Congress. The boundaries and lands of all the other Indians shall also be ascertained and secured to them in the same manner, and persons appointed to reside among them in proper Districts; and shall take care to prevent injustice in the trade with them; and be enabled at our general expense, by occasional small supplies, to relieve their personal wants and distresses. And all purchases from them shall be by the Congress, for the general advantage and benefit of the United Colonies.

ARTICLE XII. As all new institutions may have imperfections, which only time and experience can discover, it is agreed that the General Congress, from time to time, shall propose such Amendments of this Constitution as may be found necessary; which being approved by a majority of the Colony Assemblies, shall be equally binding with the rest of the Articles of this Confederation.

ARTICLE XIII. Any and every Colony from Great Britain upon the Continent of North America, not at present engaged in our Association, may, upon application and joining the said Association, be received into the Confederation, viz: Ireland, the West-India Islands, Quebeck, St. John's, Nova-Scotia, Bermudas, and East and West Floridas; and shall thereupon be entitled to all the advantages of our union, mutual assistance, and commerce.

These Articles shall be proposed to the several Provincial Conventions or Assemblies, to be by them considered; and if approved, they are advised to empower their Delegates to agree to and ratify the same in the ensuing Congress. After which the union thereby established is to continue firm, till the terms of reconciliation proposed in the Petition of the last Congress to the King are agreed to; till the Acts since made, restraining the American Commerce and Fisheries, are repealed; till reparation is made for the injury done to Boston, by shutting up its Port; for the burning of Charlestown; and for the expense of this unjust war; and till all the British Troops are withdrawn from America. On the arrival of these events, the Colonies will return to their former connexion and friendship with Britain: but on failure thereof, this Confederation is to be perpetual.

After some time spent in Committee of the Whole, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported, that they had come to certain Resolutions, which he read, and desired leave to sit again.

The Committee appointed to devise ways and means to protect the Trade of these Colonies, brought in their Report, which was read.

Ordered, That the same be taken into consideration to-morrow morning.

The Congress then entered upon the consideration of the Report from the Committee of the Whole, and after some debate,

Resolved, That such a body of Troops be kept up in the Massachusetts-Bay as General Washington shall think necessary, provided they do not exceed twenty-two thousand men.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Saturday, July 22, 1775.

Agreeable to the Order of yesterday, the Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee appointed to devise ways and means to protect the Trade of these Colonies, and after some debate, the same was postponed, to be taken up at some future day.

The Congress then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, to take into consideration the state of America. And after some time spent therein, the President resumed the chair, and Mr. Ward reported that the Committee had taken into consideration the matter referred to them, but not having come to a conclusion, desired leave to sit again.

On motion, Resolved, That Doctor Franklin, Mr. Jefferson, Mr. J. Adams, and Mr. Lee, be a Committee to take into consideration, and report on the Resolution of the House of Commons, February 20, 1775, commonly called Lord North's Motion.

The Committee for that purpose appointed, brought in a Report for establishing a Hospital.

Tuesday, July 25, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider the ways and means of establishing Posts, brought in their Report; which was read, and ordered to be taken into consideration to-morrow.

The Committee appointed to bring in an answer to the Resolution of the House of Commons, brought in their Report; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table for consideration.

The Congress being informed that a quantity of the Continental Gunpowder, amounting to about six tons and a half, was arrived in this City:

Ordered, That the Delegates of this Colony take measures to have it sent under a safe convoy with all possible despatch to Gen. Washington, at the Camp before Boston.

That the Delegates be empowered to order a detachment of Riflemen raised for the Continental Army, consisting of at least two Officers and thirty Men, to meet the Powder Wagons at Trenton, and from thence to escort the same to the Camp.

The Congress then resumed the consideration of the Address to the Assembly of Jamaica, which being debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, and is as follows:

Mr. Speaker,

And Gentlemen of the Assembly of JAMAICA:

We would think ourselves deficient in our duty, if we suffered this Congress to pass over, without expressing our esteem for the Assembly of Jamaica.

Whoever attends to the conduct of those who have been entrusted with the administration of British affairs during these last twelve years, will discover in it a deliberate plan to destroy, in every part of the Empire, the free constitution, for which Britain has been so long and so justly famed. With a dexterity, artful and wicked, they have varied the modes of attack, according to the different characters and circumstances of those whom they meant to reduce. In the East-Indies, where the effeminacy of the inhabitants promised an easy conquest, they thought it unnecessary to veil their tyrannick principles under the thinnest disguise. Without deigning even to pretend a justification of their conduct, they sacrificed the lives of millions to the gratification of their insatiable avarice and lust of power. In Britain, where the maxims of freedom were still known, but where luxury and dissipation had diminished the wonted reverence for them, the attack has been carried on in a more secret and indirect manner: corruption has been employed to undermine them. The Americans are not enervated by effeminacy, like the inhabitants of India; nor debauched by luxury, like those of Great Britain: it was, therefore, judged improper to assail them by bribery, or by undisguised force. Plausible systems were formed; specious pretences were made: all the arts of sophistry were tried to shew that the British Ministry had by law a right to enslave us. The first and best maxims of the Constitution, venerable to Britons and to Americans, were perverted and profaned. The power of Parliament, derived from the people, to bind the people, was extended over those from whom it was never derived. It is asserted, that a Standing Army may be constitutionally kept among us, without our consent. Those principles, dishonourable to those who adopted them, and destructive to those to whom they were applied, were nevertheless carried into execution by the foes of liberty and of mankind. Acts of Parliament, ruinous to America, and unserviceable to Britain, were made to bind us; Armies, maintained by the Parliament, were sent over to secure their operation. The power, however, and the cunning of our adversaries, were alike unsuccessful. We refused to their Parliaments an obedience, which our judgments disapproved of; we refused to their Armies a submission, which spirits unaccustomed to slavery could not brook.

But while we spurned a disgraceful subjection, we were far from running into rash or seditious measures of opposition. Filled with sentiments of loyalty to our Sovereign, and of affection and respect for our fellow-subjects in Britain, we petitioned, we supplicated, we expostulated: Our prayers were rejected; our remonstrances were disregarded; our grievances were accumulated. All this did not provoke us to violence.

An appeal to the justice and humanity of those who had injured us, and who were bound to redress our injuries, was ineffectual: we next resolved to make an appeal to their interest, though by doing so, we knew we must sacrifice our own, and (which gave us equal uneasiness) that of our friends, who had never offended us, and who were connected with us by a sympathy of feelings, under oppressions similar to our own. We resolved to give up our commerce that we might preserve our liberty. We flattered ourselves, that when, by withdrawing our commercial intercourse with Britain, which we had an undoubted right either to withdraw or continue, her trade should be diminished, her revenues impaired, and her manufactures unemployed, our Ministerial foes would be induced by interest, or compelled by necessity, to depart from the plan of tyranny which they had so long pursued, and to substitute in its place a system more compatible with the freedom of America, and justice of Britain. That this scheme of non-importation and non-exportation might be productive of the desired effects, we were obliged to include the Islands in it. From this necessity, and from this necessity alone, has our conduct towards them proceeded. By converting your sugar plantations into fields of grain, you can supply yourselves with the necessities of life: while the present unhappy struggle shall continue, we cannot do more.

But why should we make any apology to the patriotick Assembly of Jamaica, who know so well the value of liberty; who are so sensible of the extreme danger to which ours is exposed; and who foresee how certainly the destruction of ours must be followed by the destruction of their own?

We receive uncommon pleasure from observing the principles of our righteous opposition distinguished by your approbation; we feel the warmest gratitude for your pathetic mediation in our behalf with the Crown. It was indeed unavailing—but are you to blame? Mournful experience tells us that petitions are often rejected, while the sentiments and conduct of the petitioners entitle what they offer to a happier fate.

That our petitions have been treated with disdain, is now become the smallest part of our complaint: Ministerial insolence is lost in ministerial barbarity. It has, by an exertion peculiarly ingenious, procured those very measures, which it laid us under the hard necessity of pursuing, to be stigmatized in Parliament as rebellious: It has employed additional Fleets and Armies for the infamous purpose of compelling us to abandon them: It has plunged us into all the horrors and calamities of civil war: It has caused the treasure and blood of Britons (formerly shed and expended for far other ends) to be spilt and wasted in the execrable design of spreading slavery over British America. It will not, however, accomplish its aim: In the worst of contingencies, a choice will still be left, which it never can prevent us from making.

The peculiar situation of your Island forbids your assistance. But we have your good wishes. From the good wishes of the friends of liberty and mankind, we shall always derive consolation.

Ordered, That a fair copy be made out, to be signed by the President, and transmitted by the first opportunity.

The Congress then, resuming the consideration of the Report of the Committee of the Whole, came to the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That a body of Forces, not exceeding five thousand, be kept up in the New-York Department, for the purpose of defending that part of America, and for securing the Lakes, and defending the Frontiers from invasions or incursions.

That a farther sum, amounting to One Million of Dollars, be struck in bills of thirty Dollars each.

As the signing so great a number of Bills as has been directed to be issued by this Congress will require more time than the Members can possibly devote to that business, consistent with the attention due to the publick service:

Resolved, That the following gentlemen be appointed and fully authorized to sign the same, viz: Luke Morris, Samuel Meredith, Judah Foulke, Samuel Morris, Frederick Kuhl, Robert Strettle Jones, Thomas Coombe, Ellis Lewis, John Mease, Thomas Lawrence, Daniel Clymer, John Maxwell Nesbit, Thomas Barclay, John Bayard, William Craig, Thomas Bartow, Jun., John Shee, Isaac Hazlehurst, Robert Roberts, Anthony Morris, Mordecai Lewis, George Mifflin, Robert Tuckniss, Andrew Bunner, William Jackson, Joseph Sims, James Milligan, and James Reed.

That each of the Continental Bills be numbered and signed by two of the above gentlemen.

That each gentleman who signs the Continental Money be allowed and paid out of the Continental Treasury, one dollar and one third of a dollar for each and every thousand Bills signed and numbered by him.

That the gentlemen appointed to number and sign the Bills, do give their receipts for the same, expressing the number and denomination of them; and after numbering and signing them, shall deliver the same to the Continental Treasurers, taking their receipts for the Bills so delivered.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Samuel Adams, Mr. Lee, and Mr. J. Rutledge, with the Secretary, be a Committee to revise the Journal of the Congress, and prepare it for the press.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Wednesday, July 26, 1775.

Met according to adjournment.

Agreeable to the Order of yesterday, the Congress resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee on the Post-Office; which being debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, as follows:

That a Postmaster General be appointed for the United Colonies, who shall hold his office at Philadelphia, and shall be allowed a salary of one thousand Dollars per annum for himself, and three hundred and forty Dollars per annum for a Secretary and Comptroller; with power to appoint such and so many Deputies as to him may seem proper and necessary.

That a line of Posts be appointed under the direction of the Postmaster General, from Falmouth in New-England to Savannah in Georgia, with as many cross-posts as he shall think fit.

That the allowance to the Deputies in lieu of salary and all contingent expenses, shall be twenty per centum on the sums they collect and pay into the General Post-Office annually, when the whole is under or not exceeding one thousand Dollars; and ten per centum for all sums above one thousand Dollars a year.

That the rates of Postage shall be twenty per cent. less than those appointed by act of Parliament.

That the several Deputies account quarterly with the General Post-Office, and the Postmaster General annually with the Continental Treasurers, when he shall pay into the receipt of the said Treasurers the profits of the Post-Office; and if the necessary expense of this establishment should exceed the produce of it, the deficiency shall be made good by the United Colonies, and paid to the Postmaster General by the Continental Treasurers.

On motion made, Resolved, That it be recommended to the Postmaster General to establish a weekly post to South-Carolina.

That it be left to the Postmaster General to appoint a Secretary and Comptroller.

The Congress then proceeded to the election of a Postmaster General for one year, and until another is appointed by a future Congress: when Benjamin Franklin, Esq., was unanimously chosen.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Thursday, July 27, 1775.

Met according to adjournment.

The Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee on establishing a Hospital for the Army; and the same being debated, was agreed to, as follows:

That for the establishment of a Hospital for an Army, consisting of twenty thousand men, the following Officers and other attendants be appointed, with the following allowance or pay, viz:

Storekeepers: To receive and deliver the Bedding and other necessities, by order of the Director.

On motion, Resolved, That the sum of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars be paid by the Continental Treasurers to Reese Meredith, George Clymer, Samuel Meredith, and Samuel Mifflin, Merchants of the City of Philadelphia; and that the like sum of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars be paid by the said Treasurers to Philip Livingston, John Alsop, and Francis Lewis, Merchants of New-York, to be by them applied to the purpose of importing Gunpowder for the Continental Armies; and that they be allowed out of the same five per cent. for their trouble and expenses therein; that they keep all their proceedings, as much as possible, a secret from every other person but the Congress and the General of the Continental Forces for the time being; that they keep up a correspondence with the said General, and make such dispositions of the Powder they may import, as he shall order.*

The Congress then proceeded to the choice of Officers for the Hospital; when Benjamin Church was unanimously elected as Director of, and Chief Physician in the Hospital.

Resolved, That the appointment of the four Surgeons and the Apothecary be left to Doctor Church.

That the Mates be appointed by the Surgeons.

That the number of Mates do not exceed twenty; and,

That the number be not kept in constant pay, unless the sick and wounded should be so numerous as to require the attendance of twenty, and to be diminished as circumstances will admit; for which purpose the pay is fixed by the day, that they may only receive pay for actual service.

That one Clerk, two Storekeepers, and one Nurse to every ten sick, be appointed by the Director.

On motion made, Resolved, That the Paymaster give bond, with two sureties, in the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars, for the faithful performance of his office.

* This most secret, not to be published.—MS. Jour.

That the Bond be made payable to the same persons as the Bonds of the Continental Treasurers are payable to.

James Warren was unanimously elected Paymaster-General.

Resolved, That the Paymaster in the New-York Department give Bond to the same persons as above directed, with two sureties, in the sum of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars, for the faithful performance of his office.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Friday, July 28, 1775.

Met according to adjournment.

The Congress being informed that a quantity of Gunpowder belonging to the Continent is arrived in some part of New-Jersey, Ordered, That the Delegates of New-Jersey do take care that the said Powder be safely conveyed to Dobbs's Ferry, on the North River.

On motion made, Ordered, That the Colony of Virginia be supplied with one ton of Gunpowder from the next quantity arriving here; and that from the same supply Pennsylvania be repaid the Powder heretofore borrowed by the Congress, if the same shall not be wanted by General Washington.

Ordered, That Mr. McKean and Mr. Wilson do prepare the Bonds for the Continental Treasurers to execute.

Jonathan Trumbull, Jun., Esq., was unanimously elected Paymaster of the Forces for the New-York Department.

The Congress then took into consideration the Address to the People of Ireland; which being read and debated, was agreed to, as follows:

To the People of IRELAND:

From the Delegates appointed by the United Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, and South-Carolina, in General Congress at Philadelphia, the 10th of May, 1775.

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-SUBJECTS: As the important contest into which we have been driven, is now become interesting to every European State, and particularly affects the members of the British Empire, we think it our duty to address you on the subject. We are desirous, as is natural to injured innocence, of possessing the good opinion of the virtuous and humane. We are peculiarly desirous of furnishing you with a true state of our motives and objects, the better to enable you to judge of our conduct with accuracy, and determine the merits of the controversy with impartiality and precision.

However incredible it may appear, that, at this enlightened period, the leaders of a nation, which in every age has sacrificed hecatombs of her bravest patriots on the altar of liberty, should presume gravely to assert, and, by force of arms, attempt to establish an arbitrary sway over the lives, liberties, and property of their fellow-subjects in America, it is, nevertheless, a most deplorable and indisputable truth.

These Colonies have, from the time of their first settlement, for near two centuries, peaceably enjoyed those very rights of which the Ministry have, for ten years past, endeavoured by fraud and by violence to deprive them.

At the conclusion of the last war, the genius of England and the spirit of wisdom, as if offended at the ungrateful treatment of their sons, withdrew from the British councils, and left that nation a prey to a race of Ministers, with whom ancient English honesty and benevolence disdained to dwell. From that period, jealousy, discontent, oppression, and discord, have raged among all His Majesty's subjects, and filled every part of his Dominions with distress and complaint.

Not content with our purchasing of Britain, at her own price, clothing and a thousand other articles used by near three millions of people on this vast Continent; not satisfied with the amazing profits arising from the monopoly of our trade, without giving us either time to breathe, after a long though glorious war, or the least credit for the blood and treasure we have expended in it; notwithstanding the zeal we had manifested for the service of our Sovereign, and the warmest attachment to the Constitution of Britain and the people of England, a black and horrid design was formed to convert us from freemen into slaves, from subjects into vassals, and from friends into enemies.

Taxes, for the first time since we landed on the American shores, were, without our consent, imposed upon us; an unconstitutional edict, to compel us to furnish necessities for a standing army, that we wished to see disbanded, was issued, and the Legislature of New-York suspended for refusing to comply with it. Our ancient and inestimable right of Trial by Jury, was, in many instances, abolished, and the common law of the land made to give place to admiralty jurisdictions. Judges were rendered, by the tenure of their commissions, entirely dependant on the will of a Minister. New crimes were arbitrarily created, and new Courts, unknown to the Constitution, instituted. Wicked and insidious Governours have been set over us; and dutiful petitions, for the removal of even the notoriously infamous Governour Hutchinson, were branded with the opprobrious appellation of scandalous and defamatory. Hardy attempts have been made, under colour of Parliamentary authority, to seize Americans, and carry them to Great Britain, to be tried for offences committed in the Colonies. Ancient Charters have no longer remained sacred; that of the Massachusetts-Bay was violated, and their form of Government essentially mutilated and transformed. On pretence of punishing a violation of some private property, committed by a few disguised individuals, the populous and flourishing Town of Boston was surrounded by fleets and armies; its trade destroyed; its port blocked up, and thirty thousand citizens subjected to all the miseries attending so sudden a convulsion in their commercial metropolis; and, to remove every obstacle to the rigorous execution of this system of oppression, an act of Parliament was passed, evidently calculated to indemnify those who might, in the prosecution of it, even imbrue their hands in the blood of the inhabitants.

Though pressed by such an accumulation of undeserved injuries, America still remembered her duty to her Sovereign. A Congress, consisting of Deputies from twelve United Colonies, assembled. They, in the most respectful terms, laid their grievances at the foot of the Throne, and implored His Majesty's interposition in their behalf. They also agreed to suspend all trade with Great Britain, Ireland, and the West-Indies, hoping, by this peaceable mode of opposition, to obtain that justice from the British Ministry which had been so long solicited in vain. And here permit us to assure you, that it was with the utmost reluctance we could prevail upon ourselves to cease our commercial connexion with your island. Your Parliament had done us no wrong. You had ever been friendly to the rights of mankind; and we acknowledge, with pleasure and gratitude, that your nation has produced patriots who have nobly distinguished themselves in the cause of humanity and America. On the other hand, we were not ignorant that the labour and manufactures of Ireland, like those of the silk-worm, were of little moment to herself, but served only to give luxury to those who neither toil nor spin. We perceived that if we continued our commerce with you, our agreement not to import from Britain would be fruitless, and were, therefore, compelled to adopt a measure to which nothing but absolute necessity would have reconciled us. It gave us, however, some consolation to reflect, that should it occasion much distress, the fertile regions of America would afford you a safe asylum from poverty, and, in time, from oppression also; an asylum in which many thousands of your countrymen have found hospitality, peace, and affluence, and become united to us by all the ties of consanguinity, mutual interest, and affection. Nor did Congress stop here. Flattered by a pleasing expectation that the justice and humanity which had so long characterized the English Nation would, on proper application, afford us relief, they represented their grievances in an affectionate address to their brethren in Britain, and entreated their aid and interposition in behalf of these Colonies.

The more fully to evince their respect for their Sovereign, the unhappy people of Boston were requested by the Congress to submit with patience to their fate; and all America united in a resolution to abstain from every species of violence. During this period, that devoted Town suffered unspeakably. Its inhabitants were insulted, and their property violated. Still relying on the clemency and justice of His Majesty and the Nation, they permitted a few Regiments to take possession of their Town, to surround it with fortifications, and to cut off all intercourse between them and their friends in the country.

With anxious expectation did all America wait the event of their Petition. All America laments its fate. Their Prince was deaf to their complaints; and vain were all attempts to impress him with a sense of the sufferings of his American subjects, of the cruelty of their task-masters, and of the many plagues which impended over his Dominions. Instead of directions for a candid inquiry into our grievances, insult was added to oppression, and our long forbearance rewarded with the imputation of cowardice. Our trade with foreign states was prohibited; and an act of Parliament passed to prevent our even fishing on our own coasts. Our peaceable assemblies, for the purpose of consulting the common safety, were declared seditious; and our asserting the very rights which placed the crown of Great Britain on the heads of the three successive Princes of the House of Hanover, styled rebellion. Orders were given to re-enforce the Troops in America. The wild and barbarous savages of the wilderness have been solicited, by gifts, to take up the hatchet against us, and instigated to deluge our settlements with the blood of innocent and defenceless women and children. The whole country was, moreover, alarmed with the horrors of domestick insurrections. Refinements in parental cruelty, at which the genius of Britain must blush! Refinements which admit not of being even recited without horror, or practised without infamy! We should be happy were these dark machinations the mere suggestions of suspicion. We are sorry to declare, that we are possessed of the most authentick and indubitable evidence of their reality.

The Ministry, bent on pulling down the pillars of the Constitution, endeavoured to erect the standard of despotism in America; and, if successful, Britain and Ireland may shudder at the consequences!

Three of their most experienced Generals are sent to wage war with their fellow-subjects; and America is amazed to find the name of Howe in the catalogue of her enemies. She loved his brother.

Despairing of driving the Colonists to resistance, by any other means than actual hostility, a detachment of the Army at Boston marched into the country in all the array of war, and, unprovoked, fired upon and killed several of the inhabitants. The neighbouring farmers suddenly assembled, and repelled the attack. From this, all communication between the Town and country was intercepted. The citizens petitioned the General for permission to leave the Town, and he promised, on surrendering their arms, to permit them to depart, with their other effects. They accordingly surrendered their arms, and the General violated his faith. Under various pretences, passports were delayed and denied; and many thousands of the inhabitants are, at this day, confined in the Town, in the utmost wretchedness and want. The lame, the blind, and the sick, have, indeed, been turned out into the neighbouring fields; and some, eluding the vigilance of the sentries, have escaped from the Town, by swimming to the adjacent shores.

The war having thus begun on the part of General Gage's Troops, the country armed and embodied. The re-enforcements from Ireland soon after arrived; a vigorous attack was then made upon the Provincials. In their march, the Troops surrounded the Town of Charlestown, consisting of about four hundred houses, then recently abandoned to escape the fury of a relentless soldiery. Having plundered the houses, they set fire to the Town, and reduced it to ashes. To this wanton waste of property, unknown to civilized nations, they were prompted, the better to conceal their approach under cover of the smoke—a shocking mixture of cowardice and cruelty, which then first tarnished the lustre of the British arms, when aimed at a brother's breast! But, blessed be God, they were restrained from committing further ravages, by the loss of a very considerable part of their Army, including many of their most experienced officers. The loss of the inhabitants was considerable.

Compelled, therefore, to behold thousands of our countrymen imprisoned, and men, women, and children involved in promiscuous and unmerited misery; when we find all faith at an end, and sacred treaties turned into tricks of state; when we perceive our friends and kinsmen massacred, our habitations plundered, our houses in flames, and their once happy inhabitants fed only by the hand of charity, who can blame us for endeavouring to restrain the progress of desolation? Who can censure our repelling the attacks of such a barbarous band? Who, in such circumstances, would not obey the great, the universal, the divine law of self-preservation?

Though vilified as wanting spirit, we are determined to behave like men; though insulted and abused, we wish for reconciliation; though defamed as seditious, we are ready to obey the laws; and though charged with rebellion, will cheerfully bleed in defence of our Sovereign in a righteous cause. What more can we say? What more can we offer?

But we forbear to trouble you with a tedious detail of the various and fruitless offers and applications we have repeatedly made, not for pensions, for wealth, or for honours, but for the humble boon of being permitted to possess the fruits of honest industry, and to enjoy that degree of liberty to which God and the Constitution have given us an undoubted right.

Blessed with an indissoluble union, with a variety of internal resources, and with a firm reliance on the justice of the Supreme Disposer of all human events, we have no doubt of rising superiour to all the machinations of evil and abandoned Ministers. We already anticipate the golden period, when liberty, with all the gentle arts of peace and humanity, shall establish her mild dominion in this Western world, and erect eternal monuments to the memory of those virtuous patriots and martyrs, who shall have fought and bled, and suffered in her cause.

Accept our most grateful acknowledgments for the friendly disposition you have always shown towards us. We know that you are not without your grievances. We sympathize with you in your distress, and are pleased to find that the design of subjugating us has persuaded Administration to dispense to Ireland some vagrant rays of Ministerial sunshine. Even the tender mercies of Government have long been cruel towards you. In the rich pastures of Ireland, many hungry parricides have fed and grown strong to labour in its destruction. We hope the patient abiding of the meek may not always be forgotten; and God grant that the iniquitous schemes of extirpating liberty from the British Empire, may be soon defeated. But we should be wanting to ourselves; we should be perfidious to posterity; we should be unworthy that ancestry from which we derive our descent, should we submit, with folded arms, to military butchery and depredation, to gratify the lordly ambition, or sate the avarice of a British Ministry. In defence of our persons and properties, under actual violation, we have taken up arms; when that violence shall be removed, and hostilities cease on the part of the aggressors, they shall cease on our part also. For the achievement of this happy event, we confide in the good offices of our fellow-subjects beyond the Atlantick. Of their friendly disposition, we do not yet despond; aware, as they must be, that they have nothing more to expect from the same common enemy, than the humble favour of being last devoured.

That the appointment of Provost-Marshal, Wagon-Master, and Master Carpenter, be left to the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, who is to fix their pay, having regard to the pay such receive in the Ministerial Army, and the proportion that the pay of the Officers in said Army bears to the pay of our Officers.

William Tudor, Esquire, was elected Judge Advocate of the Army.

Resolved, That Michael Hillegas and George Clymer, Esquires, be, and they are hereby appointed joint Treasurers of the United Colonies; that the Treasurers reside in Philadelphia, and that they shall give bond, with surety, for the faithful performance of their office, in the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars, to John Hancock, Henry Middleton, John Dickinson, John Alsop, Thomas Lynch, Richard Henry Lee, and James Wilson, Esquires, and the survivor of them, in trust for the United Colonies.

That the proportion or quota of each Colony be determined according to the number of inhabitants, of all ages, including negroes and mulattoes in each Colony; but, as this cannot at present be ascertained, that the quotas of the several Colonies be settled, for the present, as follows, to undergo a revision and correction when the list of each Colony is obtained:

New-Hampshire,	124,069½	Delaware,	37,219½
Massachusetts-Bay,	434,244	Maryland,	310,174½

And that for this end the several Provincial Assemblies or Conventions provide for laying and levying Taxes in their respective Provinces or Colonies, towards sinking the Continental Bills; that the said Bills be received by the Collectors in payment of such taxes, and be by the said Collectors paid into the hands of the Provincial Treasurers, with all such other moneys as they may receive in lieu of the Continental Bills, which other moneys the said Provincial Treasurer shall endeavour to get exchanged for Continental Bills; and where that cannot be done, shall send to the Continental Treasurers the deficiency in silver or gold, with the Bills making up the quota to be sunk in that year, taking care to cut, by a circular punch of an inch diameter, a hole in each Bill, and to cross the same, thereby to render them unpassable, though the sum or value is to remain fairly legible. And the Continental Treasurers, as fast as they receive the said quotas, shall, with the assistance of a Committee of five persons, to be appointed by the Congress, if sitting, or by the Assembly or Convention of the Province of Pennsylvania, examine and count the Continental Bills, and in the presence of the said Committee, burn and destroy them. And the silver and gold sent them to make up the deficiencies of quotas, they shall retain in their hands until demanded in redemption of Continental Bills that may be brought to them for that purpose, which Bills so redeemed, they shall also burn and destroy in presence of the said Committee. And the Treasurers, whenever they have silver or gold in their hands for the redemption of Continental Bills, shall advertise the same, signifying that they are ready to give silver or gold for such Bills, to all persons requiring it in exchange.

The Provincial Treasurers and Collectors are to have such allowances for their respective services, as shall be directed by the several Assemblies or Conventions, to be paid by their respective Province or Colony.

That the Continental Treasurers be allowed for their service this year, five hundred Dollars each.

Resolved, That this Congress will, on Monday next, consider of the state of Trade, after the 10th of next September.

Mr. McKean, from the Committee, reported the form of a Bond to be given by the Continental Treasurers.

Ordered, That the said Committee do inspect into the sufficiency of the Sureties.

Adjourned till Monday, at eight o'clock.

Monday, July 31, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee on the Resolve of the House of Commons, and the same being debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, as follows:

The several Assemblies of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, having referred to the Congress a Resolution of the House of Commons of Great Britain, which Resolution is in these words:

"Lunæ, 20^o Die Feb. 1775.

"The House in a Committee on the American Papers. Motion made, and question proposed:

"That it is the opinion of this Committee, that when the General Council and Assembly, or General Court of any of his Majesty's Provinces or Colonies in America, shall propose to make provision, according to the condition, circumstance, or situation of such Province or Colony, for contributing their proportion to the common defence, (such proportion to be raised under the authority of the General Court, or General Assembly of such Province or Colony, and disposable by Parliament,) and shall engage to make provision also, for the support of the civil Government, and the administration of justice in such Province or Colony, it will be proper, if such proposal shall be approved by His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament, and for so long as such provision shall be made accordingly, to forbear in respect to such Province or Colony, to lay any duty, tax, or assessment, or to impose any farther duty, tax, or assessment, except only such duties as it may be expedient to continue to levy or impose, for the regulation of Commerce; the nett produce or the duties last mentioned, to be carried to the account of such Province or Colony respectively."

The Congress took the said Resolution into consideration, and are thereupon of opinion:

That the Colonies of America are entitled to the sole and exclusive privilege of giving and granting their own money; that this involves a right of deliberating whether they will make any gift, for what purposes it shall be made, and what shall be its amount; and that it is a high breach of this privilege for any body of men, extraneous to their constitutions, to prescribe the purposes for which money shall be levied on them, to take to themselves the authority of judging of their conditions, circumstances, and situations, and of determining the amount of the contribution to be levied.

That as the Colonies possess a right of appropriating their gifts, so are they entitled at all times to inquire into their application, to see that they be not wasted among the venal and corrupt for the purpose of undermining the civil rights of the givers, nor yet be diverted to the support of standing armies, inconsistent with their freedom and subversive of their quiet. To propose, therefore, as this Resolution does, that the moneys given by the Colonies shall be subject to the disposal of Parliament alone, is to propose that they shall relinquish this right of inquiry, and put it in the power of others to render their gifts ruinous, in proportion as they are liberal.

That this privilege of giving or of withholding our moneys, is an important barrier against the undue exertion of prerogative, which, if left altogether without control, may be exercised to our great oppression; and all history shows how efficacious is its intercessions for redress of grievances and re-establishment of rights, and how improvident it would be to part with so powerful a mediator.

We are of opinion that the proposition contained in this Resolution is unreasonable and insidious: unreasonable, because, if we declare we accede to it, we declare without reservation we will purchase the favour of Parliament, not knowing at the same time at what price they will please to estimate their favour. It is insidious, because, individual Colonies having bid and bidden again, till they find the avidity of the seller too great for all their powers to satisfy, are then to return into opposition, divided from their sister Colonies whom the Minister will have previously detached by a grant of easier terms, or by an artful procrastination of a definitive answer.

That the suspension of the exercise of their pretended power of taxation, being expressly made commensurate with the continuance of our gifts, these must be perpetual to make that so. Whereas, no experience has shown that a gift of perpetual revenue secures a perpetual return of duty or of kind disposition. On the contrary, the Parliament itself, wisely attentive to this observation, are in the established practice of granting their Supplies from year to year only.

Desirous and determined as we are, to consider in the most dispassionate view every seeming advance towards a reconciliation made by the British Parliament, let our brethren of Britain reflect what would have been the sacrifice to men of free spirits, had even fair terms been proffered, as these insidious proposals were, with circumstances of insult and defiance. A proposition to give our money, accompanied with large fleets and armies, seems addressed to our fears rather than to our freedom. With what patience would Britons have received articles of treaty from any power on earth when borne on the point of the bayonet by military plenipotentiaries?

We think the attempt unnecessary to raise upon us by force or by threats our proportional contributions to the common defence, when all know, and themselves acknowledge, we have fully contributed whenever called upon to do so in the character of freemen.

We are of opinion it is not just that the Colonies should be required to oblige themselves to other contributions, while Great Britain possesses a monopoly of their trade. This of itself lays them under heavy contribution. To demand, therefore, additional aids in the form of a tax, is to demand the double of their equal proportion; if we are to contribute equally with the other parts of the Empire, let us equally with them enjoy free commerce with the whole world. But while the restrictions on our trade shut to us the resources of wealth, is it just we should bear all other burdens equally with those to whom every resource is open?

We conceive that the British Parliament has no right to intermeddle with our provisions for the support of civil Government or administration of justice. The provisions we have made are such as please ourselves, and are agreeable to our own circumstances; they answer the substantial purposes of Government and of justice, and other purposes than these should not be answered. We do not mean that our people shall be burdened with oppressive taxes, to provide sinecures for the idle or the wicked under colour of providing for a civil list. While Parliament pursue their plan of civil Government within their own jurisdiction, we also hope to pursue ours without molestation.

We are of opinion the proposition is altogether unsatisfactory, because it imports only a suspension of the mode, not a renunciation of the pretended right to tax us. Because, too, it does not propose to repeal the several acts of Parliament passed for the purposes of restraining the Trade, and altering the form of Government of one of our Colonies; extending the boundaries and changing the Government of Quebeck; enlarging the jurisdiction of the Courts of Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty; taking from us the right of trial by a jury of the vicinage, in cases affecting both life and property; transporting us into other countries to be tried for criminal offences; exempting, by mock trial, the murderers of Colonists from punishment; and quartering soldiers on us in times of profound peace. Nor do they renounce the power of suspending our own Legislatures, and for legislating for us themselves in all cases whatsoever. On the contrary, to show they mean no discontinuance of injury, they pass acts at the very time of holding out this proposition, for restraining the Commerce and Fisheries of the Provinces of New-England, and for interdicting the trade of other Colonies with all foreign Nations and with each other. This proves, unequivocally, they mean not to relinquish the exercise of indiscriminate legislation over us.

Upon the whole, this proposition seems to have been held up to the world to deceive it into a belief, that there was nothing in dispute between us but the mode of levying taxes; and that the Parliament having now been so good as to give up this, the Colonies are unreasonable if not perfectly satisfied: Whereas, in truth, our adversaries still claim a right of demanding ad libitum, and of taxing us themselves to the full amount of their demand if we do comply with it. This leaves us without any thing we can call property. But what is of more importance, and what in this proposal they keep out of sight as if no such point was now in contest between us, they claim a right to alter our Charters and establish laws, and leave us without any security for our lives or liberties. The proposition seems also to have been calculated more particularly to lull into fatal security our well-affected fellow-subjects on the other side the water, till time should be given for the operation of those arms which a British Minister pronounced would instantaneously reduce the "cowardly" sons of America to unreserved submission. But when the world reflects how inadequate to justice are these vaunted terms; when it attends to the rapid and bold succession of injuries, which, during the course of eleven years, have been aimed at these Colonies; when it reviews the pacifick and respectful expostulations, which, during that whole time, were the sole arms we opposed to them; when it observes that our complaints were either not heard at all, or were answered with new and accumulated injuries; when it recollects that the Minister himself, on an early occasion, declared "that he would never treat with America till he had brought her to his feet;" and that an avowed partisan of Ministry has more lately denounced against us the dreadful sentence, "delenda est Carthago;" that this was done in the presence of a British Senate, and being unreprieved by them, must be taken to be their own sentiment, (especially as the purpose has already in part been carried into execution,) by their treatment of Boston and burning of Charlestown; when it considers the great armaments with which they have invaded us, and the circumstances of cruelty with which they have commenced and prosecuted hostilities; when these things, we say, are laid together and attentively considered, can the world be deceived into an opinion that we are unreasonable, or can it hesitate to believe with us that nothing but our own exertions may defeat the Ministerial sentence of death or abject submission.

On motion made, Resolved, That Mr. Langdon, Mr. J. Adams, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Deane, Mr. Clinton, Mr. Crane, Doctor Franklin, Mr. Rodney, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Henry, Mr. Hewes, Mr. Gadsden, and Mr. Hall, be a Committee in the recess of Congress to make inquiry in all the Colonies after virgin Lead and Leaden Ore, and the best methods of collecting, smelting, and refining it.

Resolved, That the above named gentlemen be a Committee in the recess of Congress, to inquire into the cheapest and easiest methods of making Salt in these Colonies.

Agreeable to the Order of the Day, the Congress took under consideration the state of Trade after the 10th of September, and after some debate the same was postponed to a future day.

On motion made, Resolved, That when the Congress adjourns for recess, it be adjourned to meet at Philadelphia.

Two Petitions were laid before the Congress respecting disputes between the people of Connecticut and Pennsylvania, on Lands lying on the waters of Susquehanna; and the same being read, Ordered, To lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

Two Petitions, one from sundry Merchants in New-York, and the other from sundry Merchants in Philadelphia, respecting the sale of Teas imported before the Association, were laid before the Congress.

Ordered, To lie on the table.

Adjourned till to-morrow, at eight o'clock.

Tuesday, August 1, 1775.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the sum of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars be immediately forwarded from the Continental Treasury to the Paymaster-General, to be applied to the use of the Army in Massachusetts-Bay, in such manner as General Washington, or the Commander-in-Chief for the time being, by his warrants shall limit and appoint; and if the above sum shall be expended before the next meeting of the Congress, then, that General Washington, or the Commander-in-Chief for the time being, be empowered to draw upon the Continental Treasury, for the sum of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars in favour of the Paymaster-General, to be applied for the use and in the manner above mentioned.

Ordered, That the Delegates for Pennsylvania be a Committee to receive and count the above sum of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and forward the same, under the care of the Delegates of Massachusetts-Bay, provided so much is now ready in the Treasury. If that is not the case, then to receive, count, and forward by the said Delegates what is ready, and the remainder by the first opportunity, in the safest and best manner.

Resolved, That a sum not exceeding One Hundred and Seventy-five Thousand Dollars be paid to the Provincial Convention of New-York, to be applied towards the discharge of the moneys advanced and the debts contracted for the publick service, by the said Provincial Convention and the Committee of Albany, in pursuance of the directions of this Congress; and that the said Provincial Convention account to this Congress at their next meeting for the application of the said money.

Resolved, That the Treasurers be, and they are hereby ordered to pay to the Delegates of the Colony of Connecticut, viz. Eliphalet Dyer, Roger Sherman, and Silas Deane, Esquires, the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars, to be by them paid unto the Governour and Company of the said Colony, in part of the sums by them disbursed in the Continental service; the said Governour and Company to account therefor.

Resolved, That the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars be immediately forwarded from the Continental Treasury to the Paymaster-General, to be applied to the use of the Army in the New-York Department, in such manner as General Schuyler, by his warrant, shall limit and appoint; and that if the above sum shall be expended before the next meeting of Congress, then that General Schuyler, or the Commander-in-Chief for the time being, in that department, be empowered to draw upon the Continental Treasury for a further sum, not exceeding Two Hundred Thousand Dollars, to be applied for the use and in the manner above mentioned.

Resolved, That the sum of Sixteen Thousand Dollars be paid to the Delegates of the Colony of Pennsylvania, in full for the like sum by them borrowed by order of the Congress, on the third of June last, for the use of the Continent.

Resolved, That the sum of Two Hundred and Ninety-Three Dollars be paid to the Delegates of South-Carolina, for the expense and freight of transporting a quantity of Powder from South-Carolina to this place, by order of the Congress.

Resolved, That the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars be placed in the hands of the Delegates of Pennsylvania, or any three of them, for contingent services, and that out of the same be paid the expenses incurred for raising and arming the Rifle Companies, and for Expresses and other small charges, of which the Congress have not been able to procure exact accounts; and that the said Committee do lay before the Congress, at their next meeting, an account of their proceeding in that matter.

Resolved, That out of the Powder belonging to the Continent now in this City, five tons be sent to General Washington, in the speediest and safest manner, by the Delegates of the Colony of Pennsylvania.

That out of the next that arrives, the Delegates of New-Jersey be allowed to purchase one thousand pounds for the use of the western parts of their Colony; and that the Delegates of the lower Counties on Delaware, be allowed to purchase one thousand pounds for the use of said Counties.

That out of the same parcel the quantity of one ton be reserved for North-Carolina, to be lodged in the Magazine of New-York, and delivered to the order of the Speaker of the Assembly, or President of the Convention of North-Carolina, provided the necessity of General Washington and General Schuyler will admit.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Petitions respecting the disputes between the people of Connecticut and Pennsylvania, and after some debate,

Resolved, That the farther consideration of this matter be referred to the next meeting of this Congress.

The Congress having reconsidered a Resolve passed the 11th July, respecting the employing of fifty Hussars, Resolved, That the Delegates of this Province be desired not to proceed in executing said Resolve; and if any Hussars are engaged or enlisted, to discharge the same; and that the said Delegates settle and pay any expenses already incurred in consequence of the former Resolve, and report their proceeding to the Congress at their next meeting.

Whereas, at a former Congress it was resolved, that if certain Acts of Parliament, in the Continental Association enumerated and complained of, should not be repealed on or before the tenth day of September, 1775, the inhabitants of these United Colonies would not, directly or indirectly, export any Merchandise or commodity whatsoever to Great Britain, Ireland, or the West-Indies; and as some doubts have arisen with respect to the true spirit and construction of said Resolve, to the end that such doubts may be removed:

Resolved, That under the prohibition, in the said Association contained, to export to, or import from the Islands of Great Britain and Ireland, this Congress intends to comprise all exportation to, or importation from the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, and every European Island and Settlement within the British Dominions; and that under the denomination of the West-Indies, this Congress means to comprehend all the West-India Islands, British and foreign, to whatever State, Power, or Prince belonging, or by whomsoever governed, and also the Summer Islands, Bahama Islands, Berbicia and Surinam on the Main, and every Island and Settlement within the latitude of the southern line of Georgia and the equator.

Adjourned to Tuesday, the fifth day of September next.

OF THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE FOURTH SERIES.

CORRESPONDENCE, PROCEEDINGS, ETC.

1775.
March	Letter from the General Committee of Charlestown, S. C. to the New-York Committee, expressing their disapprobation of the course pursued by the Assembly of New-York, and their determination to adhere to the Resolutions of the Continental Congress at all hazards, -	1
	Instructions from the Freeholders of Cumberland County, Virginia, to John Mayo and Wm. Fleming, their Delegates in the Assembly, -	3
1,	Address of New-York Committee to the Freeholders and Freemen of the City and County of New-York, recommending the choice of Delegates to the Continental Congress, -	4
	Address to the Soldiers ordered to embark from Ireland for America, -	4
	Address to the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, on the policy of the Ministry in regard to America, advising the repeal of the Acts which have produced the present disturbances, -	5
1,	Meeting of the Governour and Council of North-Carolina. The proposed meeting of a Provincial Congress at Newbern in April declared to be highly derogatory to the dignity of the Legislature appointed to meet at the same time, -	7
1,	Proclamation of Governour Martin. The proposed Provincial Congress is contrary to law, and a violation of the Constitution. All good subjects are exhorted to discourage such meetings, cabals, and illegal proceedings, -	7
Feb. 22,	Camillus to the Printers of the Pennsylvania Gazette, in reply to a Boston writer, who charges the Americans with having an entire independence on the Mother Country in view, -	8
March	Camillus to the Printers of the Pennsylvania Gazette, in defence of the course pursued by the Americans in their opposition to the measures of the British Government, -	10
1,	Resolutions of the Committee of Inspection for Newport, Rhode-Island. A Free Press, while it supports truth, liberty and justice, to be supported — when it is prostituted to vile purposes is to be discountenanced and discouraged. All persons advised to discountinue Rivington's Gazetteer, -	12
2,	Letter from a Gentleman in London to his Friend in Boston. Lord North has no further conciliatory measures to propose. When the Colonies come to an unconditional submission, the repeal of the Bills of last year will be considered, -	13
2,	Committee of Essex County, Virginia, acquit Captain Joseph Richardson of an intentional violation of the Association. They offer a Premium to encourage Arts and Manufactures in the Colony, -	13
2,	Remarks on the late manœuvres in America, by a real Friend to his King and Country. Virginia and Maryland condemned for joining with so much warmth the New-England Republicans, -	14
2,	Address to the Inhabitants of New-York, on the application of publick moneys to secret service in America by the British Government, -	15
2,	Tea burnt at Providence, Rhode-Island, -	15

March	Letter from Samuel Adams to a Gentleman in Virginia, acknowledging receipt of Donations for the Poor of Boston, -	16
2,	General Gage and the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts; collision probable. Withholding Supplies from the Troops by the People justified, -	16
2,	Address to the Inhabitants of Massachusetts-Bay, No. 5, from the County of Hampshire. On the rights of the Colonies, -	18
2,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in New-York. Reports there, that New-York was disaffected to the common cause, discredited, -	24
2,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Philadelphia. The Government will persist in their measures against the Colonies. New-York is to be a place of Arms, and Provisions are to be provided there for the support of the Army in New-England, -	25
3,	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to the Governour of Georgia. Laments that the People of Georgia, hitherto so loyal, have manifested a disposition to join the other Colonies. The Lords of the Admiralty have before them a Bill for the Collection of His Majesty's Quit-Rents, -	26
3,	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to the Governours of the several Colonies. The great majorities in both Houses upon every question for maintaining the supremacy of Parliament in the Colonies, shows there will not be the least relaxation from those measures, -	26
3,	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to Deputy-Governour Penn. Has received his Despatch of January 30, and laid it before the King, -	26
Feb. 22,	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to the Governours of the Colonies, enclosing the joint Address of both Houses of Parliament, of the 7th February, to the King, with his Answer. Also the Bill for restraining the Fisheries, and the Resolution offered in the House of Commons on the 20th of February, -	26
March	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to the Governours of the Colonies. The King wishes to see a reconciliation of the differences with the Colonies, without prejudice to the just authority of Parliament, which he will never suffer to be violated. The Colonies bound to contribute their just proportions of the publick burdens of the Nation in return for the protection and support they have received. The King entirely approves of the Resolution of the House of Commons of 27th February, and expects a compliance therewith on the part of the Colonies. He will resist with firmness every attempt to violate rights of Parliament, Copy of the Resolution adopted by the House of Commons, on the 27th of February, referred to in the foregoing Letter, -	28
3,	Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to the Governour of New-York. His separate Despatch of this date may be ostensibly of use, in case the Assembly should consider the Resolution of 27th February. It is not the King's intention that it shall be officially communicated to the Assembly, but he depends upon the ability and address of Lieutenant-Governour Colden

to induce a compliance on the part of the Assembly, - - - - -	29
March Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to Lieutenant-Governour Colden. His Despatch of the 1st of February has been received. The sentiments of duty to the King and wishes of a reconciliation, so fully expressed in the Addresses of the Council and Assembly, have been very graciously received by His Majesty, - - - - -	29
4, Letter from London to a Gentleman in New-York. The conduct of New-York has filled every heart with joy. The Resolution of Lord North, of February 27, which is founded on the truest principle of policy and benevolence, will be outrageously censured and traduced by the Opposition. By this measure Parliament gives a proof that while it sends forth the sword of justice to punish the factious, it extends also friendly proposals to invite the good citizens to peace and reconciliation, - - - - -	29
4, Meeting of the Committee of Chowan County, North-Carolina. Premiums offered for the encouragement of Manufactures, - - - - -	30
4, Letter from John Sullivan to Mr. Fowle, enclosing the Articles of Association of the Military Company of Durham, New-Hampshire, - - - - -	31
Remarks on Mr. Sullivan's Letter. The extraordinary spirit to acquire the use of Arms at this time of civil discords, marks strongly a disposition to employ our Arms against the Government, - - - - -	32
Mr. Sullivan's Reply, - - - - -	32
6, Address of the Committee of Norfolk to the Freemen of Virginia, on the conduct of John Brown, in importing Slaves in violation of the Continental Association, - - - - -	33
6, Committee of Observation for Baltimore prohibit the landing of Salt imported in violation of the Continental Association, - - - - -	34
6, Committee of Cumberland County, New-Jersey, break off all dealings with Silas Newcomb, a Member of the Committee, who has drank East-India Tea in his family ever since the 1st day of March, instant, in violation of the Continental Association, - - - - -	34
Recantation of Silas Newcomb, which is accepted by the Committee, - - - - -	34
6, Committee of Observation and Inspection for Freehold, New-Jersey, declare James Rivington, of New-York, Printer, a malignant enemy to the liberties of this Country, for his attempts to disunite the Colonies, - - - - -	35
6, Letter from Major Benjamin Floyd, of Brookhaven, Suffolk County, New-York, to Mr. Rivington, in reply to some Resolutions adopted by a Committee at Smithtown, on the 23d of February, - - - - -	36
6, Meeting of the People of Danvers. Officers chosen for an Alarm List Company, - - - - -	37
6, Reflections on the present state of affairs in America. The Americans will be compelled to follow the example of the United Provinces, and publish a Manifesto to the world, showing the necessity of dissolving their connection with Great Britain, - - - - -	37
6, Oration delivered at the request of the Inhabitants of Boston, to commemorate the bloody tragedy of the 5th of March, 1770, by Doctor Joseph Warren, - - - - -	38
6, Address to the Inhabitants of New-York against the recommendation of the Committee to elect Delegates, - - - - -	44
6, Address to the Inhabitants of the City of New-York. The method proposed by the Committee for the nomination of Delegates extremely exceptionable, - - - - -	44
6, Address to the respectable Inhabitants of the City of New-York against the election of Delegates to the Continental Congress. The Proceedings of the late Congress were violent and treasonable. One of their Members (Sullivan) guilty of open treason in the broad face of day. Deputies to a Provincial Congress ought not to be chosen. In the other Colonies Provincial Congresses are closing the Courts of Justice, wresting the Troops out of the King's hands, and enlisting Minute-Men to annihilate his just and legal authority, - - - - -	44

1775.

March Address to the Publick, in answer to the foregoing, - - - - -	46
7, Affidavit of John Graham, Clerk to Robert and John Murray, owners of the Ship Beulah. The Ship left the watering place at Staten Island yesterday, and passed the Light-house at eight o'clock this morning. Does not believe any boat was employed to land any Goods from the vessel, - - - - -	48

8, Another account of the Proceedings and of the Meeting on Monday. The friends of constitutional liberty disapprove of the measures. They proposed the postponement of all action until after the adjournment of the Assembly and the arrival of the Packet from England. The Committee, in recommending the choice of Delegates, exceeded their powers, and at the Meeting held on Monday, at their request, it was impossible to determine on which side the majority was, - - - - -	49
8, Meeting of the New-York Committee. Philip Livingston and John Jay appointed to inquire of Mr. Rivington on what authority he made a false and groundless statement in his Paper, Mr. Livingston and Mr. Jay, March 13, report to the Committee that Mr. Rivington says he made the statement on common rumour, but will be more careful for the future, - - - - -	50

The Crisis, No. 9. To the King, - - - - -	73
7, Letter from Charlestown, S. C., to a Gentleman in London. This Province cannot long subsist without a Free Trade. Before the Non-Exportation Scheme took effect there was a lively Commerce here; now the temper of the People is soured, and their fortunes consuming fast, for want of Trade. It is the wish of the wise and the sober that a speedy reconciliation may be effected, - - - - -	76
7, Meeting of the Committee of Princess Anne County, Virginia. CORRESPONDENCE, PROCEEDINGS, ETC.

March	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Virginia. The measures of the Government are calculated to render the Colonies independent. The London Merchants not zealous in the cause of America; those of Glasgow sent up a spirited Petition, but at the same time let it be known that they did not mean any opposition by it, but only to get credit in America. Bribes,

March	Address of two hundred and twenty-seven Inhabitants of Anson County, North-Carolina, to Governour Martin, - - -	115
	Address of one hundred and ninety-five Inhabitants of Rowan and Surry Counties, North-Carolina, to Governour Martin, - - -	116
	Address of one hundred and sixteen Inhabitants of Guilford County, North-Carolina, to Governour Martin, - - -	117
10,	Declaration of the Inhabitants of Brookhaven, Suffolk County, New-York. They had been deceived by Major Benjamin Floyd, when they signed the Petition to the Assembly; declare their disapprobation of the Petition, - - -	117
11,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Philadelphia. The plan of the Ministry is to divide and govern, by the advantages now held out to New-York, North-Carolina and Georgia. The passage of the late Acts may be attributed to the defection of the New-York Assembly. Let the Americans be united, and they will succeed; if they divide, they will be irretrievably ruined, - - -	118
11,	Letter from London, received in Philadelphia. The Colonies should give no credit to pacific Proposals of the Ministry, unless accompanied by a total disavowal of all their unconstitutional claims. The late Resolves of New-York have been very grateful to the Ministry, and have afforded them great triumph and exultation. The cause of the Americans is not a favourite cause in England, the majority are against them; there is a large minority in their favour. Publick subscriptions have been commenced for the Sufferers in Boston, and some handsome sums have been subscribed, - - -	118
11,	Orange County, Virginia, Committee, acquit Francis Moore, Jun., of an intentional violation of the Continental Association, - - -	120
12,	Letter from Boston to a Gentleman in New-York. Disturbance occasioned by the British Officers on the delivery of Dr. Warren's Oration. Ditson, by order of the British Officers, tarred and feathered, placed on a truck and exhibited through the City, and to add to the insult they played Yankee Doodle after him, - - -	120
13,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Virginia. Lord Dunmore, in a Letter to the Earl of Dartmouth, has recommended that some Men-of-War should be stationed in the Chesapeake, to prevent Virginia from carrying on any Trade with England; and advises the adoption of measures to distress the People, as the most certain way to bring about submission, - - -	121
13,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Maryland. Lord North's motion was only calculated to divide the Colonies from each other—the Ministry are already pleased with their success in this way, by the Proceedings at New-York. It will now be tried what materials the Americans are made of; if they have not virtue to withstand the present policy of the Ministry they will become a laughing stock to the world. Their salvation depends upon their firmness and union, - - -	121
13,	Letter from London to a Gentleman in Philadelphia. The City of London and the great trading and manufacturing Towns are averse to the present measures. The Ministry see the dangers of their undertaking, but are encouraged to the attempt by a firm persuasion of success in corrupting New-York, and intimidating New-England. Did they believe the Americans would be united and firm they would not venture upon coercive measures. By whatever means the Assembly of New-York can be kept from deserting, even by outbidding the Ministry, it will be worth the purchase, - - -	122

- March* Letter from a Gentleman in Harford County, Maryland, to a friend in Philadelphia. A total revolution in the Magistracy of the Province expected. Nine of the oldest and best Magistrates have been dismissed, and eleven others appointed, some of whom are well known for their opposition to every measure adopted for the preservation of American Freedom. No reason was alleged for this violent insult, which was brought about by a contemptible junto in Baltimore Town, who are inimical to the rights of America, - - - 124

17,	Address to the Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress of Virginia, by Charles Lee. 1775.

March Letter from Samuel Adams to Richard Henry
21, Lee. Virginia from the beginning of the contest has distinguished herself in the cause of American Liberty: the People of Massachusetts, with some few exceptions, are firm and united. 22, Letter from Dr. Wheelock to Governour Trumbull. There are reports of an invasion from Canada, and the Indians, if not secured in our interests, will likely join on the other side. Several of their children, from some of the most respectable tribes, are now at the Seminary, (Dartmouth,) and may be considered hostages; Mr. Dean, now among them, will probably bring more; this connection is our surest bulwark against an invasion,	210

23, Letter from New-York to John Dickinson; reviewing and condemning his political conduct,	211

25, Letter from Essex, New-Jersey, to D. C. The late news from England has strengthened the union of the Colonies. Not more than three Towns in the four New-England Provinces opposed to the measures of the Congress; in New-Jersey and the Southern Provinces the opposition is as small. 29, Letter from J. Brown to the Committee of Correspondence at Boston. The Canadians appear to be quite friendly towards the Colonies, but there is no prospect of Canada sending Delegates to the Continental Congress. The Fort at Ticonderoga must be seized should hostilities be commenced by the King's Troops; the People on the New-Hampshire Grants have engaged to do this business, and they are the most proper persons for the job,	243

3,	Letter from Dr. Joseph Warren to Arthur Lee. America must, and will be free. The contest may be severe. The end will be glorious. 1775.	Condemn the conduct of Lord Dunmore in regard to the Powder. Justify Patrick Henry in demanding satisfaction for it; as, in their opinion, the violent proceedings of the Troops in Massachusetts would have justified reprisals of a much greater magnitude.	667

1775.	May 23, Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to Governour Tryon. The King received the Petition of the New-York Assembly with the most gracious expressions of regard. 23,	Letter from a Committee of the Assembly of Connecticut to the Speaker. The New-York Committee will supply Provisions to the Connecticut Forces at Ticonderoga. St. Luke La Corne has sent Belts to all the Northern Tribes of Indians, to engage them to take up Arms against the New-England Colonies. Lebanon 18th June 1775

In my Letter of the 7th instant, you are informed of my having your favour of the 27th of June, and of the proceedings of our Assembly on its contents, and on the earnest request of the Massachusetts Congress to augment our Troops in the public Service. — In our hurry it was omitted, that near the ending of the session, It was Resolved That two Vessels of a suitable Burden be immediately fitted out, Armed, and furnished, with Officers, Men, and necessary Warlike Stores, for Defence of the Sea Coasts in this Colony, under the care and direction of the Governor and Committee of Council.

I have further to express, The great pleasure and Satisfaction it gives me to find that my endeavours to serve the common cause of our bleeding Country in this day of unnatural Darkness, meets the approbation of the Honorable General Congress of these united Colonies. — I am sensible that care and Zeal for Defence of American Liberty, attracts the attention and regard of the Honorable Members of that august Body, whose Wisdom and Prudence & Patience, Time and Labours are exercised and employed for its security. — I do most sincerely thank them for their kind Wishes. — Who of us can wish to live in a Land where Virtue may not dwell? — On that solemn Day in which you have called the Inhabitants of all the English Colonies on this Continent, to Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer, may the Almighty and most merciful Governor of the World, hear the Voice of His People, and His Ears be attentive to the Voice of their Supplications — redeem them from all their iniquities; — grant an Answer of Peace; — And convince our Enemies of their ^{mis}measures, of their injurious and vain attempts, to deprive us and unborn Millions of that inestimable Heavenly Gift of Freedom and Liberty. —

The Prosperity and Happiness of our Country justly demands the utmost exertion of all my Abilities.

Wishing you all, Divine Wisdom, Direction and Influence, with an happy Union and Success.

I am, with great Truth and Regard

Sir — Your, and the Honorable Congress, most Obedient, and most humble Servant

John Trumbull

Honorable President Hancock
